Application of Proposed Original Issue Discount Regulations to Foreign Currency Denominated Debt Instruments

Announcement 86–92

The Internal Revenue Service today clarified the application of the proposed original issue discount regulations to debt instruments with payments denominated in a foreign currency.

The Service stated that it was not intended that the rules contained in proposed Treas. Reg. §1.1275-4 be applied to lending transactions merely because some or all of the payments are denominated in or determined by reference to the value of one or more foreign currencies. The Service is actively considering the application of the original issue discount rules to foreign currency borrowings and solicits the comments of interested practitioners and taxpayers.

Announcement of the Disbarment, Suspension, or Consent to Voluntary Suspension of Attorneys, Certified Public Accountants, Enrolled Agents and Enrolled Actuaries from Practice Before the Internal Revenue Service

Under 31 Code of Federal Regulations, Part 10, an attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary, in order to avoid the institution or conclusion of a proceeding for his disbarment or suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service, may offer his consent to suspension from such practice. This announcement will appear in the weekly Bulletin at the earliest practicable date after such action and will continue to appear in the weekly Bulletin for five successive weeks or for as many weeks as is practicable for each attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary so suspended and will later be consolidated and published in the Cumulative Bulletin.

Statement of Principles of Internal Revenue Tax Administration

The function of the Internal Revenue Service is to administer the Internal Revenue Code. Tax policy for raising revenue is determined by Congress.

With this in mind, it is the duty of the Service to carry out that policy by correctly applying the laws enacted by Congress; to determine the reasonable meaning of various Code provisions in light of the Congressional purpose in enacting them; and to perform this work in a fair and impartial manner, with neither a government nor a taxpayer point of view.

At the heart of administration is interpretation of the Code. It is the responsibility of each person in the Service, charged with the duty of interpreting the law, to try to find the true meaning of the statutory provision and not to adopt a strained construction in the belief that he or she is "protecting the revenue." The revenue is properly protected only when we ascertain and apply the true meaning of the statute.

The Service also has the responsibility of applying and administering the law in a reasonable, practical manner. Issues should only be raised by examining officers when they have merit, never arbitrarily or for trading purposes. At the same time, the examining officer should never hesitate to raise a meritorious issue. It is also important that care be exercised not to raise an issue or to ask a court to adopt a position inconsistent with an established Service position.

Administration should be both reasonable and vigorous. It should be conducted with as little delay as possible and with great courtesy and considerateness. It should never try to overreach, and should be reasonable within the bounds of law and sound administration. It should, however, be vigorous in requiring compliance with law and it should be relentless in its attack on unreal tax devices and fraud.

Introduction

The Internal Revenue Bulletin is the authoritative instrument of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for announcing official rulings and procedures of the Internal Revenue Service and for publishing Treasury Decisions, Executive Orders, Tax Conventions, legislation, court decisions, and other items of general interest. It is published weekly and may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. Bulletin contents of a permanent nature are consolidated semiannually into Cumulative Bulletins, which are sold on a single-copy basis.

It is the policy of the Service to publish in the Bulletin all substantive rulings necessary to promote a uniform application of the tax laws, including all rulings that supersede, revoke, modify, or amend any of those previously published in the Bulletin. All published rulings apply retroactively unless otherwise indicated. Procedures relating solely to matters of internal management are not published; however, statements of internal practices and procedures that affect the rights and duties of taxpayers are published.

Revenue rulings represent the conclusions of the Service on the application of the law to the pivotal facts stated in the revenue ruling. In those based on positions taken in rulings to taxpayers or technical advice to Service field offices, identifying details and information of a confidential nature are deleted to prevent unwarranted invasions of privacy and to comply with statutory requirements.

Rulings and procedures reported in the Bulletin do not have the force and effect of Treasury Department Regulations, but they may be used as precedents. Unpublished rulings will not be relied on, used, or cited as precedents by Service personnel in the disposition of other cases. In applying published rulings and procedures, the effect of subsequent legislation, regulations, court decisions, rulings, and procedures must be considered, and Service personnel and others concerned are cautioned against reaching the same conclusions in other cases unless the facts and circumstances are substantially the same.

The Bulletin is divided into four parts as follows:

Part I.—1954 Code.

This part includes rulings and decisions based on provisions of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

Part II.—Treaties and Tax Legislation.

This part is divided into two subparts as follows: Subpart A, Tax Conventions, and Subpart B, Legislation and Related Committee Reports.

Part III.—Administrative, Procedural, and Miscellaneous.

To the extent practicable, pertinent cross references to these subjects are contained in the other Parts and Subparts.

Part IV.—Items of General Interest.

With the exception of the disbarment and suspension list included in this part, none of these announcements is consolidated in the Cumulative Bulletins.

The first Bulletin for each month includes an index for the matters published during the preceding month. These monthly indexes are cumulated on a quarterly and semiannual basis, and are published in the first Bulletin of the succeeding quarterly and semi-annual period, respectively.

The Bulletin Index-Digest System, a research and reference service supplementing the Bulletin, may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. It consists of four Services: Service No. 1, Income Tax; Service No. 2, Estate and Gift Taxes; Service No. 3, Employment Taxes; Service No. 4, Excise Taxes. Each Service consists of a basic volume and a cumulative supplement that provide (1) finding lists of items published in the Bulletin, (2) digests of revenue rulings, revenue procedures, and other published items, and (3) indexes of Public Laws, Treasury Decisions, and Tax Conventions.

The contents of this publication are not copyrighted and may be reprinted freely. A citation of the Internal Revenue Bulletin as the source would be appropriate.

Part I. Rulings and Decisions Under the Internal Revenue Code of 1954

Section 274.—Disallowance of certain entertainment, etc., expenses

26 CFR 1.274-5T: Substantiation requirements (temporary).

Qualified nonpersonal use vehicles. Guidelines are set forth to determine whether a pickup truck or van meets the definition of a "qualified nonpersonal use vehicle."

Rev. Rul. 86-97

SECTION 1. PURPOSE

The purpose of this revenue ruling is to set forth guidelines for determining when the Internal Revenue Service will recognize certain specially modified pickup trucks or vans as "qualified nonpersonal use vehicles" for purposes of section 1.274-5T(k)(7) of the Temporary Income Tax Regulations. If these guidelines are met, gross income will not include the value of the use by an employee of the employer's "qualified nonpersonal use vehicle."

SEC. 2. BACKGROUND

Section 132(a)(3) of the Code provides that gross income shall not include any fringe benefit which qualifies as a working condition fringe.

Section 132(d) of the Code defines a "working condition fringe" as any property or services provided to an employee of the employer to the extent that, if the employee paid for such property or services, such payment would be allowable as a deduction under section 162 or 167.

Section 1.132-5T(h) of the Temporary Income Tax Regulations provides that 100 percent of the value of the use of a qualified nonpersonal use vehicle (as described in section 1.274-5T(k)) is excluded from gross income as a working condition fringe benefit, if in the case of a vehicle described in paragraph (k)(3) through (7) of section 1.274-5T, the use of the vehicle conforms to the requirements of that paragraph.

Section 274(d) of the Code provides, in part, that a deduction incurred with respect to "listed property" (as defined in section 280F(d)(4)) will be disallowed unless substantiated by adequate records or sufficient corroborative evidence. Listed property generally includes any passenger automobile or any other property used as a means of transportation. Section 274(d) does not apply to any qualified nonpersonal use vehicle as defined in section 274(i).

Section 274(i) of the Code provides that the term "qualified nonpersonal use vehicle" means any vehicle which, by reason of its nature, is not likely to be used more than a de minimis amount for personal purposes.

Section 1.274-5T(k)(1) of the regulations excepts a "qualified nonpersonal use vehicle" from the substantiation requirements of section 274(d) of the Internal Revenue Code.

Section 1.274-5T(k)(2) of the regulations provides that for purposes of section 274(d) of the Code and the regulations the term "qualified nonpersonal use vehicle" means any vehicle which, by reason of its nature (that is, design), is not likely to be used more than a de minimis amount for personal purposes.

Section 1.274-5T(k)(2)(ii)(C) of the regulations provides that any vehicle designed to carry cargo with a loaded gross vehicle weight over 14,000 pounds is a qualified nonpersonal use vehicle.

Section 1.274-5T(k)(7) of the regulations provides that the substantiation requirements of section 274(d) of the Code will not apply to any pickup truck or van only if it has been specially modified with the result that it is not likely to be used more than a de minimis amount for personal purposes.

The exception from the substantiation requirements of section 274(d) of the Code and the exclusion from gross income as a working condition fringe benefit under section 132 apply to the use of a qualified nonpersonal use vehicle because of its design and not because of the nature of the employee's services (such as being on 24-hour call).

SEC. 3. GUIDELINES

.01 A pickup truck with a loaded gross vehicle weight not over 14,000 pounds is a qualified nonpersonal use vehicle if it falls into one of the following two categories:

1. The vehicle is clearly marked with permanently affixed decals or with special painting or other advertising associated with the employer's trade, business, or function and is equipped with at least one of the following: a hydraulic lift gate, permanently installed tanks or drums, permanently installed side boards or panels materially raising the level of the sides of the bed of the pickup truck, or other heavy equipment, such as an electric generator, welder, boom, or crane used to tow automobiles and other vehicles.

2. The vehicle is clearly marked with permanently affixed decals or with special painting or other advertising associated with the employer's trade, business, or function, is actually used primarily for transporting a particular type of load other than over the public highway in connection with a construction, manufacturing, processing, farming, mining, drilling, timbering, or other similar operation, and has been specially designed or modified to a significant degree for such use.

.02 A van with a loaded gross vehicle weight not over 14,000 pounds is a qualified nonpersonal use vehicle if it is clearly marked with permanently affixed decals or with special painting or other advertising associated with the employer's trade, business, or function, it has a seat only for the driver or the driver and one other person, and either permanent shelving has been installed that fills most of the cargo area or the cargo area is open and the van constantly (during both working and nonworking hours) carries merchandise, material, or equipment used in the employer's trade, business, or function.

SEC. 4. APPLICATION

.01 As stated in Sec. 3 above, the Internal Revenue Service will recognize a pickup truck as a qualified nonpersonal use vehicle for purposes of section 1.274-5T(k)(7) of the regulations if the pickup truck meets either of the two categories in Sec. 3.01 of this revenue ruling. Similarly, the Service will recognize a van as a qualified nonpersonal use vehicle if the van meets Sec. 3.02 of this revenue ruling. In such cases, the exception from the substantiation requirements of section 274(d) of the Code and the exclusion from gross income as a working condition fringe benefit under section 132 apply to the employee's use of the qualified nonpersonal use vehicle.

.02 A pickup truck or van that does not meet the criteria in Sec. 3 of this revenue ruling may still be a qualified nonpersonal use vehicle if, based upon the particular facts, it satisfies requirements similar to those of this revenue ruling. In such cases, the taxpayer should contact the local district director for further guidance.

.03 The vehicles described in Sec. 3 of this revenue ruling are those owned or leased by employers, including governmental units or any agency or instrumentality thereof.

SEC. 5. EFFECTIVE DATE

For purposes of both sections 132(a)(3) and 274(d) of the Code, this ruling is effective for vehicle use occurring on or after January 1, 1985.

Section 501.—Exemption From Tax On Corporations, Certain Trusts, Etc.

26 CFR 1.501(c)(4)–1: Civic organizations and local associations of employees. (Also Sections 1.501(c)(6)–1.)

Qualification; individual practice association. An individual practice association that provides health services through written agreements with health maintenance organizations does not qualify for exemption from federal income tax as a social welfare organization under section 501(c)(4) of the Code or as a business league under section 501(c)(6).

Rev. Rul. 86–98

ISSUE

Does the individual practice association described below qualify for exemption from federal income tax as a social welfare organization under section 501(c)(4) of the Internal Revenue Code or as a business league under section 501(c)(6)?

FACTS

M, a nonprofit membership corporation, is an individual practice association (IPA) described in section 1302(5) of the Health Maintenance Organization Act of 1973, 42 U.S.C.A. section 300e–1(5) (1982). M's stated purpose is to arrange for the delivery of health services through written agreements negotiated with health maintenance organizations (HMOs).

M's membership is limited to licensed physicians who are engaged in the active practice of medicine and who are members of a specified county medical society. The activities of M are managed by an executive committee which is elected by the membership of M. The bylaws of M require that a majority of the executive committee be members of M.

M's members generally maintain a private medical practice in addition to performing services for M. All members are required to enter into written service contracts with M which provide:

(1) that the members shall provide their professional services to HMO patients in accordance with a compensation arrangement negotiated between M and the HMOs.

(2) that the members shall, to the extent feasible, share medical and other records, equipment, and professional, technical, and administrative staff, and

(3) that the members will limit referrals of HMO patients, to the extent feasible, to other participating members.

M's primary activities are to serve as a bargaining agent for its members in dealing with HMOs, and to perform the administrative claims services required by the agreements negotiated with the HMOs. M is paid a capitation amount by each HMO based on the number of HMO subscribers entitled to receive medical services. Members bill M for services rendered to the HMO subscribers and accept claims payment for M as payment for services rendered. Members agree to reimbursement by M on a fee-for-service basis according to a fee schedule established by the board of directors of M. The fee schedule reflects the usual customary fees charged by the member-physicians in their private medical practice.

M initially pays its members eighty-five percent of the amount stated in the fee schedule. The remaining fifteen percent is credited to the account of each member on M's books. At the end of each year, the difference between what M has received from the HMOs and what it has paid out to members and for administrative costs is paid to the members in proportion to the amounts credited in their accounts. If the amounts received by M from the HMOs, less administrative costs, are not sufficient to pay the total amounts billed by its members, the members have no further recourse. Members may look to patients for payment only for services not covered by the contracts between M and the HMOs. M has made no provisions for waiving the medical fees charged to patients who are unable to pay for services not covered by the contracts between M and the HMOs.

M's income is derived from its contracts with HMOs and its expenditures are for administrative costs and payments to its members.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 501(c)(4) of the Code provides for the exemption from federal income tax of civic leagues or organizations not organized for profit but operated exclusively for the promotion of social welfare.

Section 1.501(c)(4)–1(a)(2)(i) of the Income Tax Regulations provides that an organization is operated exclusively for the promotion of social welfare if it is primarily engaged in promoting in some way the common good and general welfare of the community. An organization embraced within this section is one that is operated primarily for the purpose of bringing about civic betterments and social improvements.

Section 501(c)(6) of the Code provides for the exemption of business leagues, not organized for profit and no part of the net earnings of which inures to the benefit of any private shareholder or individual.

Section 1.501(c)(6)–1 of the Regulations provides that a business league is an association of persons having some common business interest, the purpose of which is to promote such common interest and not to engage in a regular business of a kind ordinarily carried on for profit. Thus, its activities should be directed to the improvement of business conditions of one or more lines of business as distinguished from the performance of particular services for individual persons.

The main functions of M are to provide an available pool of physicians who will abide by its fee schedule when rendering medical services to the subscribers of an HMO, and to provide its members with access to a large group of patients, the HMO subscribers, who generally may not be referred to nonmember-physicians. M negotiates contracts on behalf of its members with various HMOs, administers the claims received from its members, and pays them according to its reimbursement agreement. These facts indicate that M is akin to a billing and collection service, and a collective bargaining representative negotiating on behalf of its member-physicians with HMOs. In addition, M does not provide to HMO patients access to medical care which would not have been available but for the establishment of M, nor does it provide such care at fees below what is customarily and reasonably charged by members in their private practices.

Thus, M operates in a manner similar to organizations carried on for profit, and its primary beneficiaries are its member-physicians rather than the community as a whole. See Rev. Rul. 75-199, 1975-1 C.B. 160, and the authorities cited therein, and Rev. Rul. 81-58, 1981-1 C.B. 331, which provides examples of mutual, self-interest organizations that do not qualify for exemption under section 501(c)(4) of the Code. Accordingly, M is not operated exclusively for the promotion of social welfare within the meaning of section 501(c)(4).

In addition, because the billing and collection services provide an economy or convenience to M's members relating to the operation of their private medical practices, M is primarily performing particular services for its members. See Rev. Rul. 71-175, 1971-1 C.B. 153. Thus, the organization is rendering particular services for individual persons as distinguished from the improvement of business conditions in the medical profession and public health area generally. Membership in the organization is restricted to physicians who are subject to M's written service contract. Thus, M does not better conditions for all physicians in a particular community, but, instead, is devoted to maximizing fees for its members. See National Muffler Dealers Association, Inc. v. U.S., 440 U.S. 472 (1979). Therefore, M is not operated as a business league within the meaning of section 1.501(c)(6)-1 of the regulations.

Rev. Rul. 86-99

ISSUE

For federal estate tax purposes, how is farmland valued if the farmland is used in conjunction with a grazing permit on nearby federal land?

FACTS

Situation 1.

A, a United States citizen, died in 1984. At the time of A's death, A had owned and operated a ranch for more than six years. The ranching operation consisted of two parcels of grazing land. One parcel was owned by A in fee simple. The other parcel was owned by the Federal Government and was used by A under a federal grazing permit issued by a federal agency.

The permit enables the owner of A's ranch to graze a specified number of animals on the federal parcel for five months of each year. The two parcels have been used as a single integrated ranching unit for many years. The grazing permit had been renewed periodically by the Federal Government, although the government retained the discretion to refuse to renew the permit. The grazing permit specifies the permissible uses of the grazing land and will remain in effect for A's heirs during the remaining term of the permit after A's death. Although the federal statutes that authorize grazing permits state that such permits do not create any right, title, or interest in federal lands, in many cases grazing permits are continually renewed and remain a valuable asset that enhance the value of nearby farmland. When farmland is sold, the owner waives any grazing rights attributable to such farmland; however, the purchaser generally takes into consideration the existence of the grazing permit in determining the purchase price of the farmland, because a purchaser who otherwise qualifies generally will be able to obtain a new grazing permit.

The annual fees paid to the Federal Government under the grazing permit as of A's death are less than the rates that would be paid for grazing rights on comparable land between unrelated individuals in an arm's length commercial transaction. Consequently, the grazing permit represents a valuable right to A and to A's heirs.

As of A's death, the fair market value of the parcel of farmland owned by A was $800,000. This value represents the price at which the parcel would sell between a hypothetical willing buyer and seller in an arm's length transaction. The $800,000 price is based in part on the fact that a buyer of A's parcel would expect to be able to obtain renewals of the grazing permit on the nearby federally owned parcel on the same basis that A had done for many years. If there had been no federal grazing permit on the nearby federal land, the fair market value of the parcel owned by A would have been only $600,000.

The executor for A's estate will not make a special use valuation election on the estate tax return to be filed.

Situation 2.

The facts are the same as in Situation 1, except that A's executor plans to make a special use valuation election under section 2032A of the Internal Revenue Code. A's farmland satisfied the requirements described in section 2032A(b) relating to qualified real property. The excess of the average annual gross cash rentals over the average annual state and local real estate taxes for land located in the locality and comparable to the land owned by A is $20,000. However, the excess of the average annual gross cash rentals over the average annual state and local real estate taxes for land located in the locality and comparable to A's land, and including a grazing permit on federal land comparable to the land subject to A's grazing permit, is $30,000. The average annual effective interest rate for Federal Land Bank loans for the region in which A's ranch is located is 11.93 percent.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 2031 of the Code provides in part that the value of the gross estate of a decedent shall be determined by including property in the gross estate on the basis of the fair market value of such property as of the date of the decedent's death, unless the executor elects the alternative valuation method under section 2032 of the Code. Section 20.2031-1(b) of the Estate Tax Regulations provides in part that the fair market value of property is the price at which the property would change hands between a willing buyer and a willing seller, neither being under any compulsion to buy or sell and both having reasonable knowledge of relevant facts.

Section 2032A of the Code provides that, under certain conditions, an executor may elect to value farm or business real property based upon its current use rather than its fair market value as determined under otherwise applicable estate tax valuation rules. For property to qualify for "special use" valuation under section 2032A, the property must be "qualified real property" described in section 2032A(b) of the Code.

Section 2032A(e)(7)(A) of the Code provides, in general, that the value of a farm for farming purposes shall be determined by dividing (i) the excess of the average annual gross cash rental for comparable land used for farming purposes and located in the locality of such farm over the average annual state and local real estate taxes for such comparable land, by (ii) the average annual effective interest rate for all new Federal Land Bank loans. Further, each average annual computation shall be made on the basis of the five most recent calendar years ending before the date of the decedent's death.

Although a grazing permit does not create any right, title, or interest in the federal land affected by the permit, it is a valuable component part of the nearby farmland and has been recognized as having value to the holder in several court decisions. See Estate of Cronin v. Cronin, 89 S.D. 632, 237 N.W. 2d 171 (1975); United States v. Jaramillo, 190 F.2d 300 (10th Cir. 1951). See also Board of Supervisors of County of Modoc v. Archer, 18 Cal. App.3d 717, 726, 96 Cal. Rptr. 379, 386 (1971), which held that a federal grazing permit was a possessory interest under California law, i.e., "an interest in real property which exists as a result of possession, exclusive use, or a right to possession or exclusive use of land . . . unaccompanied by the ownership of a fee simple or life estate in the property"; and Ruelas v. Ruelas, 7 Ariz. App. 98, 436 P.2d 490, 493 (1968), which held that a federal grazing permit "has an economic value which affects the value of the patented land to which the permit is an adjunct." Accordingly, the federal grazing permit is a valuable asset attached to the land owned in fee by the decedent and is thus an element of the value of the land owned in fee.

In Situation 1, the fair market value of the land owned in fee by the decedent should reflect the fair market value of the grazing permit, because the value of the grazing permit would be taken into consideration in determining the price at which the land owned in fee would change hands in a sale between a willing buyer and a willing seller. Therefore, for purposes of section 2031 of the Code, the value of A's farmland includible in the gross estate is $800,000. Moreover, these facts indicate that the grazing permit has no value independent of the ownership of A's farmland; thus, the grazing permit is not separately includible in A's gross estate.

In Situation 2, the value of the grazing permit must be reported as part of the value of the land owned by the decedent in fee simple. In valuing the farmland under section 2032A(e)(7) of the Code, only land comparable to the land being valued under section 2032A may be used. Where the farmland to be valued under section 2032A is used in conjunction with a grazing permit on nearby federal land, an example of comparable farmland for purposes of section 2032A would be a parcel of farmland (similar to that owned by the decedent) that is used in conjunction with a second parcel (similar to that used under the decedent's federal permit) and that is rented as a combined unit to a third party.

The special use value of A's farmland, computed with the formula provided in section 2032A(e)(7) of the Code, is $251,467 ($30,000 excess average annual rental value divided by 11.93 percent average annual interest rate).

HOLDINGS

Situation 1.

For federal estate tax purposes, the fair market value of A's farmland, which is used in conjunction with a grazing permit on nearby federal land, must reflect the value of the permit.

Situation 2.

Under section 2032A of the Code, the special use value of A's farmland is computed by taking into account the total rent that an owner receives for a parcel of land comparable to the decedent's farmland consisting of a fee simple parcel and a grazing permit over nearby federal land.

SECTION 1. PURPOSE

.01 The purpose of this revenue procedure is to outline the requirements and instructions for reporting agents who perform a payroll service and who, in connection with this service, submit employment federal tax deposit payments for their clients. These payments are described in the Employment Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 31) under section 6302 of the Internal Revenue Code. All federal tax deposit payments are required to be deposited through a qualified federal tax depositary, as defined in 31 CFR Part 203.

.02 Under the provisions of this revenue procedure, qualifying agents may request permission to prepare magnetic tapes for federal tax deposits instead of using the preprinted forms provided by the Internal Revenue Service (IRS). Authorization will extend only to those agents who have a minimum of 250 clients and who satisfy all the requirements of this revenue procedure.

SEC. 2. BACKGROUND

.01 The IRS furnishes federal tax deposit forms to those taxpayers who can reasonably be expected to make tax deposits. These forms are preprinted with essential identifying information for processing the payment data to the appropriate tax account. Many payroll and tax preparation businesses do not have the preprinted deposit forms for making the required tax deposits and, in most instances, this occurs because the agent has not requested that the client forward the deposit forms furnished by the IRS. Some of these reporting agents have mailed deposits directly to an Internal Revenue Service office when the forms were not available to them. This practice is not in conformity with Section 31.6302(c)-1(a)(2) of the Employment Tax Regulations.

.02 Authorization for preparing Form FTD 501, Federal Tax Deposit, Withheld Income and FICA Taxes (FTDs), first appeared in Rev. Proc. 75-112, 1975-1 C.B. 653. The authority to prepare federal tax deposit magnetic tapes is not dependent on the authority to file Form 941, Employer's Quarterly Federal Tax Return, on magnetic tape.

SEC. 3. FTD PAYMENTS SUBMITTED BY REPORTING AGENTS

.01 All FTD payments prepared by an authorized agent must be submitted through a qualified federal tax depository or Federal Reserve Bank. The only acceptable agent-prepared deposit tapes are those relating to Forms 941, 940, and 943. All FTD tapes prepared by an authorized agent must be submitted to the service center of jurisdiction, Attention: Service Center Computer Branch Tape Library. Addresses are shown on pages 16 and 17. Form 2284, Advice of Credit (AOC), facsimile must be transmitted to the Federal Reserve Bank of jurisdiction.

.02 Deposits for other taxes and for clients who have not been accepted and validated by the IRS for this program must be made to a depositary by means of the pre-printed forms provided by IRS. Reporting agents authorized under this program who mail payments directly to an IRS office will have their remittances returned to them with instructions that they obtain the appropriate deposit forms from their client and that they submit the payments through a qualified federal tax depositary, as required. Taxpayers whose payments are returned to their reporting agent may be subject to appropriate penalty and interest charges. Reporting agents must not assume the responsibility for making tax deposits on behalf of a client for any deposit that may become due before the client is actually under this program.

.03 Agent-prepared FTD deposits must be submitted through a qualified depositary.

SEC. 4. APPLICATION TO SUBMIT FTD TAPES

.01 Agents who wish to submit FTD information on magnetic tape must first file a letter of application with the Director of the Internal Revenue Service Center where the deposits will be processed. In most cases this will be the same service center that processes the related tax forms. See pages 14 and 15 for a list of service centers and their respective addresses. The letter of application should include all the following information:

1. The full name, address, and employer identification number of the firm making the application. If the reporting agent will prepare tapes at more than one branch or location, each location must be identified in the letter of application.

2. The name, title, and telephone number of a person the service center can contact regarding the application. In most cases, any problem with the letter of application can be resolved by telephone and this will expedite processing by the service center.

3. The name, address, Federal Reserve Bank Code, bank identification number/check digit code, and branch code of the federal tax depositary. Prior to submitting the letter of application, the reporting agent must have an agreement with a depositary that the depositary will allow the agent to utilize its Treasury Tax and Loan Account (TT&L). A copy of the agreement should accompany the application.

4. A listing of the taxpayers who will have their FTD payments prepared by the reporting agent. See Section 5 for the information required on this listing. See Exhibit 1 for an example of a list of clients.

5. A power of attorney (POA) for each taxpayer on the listing. See Section 6 for information concerning the power of attorney. See Exhibit 2 for an example of a properly prepared power of attorney.

.02 Applications containing a listing of less than 250 clients will be denied. If an agent has previously been preparing FTDs under the provisions of Rev. Proc. 75-12 before supersession by Rev. Proc. 79-15, 1979-1 C.B. 498, the agent is exempt from this qualification.

SEC. 5. LISTING OF CLIENTS

.01 Each letter of application must include a listing of the taxpayers who will have their FTDs prepared by the reporting agent. The listing must include each taxpayer's complete business name, address (including zip code), federal employer identification number (EIN) and a customer identification number assigned to the client by the agent. For each client, the listing must specify the types of taxes that will be prepared.

.02 The listing must be double spaced to allow room for notations by the service center. The clients must be listed in EIN number sequence. A duplicate listing must be submitted so that the Service can maintain a file of taxpayers accepted under this program. See Section 8 for updates to the initial listing of clients. See Exhibit 1 for an example of the format of the listing.

SEC. 6. POWER OF ATTORNEY

.01 A power of attorney must be submitted for each client on the listing. The power of attorney may be submitted on Form 2848, Power of Attorney and Declaration of Representative, which is available on request. A sample power of attorney is set forth in Exhibit 2. If this form is not used, the power of attorney must clearly state that it is a limited power of attorney granting the authority to prepare and submit FTDs for Forms 940, 941, 943 Employment Taxes and must include the following information.

(a) The client's name, address and employer identification number

(b) The reporting agent's name and address

(c) Type of tax, Employment Taxes, Forms 940, 941, 943

(d) A specific period of time, i.e., 1986–1991

(e) Both the taxpayer or authorized representative, and the reporting agent must sign the POA.

(f) If the reporting agent would like to receive copies of notices the POA must specify authorization as a "designee" of the taxpayer under section 6103 of the Code to receive copies of notices and correspondence with regard to these payments.

(g) Agents should be cautioned that if their client already has a POA on file with the IRS, the automated centralized POA file will accept the latest date and revoke prior POA's unless noted on the limited POA to retain all existing POA's on file.

.02 If a power of attorney is already on file for full tax reporting, it is not necessary to execute a new agreement. If a power of attorney is already on file for magnetic tape filing of Form 941, it does not need to be revoked, however, a new power of attorney must be submitted to cover any federal tax deposits not already covered.

.03 The power of attorney for agent-prepared FTDs will be a limited power of attorney. Refunds, tax forms, notices and other output will be mailed to the taxpayer. Requests from a reporting agent for information or adjustments on an account will be honored by the IRS only to the extent covered by the power of attorney.

.04 Requests for taxpayer name and address changes may not be made by a reporting agent with a limited power of attorney. The only requests that will be honored will be those originating from the taxpayer, or an attorney-in-fact, if the attorney has a full power of attorney for all tax matters concerning a taxpayer and has filed a copy of the full power of attorney with the IRS center.

.05 The reporting agent must keep copies of the power of attorney on file at the agent's principal place of business for examination by the IRS upon request. If the power of attorney includes the authority to sign and file tax returns, it must be retained until the statute of limitations for the last return filed under its authority expires.

.06 The power of attorney will remain in effect until such time as it is revoked by the taxpayer, terminated by written notification by the reporting agent, or expires under its own terms.

.07 The power of attorney is automatically revoked when the reporting agent notifies the Service that the taxpayer will no longer have FTD payments submitted by the agent. It is also automatically revoked when the Service notifies the reporting agent that the requirements of this revenue procedure have not been adhered to and the Service will no longer accept the agent-prepared FTD payments from the agent.

.08 Any time a power of attorney has been terminated or revoked a new power of attorney will be required if a client reenters this program. The new power of attorney must be signed and dated subsequent to the revocation.

SEC. 7. ACCEPTANCE OF AGENT'S APPLICATION

.01 The IRS will process each letter of application within thirty days of receipt. The authorization letter will include a two digit identifying number, which the IRS will assign to the reporting agent. If the reporting agent will prepare tapes at more than one location or branch, each location or branch will be assigned a separate identifying number. After an agent has been assigned an identifying number, all communication regarding the preparation FTD tapes should include this number. Updates to the agent's listing of clients must always contain the identifying number of the location or branch handling the particular client's records. The agent-identifying number must be in tape positions 52–53, on both the AOC and FTD records.

.02 One copy of the listing of the reporting agent's clients will be returned with the authorization letter. The Service will verify each client's employer identification number and will provide the client's name control. The name control must appear in tape positions 14–17 on the FTD records. An IRS office code will be provided to the agent for each taxpayer and must appear in tape positions 18–19 of the FTD record. If there is a discrepancy, the IRS will also provide the business name as it is maintained on record with the IRS. Corrections will be indicated by a line through the agent's information with the corrected information written above.

.03 Reporting agents must not change the validated employer identification number, name control, or service center code except when notified to do so by the Internal Revenue Service.

.04 All discrepancies in taxpayer filing requirements will be resolved by telephone if a contact is established in the letter of application. If, for any reason, a particular taxpayer whose name is recited on the agent's list is not accepted by the IRS under this program, the name of the taxpayer will be circled out and the reason for non-acceptance will be stated in the acceptance letter.

.05 Payroll agents who submit data on magnetic tape and are located in IRS regions having more than one IRS center will have the option to consolidate and file FTDs at only one service center. Only those agents using magnetic tape are allowed this option. If an agent deals with more than one regional service center and wishes to consolidate, the agent must write to the Director of the IRS center and obtain approval prior to beginning to file with only one service center.

SEC. 8. UPDATES TO THE AGENT'S LIST OF CLIENTS

.01 After acceptance of the reporting agent's initial list of clients, all additions and deletions must be reported to the service center. New clients must not be included in the preparation of FTDs by a reporting agent until they are accepted and the entity information (EIN, name control, service center code, and filing requirements) is validated and provided by the IRS. If the reporting agent chooses to make FTDs for a new client prior to being accepted, the agent must use the IRS preprinted forms and deposit the payment with a qualified depositary separate from the agent-magnetic tape.

Note: When the additions or deletions list exceeds 500, that listing must be sent to the service center within one week. If the additions and deletions are less than 500, submit no later than the first day of the last month of the quarter.

.02 The IRS will process updates to the agent's addition listing within two weeks of receipt. The update listing should be in the same format as the initial listing, with the additions preceding and on a separate page from the deletions. Two copies of this listing should be submitted to enable the Service to maintain a file copy. The service center will process the additions on an expedite basis and in the same manner as the initial listing. Deletions will be acknowledged to the reporting agent within 30 days.

.03 Once a client has been deleted under this program, the reporting agent may not request to re-enter that client until the next quarter. For example, if a client is deleted in the first quarter of the year (Jan., Feb., Mar.), the client may not be added back onto the accepted list of clients until the second quarter of the year (Apr., May, June). A new power of attorney must be submitted when the request to re-enter the program is sent to the Service.

.04 The reporting agent must send a consolidated listing of their clients currently accepted by the Service within 14 days after the end of each quarter. This listing must not include current additions or deletions which must be sent separately. The consolidated listing is for information only and will not be returned to the agent.

Announcement of the Disbarment, Suspension, or Consent to Voluntary Suspension of Attorneys, Certified Public Accountants, Enrolled Agents and Enrolled Actuaries from Practice Before the Internal Revenue Service

Under 31 Code of Federal Regulations, Part 10, an attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary, in order to avoid the institution or conclusion of a proceeding for his disbarment or suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service, may offer his consent to suspension from such practice. The Director of Practice, in his discretion, may suspend an attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary in accordance with the consent offered.

Attorneys, certified public accountants, enrolled agents, and enrolled actuaries are prohibited in any Internal Revenue Service matter from directly or indirectly employing, accepting assistance from, being employed by or sharing fees with, any practitioner disbarred or under suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service.

To enable attorneys, certified public accountants, enrolled agents and enrolled actuaries to identify practitioners under consent suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service, the Director of Practice will announce in the Internal Revenue Bulletin the names and addresses of practitioners who have been suspended from such practice, their designation as attorneys, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary, and the date or period of suspension. This announcement will appear in the weekly Bulletin at the earliest practicable date after such action and will continue to appear in the weekly Bulletin for five successive weeks or for as many weeks as is practicable for each attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary so suspended and will later be consolidated and published in the Cumulative Bulletin.

The following individuals have been placed under consent suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service:

Announcement Relating to Proposed Regulations Published With Notice of Proposed Rulemaking

Changes in regulations as announced below have been published in the Federal Register in tentative or proposed form to provide interested parties with an opportunity to file their objections or suggestions for consideration prior to final adoption of such regulations. Statement of such views, arguments or suggestions should be submitted in writing, preferably six copies, to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Attention: CC:LR:T, Washington, D.C. 20224.

Section Affected	Subject	Published in the Bulletin	Expiration Date for Submission of Views
26 CFR 1.88–1, 1.468A–1 through 1.468A–8 added	Nuclear decommissioning costs	1986–31 I.R.B. 22	Sept. 8, 1986

Definition of Terms

Revenue rulings and revenue procedures (hereinafter referred to as "rulings") that have an effect on previous rulings use the following defined terms to describe the effect:

Amplified describes a situation where no change is being made in a prior published position, but the prior position is being extended to apply to a variation of the fact situation set forth therein. Thus, if an earlier ruling held that a principle applied to A, and the new ruling holds that the same principle also applies to B, the earlier ruling is amplified. (Compare with modified, below).

Clarified is used in those instances where the language in a prior ruling is being made clear because the language has caused, or may cause, some confusion. It is not used where a position in a prior ruling is being changed.

Distinguished describes a situation where a ruling mentions a previously published ruling and points out an essential difference between them.

Modified is used where the substance of a previously published position is being changed. Thus, if a prior ruling held that a principle applied to A but not to B, and the new ruling holds that it applies to both A and B, the prior ruling is modified because it corrects a published position. (Compare with amplified and clarified, above).

Obsoleted describes a previously published ruling that is not considered determinative with respect to future transactions. This term is most commonly used in a ruling that lists previously published rulings that are obsoleted because of changes in law or regulations. A ruling may also be obsoleted because the substance has been included in regulations subsequently adopted.

Revoked describes situations where the position in the previously published ruling is not correct and the correct position is being stated in the new ruling.

Superseded describes a situation where the new ruling does nothing more than restate the substance and situation of a previously published ruling (or rulings). Thus, the term is used to republish under the 1954 Code and regulations the same position published under the 1939 Code and regulations. The term is also used when it is desired to republish in a single ruling a series of situations, names, etc., that were previously published over a period of time in separate rulings. If the new ruling does more than restate the substance of a prior ruling, a combination of terms is used. For example, modified and superseded describes a situation where the substance of a previously published ruling is being changed in part and is continued without change in part and it is desired to restate the valid portion of the previously published ruling in a new ruling that is self contained. In this case the previously published ruling is first modified and then, as modified, is superseded.

Supplemented is used in situations in which a list, such as a list of the names of countries, is published in a ruling and that list is expanded by adding further names in subsequent rulings. After the original ruling has been supplemented several times, a new ruling may be published that includes the list in the original ruling and the additions, and supersedes all prior rulings in the series.

Suspended is used in rare situations to show that the previous published rulings will not be applied pending some future action such as the issuance of new or amended regulations, the outcome of cases in litigation, or the outcome of a Service study.

Internal Revenue Service

T22.23:

Mission of the Service

The purpose of the Internal Revenue Service is to collect the proper amount of tax revenues at the least cost to the public, and in a manner that warrants the highest degree of public confidence in our integrity, efficiency and fairness. To achieve that purpose, we will:

—Encourage and achieve the highest possible degree of voluntary compliance in accordance with the tax law and regulations;

—Advise the public of their rights and responsibilities;

—Determine the extent of compliance and the causes of noncompliance;

—Do all things needed for the proper administration and enforcement of the tax laws;

—Continually search for and implement new, more efficient and effective ways of accomplishing our Mission.

Statement of Principles of Internal Revenue Tax Administration

The function of the Internal Revenue Service is to administer the Internal Revenue Code. Tax policy for raising revenue is determined by Congress.

With this in mind, it is the duty of the Service to carry out that policy by correctly applying the laws enacted by Congress; to determine the reasonable meaning of various Code provisions in light of the Congressional purpose in enacting them; and to perform this work in a fair and impartial manner, with neither a government nor a taxpayer point of view.

At the heart of administration is interpretation of the Code. It is the responsibility of each person in the Service, charged with the duty of interpreting the law, to try to find the true meaning of the statutory provision and not to adopt a strained construction in the belief that he or she is "protecting the revenue." The revenue is properly protected only when we ascertain and apply the true meaning of the statute.

The Service also has the responsibility of applying and administering the law in a reasonable, practical manner. Issues should only be raised by examining officers when they have merit, never arbitrarily or for trading purposes. At the same time, the examining officer should never hesitate to raise a meritorious issue. It is also important that care be exercised not to raise an issue or to ask a court to adopt a position inconsistent with an established Service position.

Administration should be both reasonable and vigorous. It should be conducted with as little delay as possible and with great courtesy and considerateness. It should never try to overreach, and should be reasonable within the bounds of law and sound administration. It should, however, be vigorous in requiring compliance with law and it should be relentless in its attack on unreal tax devices and fraud.

Introduction

The Internal Revenue Bulletin is the authoritative instrument of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for announcing official rulings and procedures of the Internal Revenue Service and for publishing Treasury Decisions, Executive Orders, Tax Conventions, legislation, court decisions, and other items of general interest. It is published weekly and may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. Bulletin contents of a permanent nature are consolidated semiannually into Cumulative Bulletins, which are sold on a single-copy basis.

It is the policy of the Service to publish in the Bulletin all substantive rulings necessary to promote a uniform application of the tax laws, including all rulings that supersede, revoke, modify, or amend any of those previously published in the Bulletin. All published rulings apply retroactively unless otherwise indicated. Procedures relating solely to matters of internal management are not published; however, statements of internal practices and procedures that affect the rights and duties of taxpayers are published.

Revenue rulings represent the conclusions of the Service on the application of the law to the pivotal facts stated in the revenue ruling. In those based on positions taken in rulings to taxpayers or technical advice to Service field offices, identifying details and information of a confidential nature are deleted to prevent unwarranted invasions of privacy and to comply with statutory requirements.

Rulings and procedures reported in the Bulletin do not have the force and effect of Treasury Department Regulations, but they may be used as precedents. Unpublished rulings will not be relied on, used, or cited as precedents by Service personnel in the disposition of other cases. In applying published rulings and procedures, the effect of subsequent legislation, regulations, court decisions, rulings, and procedures must be considered, and Service personnel and others concerned are cautioned against reaching the same conclusions in other cases unless the facts and circumstances are substantially the same.

The Bulletin is divided into four parts as follows:

Part I.—1954 Code.

This part includes rulings and decisions based on provisions of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

Part II.—Treaties and Tax Legislation.

This part is divided into two subparts as follows: Subpart A, Tax Conventions, and Subpart B, Legislation and Related Committee Reports.

Part III.—Administrative, Procedural, and Miscellaneous.

To the extent practicable, pertinent cross references to these subjects are contained in the other Parts and Subparts.

Part IV.—Items of General Interest.

With the exception of the disbarment and suspension list included in this part, none of these announcements is consolidated in the Cumulative Bulletins.

The first Bulletin for each month includes an index for the matters published during the preceding month. These monthly indexes are cumulated on a quarterly and semiannual basis, and are published in the first Bulletin of the succeeding quarterly and semi-annual period, respectively.

The Bulletin Index-Digest System, a research and reference service supplementing the Bulletin, may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. It consists of four Services: Service No. 1, Income Tax; Service No. 2, Estate and Gift Taxes; Service No. 3, Employment Taxes; Service No. 4, Excise Taxes. Each Service consists of a basic volume and a cumulative supplement that provide (1) finding lists of items published in the Bulletin, (2) digests of revenue rulings, revenue procedures, and other published items, and (3) indexes of Public Laws, Treasury Decisions, and Tax Conventions.

The contents of this publication are not copyrighted and may be reprinted freely. A citation of the Internal Revenue Bulletin as the source would be appropriate.

.02 Section 1.6045–1(1) of the Income Tax Regulations requires brokers and barter exchanges to use magnetic media to report ALL Form 1099–B data to IRS. THIS REQUIREMENT APPLIES TO BOTH ORIGINAL AND CORRECTED RETURNS. Section 6011(e) of the Internal Revenue Code as amended by the Interest and Dividend Tax Compliance Act of 1983, Pub. L. 98–67, 1983–2 C.B. 352, 359, requires that any person, including corporations, partnerships, individuals, estates, and trusts, required to file more than 50 information returns in the aggregate for payments of certain interest (Forms 1099–INT and 1099–OID), dividends (Form 1099–DIV), or patronage dividends (Form 1099–PATR), for any calendar year, must file such returns on magnetic media. THIS REQUIREMENT APPLIES TO BOTH ORIGINAL AND CORRECTED RETURNS. For example, if you must file 30 Forms 1099–DIV and 25 Forms 1099–INT, filing on magnetic media is required. In addition, for returns filed in 1987 (for tax year 1986), magnetic media reporting is required if you file 500 or more of each of the following forms: Forms W–2, W–2P, W–2G, 1098, 1099–A, 1099–G, 1099–MISC, 1099–R, 5498, 1042S, 6248, and 8027. THIS REQUIREMENT APPLIES TO BOTH ORIGINAL AND CORRECTED RETURNS. Form W–2c is not included in these filing requirements. The 500 or more requirement for these forms will drop to 250 or more for returns filed in 1988 (for tax year 1987) and later years. Forms W–2 and W–2P are filed with the Social Security Administration (SSA), NOT Internal Revenue Service (IRS). At this time, corrected returns filed on Form W–2c with SSA are not required on magnetic media. These requirements shall not apply if you establish that it will cause you undue hardship. Refer to Part A, Sec. 5.

.03 This procedure also provides the requirements and specifications for diskette filing under the Combined Federal/State Filing Program. Refer to Part A, Sec. 14.

.04 The following revenue procedures and publications provide more detailed filing procedures for certain information returns:

(a) 1986 "Instructions for Forms 1099, 1098, 5498, 1096, and W–2G" provide further information on filing returns with IRS. These instructions are available at IRS offices.

(b) Rev. Proc. 84–24, 1984–1 C.B. 465, regarding preparation of transmittal documents (Forms 1096 and 4804) for information returns.

(d) Publication 1179, Specifications for Paper Substitutes for Forms 1096, 1098, 1099, 5498, and W–2G.

.05 This procedure supersedes the following revenue procedure: Rev. Proc. 85–47, 1985–2 C.B. 512, also published in Publication 1255 (Rev. 9–85), Requirements and Conditions for Filing Information Returns in the Forms 1098, 1099, 5498, and W–2G Series on Magnetic Diskette.

.06 Refer to Part A, Sec. 15 for definitions of terms used in this publication.

SEC. 2 BACKGROUND—PRIOR YEAR CHANGES (TAX YEAR 1985)

DUE TO NUMEROUS LEGISLATIVE AND FORMS CHANGES BETWEEN TAX YEARS 1984 AND 1985, CHANGES WERE NOT LISTED INDIVIDUALLY UNDER THIS SECTION. THE ENTIRE PUBLICATION WAS REVISED. FOR TAX YEAR 1985, SEE REV. PROC. 85–47, 1985–2 C.B. 512 FOR SPECIFIC CHANGES.

SEC. 3. NATURE OF CHANGES—CURRENT YEAR (TAX YEAR 1986)

.01 The following changes must be incorporated into your programs for tax year 1986.

.02 GENERAL CHANGES ARE AS FOLLOWS:

(a) The note on the cover and which follows the table of contents was revised to alert filers that their data should be reviewed for accuracy before submission to prevent erroneous notices to the persons for whom reports are filed.

(b) Part A, Sec. 1.02 lists the forms described in this revenue procedure that must be filed on magnetic media. THESE REQUIREMENTS APPLY TO BOTH ORIGINAL AND CORRECTED RETURNS. Corrected returns filed on Forms W–2c with SSA are not required at this time on magnetic media.

(c) A note was added to Part A, Sec. 4.01 to alert filers that applications to file Forms W–2 and W–2P on magnetic media are requested from SSA; however, requests for magnetic media related undue hardship waivers and extensions of time to file Forms W–2 and W–2P on magnetic media are requested from the IRS National Computer Center. Waiver requests for these forms must be filed by July 31, 1986, for tax year 1986 for returns to be filed in 1987.

(d) Transmitter Control Codes may be alpha/numeric. This has been noted in several places within the publication.

(e) The dates for submission of "test" files have been revised in Part A, Sec. 5. "Test" files should be submitted between August 15 and December 15 each year. Also, "test" data for the "A" Record must be actual data, not fictitious information.

(f) Part A, Sec. 5.04 has been revised to alert filers that a transmittal Form 4804, 4802 or computer generated substitute must accompany "test" files. The transmittal Form 4804 and 4802 have been updated for 1986. Agencies who produce a computer generated substitute must update their format for these forms. The Form 4804 now includes a checkbox 1 to indicate the type of file (e.g., original, correction, replacement, test).

(g) Part A, Sec. 5 includes new information concerning undue hardship waiver requests. Filers are now required to submit Form 8508, Request for Waiver From Filing Information Returns on Magnetic Media. THIS REQUIREMENT APPLIES TO BOTH ORIGINAL AND CORRECTED RETURNS WITH THE EXCEPTION OF FORM W–2c.

(h) Part A, Sec. 6 has been updated to include the retention requirements for information returns and the new affidavit requirements for transmittal documents.

(i) For documents filed on paper with the appropriate service center, it is no longer necessary to note on the transmittal Form 1096 that a portion of the returns are being filed on magnetic media. This has been deleted from Part A, Sec. 6.07.

(j) Part A, Sec. 6.08 has been reworded to clarify that reports from different branches for one payer, if submitted on the same file, must be consolidated under one "A" Record for each type of information return.

(k) A note has been added to Part A, Sec. 7 that Form 5498 is used to report amounts contributed during or after the calendar year but not later than April 15.

(l) Part A, Sec. 8 (h) has been added to inform filers who file extension requests for multiple payers that the request must include a list of all payers and their TINs (SSN or EIN).

(m) Part A, Sec. 10 alerts filers that the magnetic media filing requirements apply to both original and corrected returns with the exception of Form W–2c filed with SSA. Refer to Part A, Sec. 1 for the filing requirements. Corrected returns should be aggregated and submitted as soon as possible but not later than October 1 of each year. Also, corrections should be submitted only for the returns filed in error, not the entire file.

(n) In prior years, diskette position 6 of the "B" Record was used as the corrected return indicator. Part A, Sec. 10.01 indicates that this has now been changed to position 7. The Guidelines in Sec. 10 have also been updated to reflect this change. You must adjust your programs. This change was necessary to facilitate the need for a second position in the "B" Record, Document Specific Code field.

(o) Transmittal Form W–3G is now obsolete. This form was used to transmit paper Forms 1099–R and W–2G. These two forms are now to be transmitted to the service center with Form 1096.

(p) Two new charts were added to the publication last year to provide instructions for filing corrections on magnetic media and on paper forms. Chart 2, Guidelines for Filing Corrected Returns on Paper Forms has been deleted. The instructions for filing corrections on paper forms are now available in the 1986 "Instructions for Forms 1099, 1098, 5498, 1096, and W–2G."

(q) Part A, Sec. 10, Guidelines have been revised. If a return was filed with NO Payee TIN (SSN or EIN), or the return was filed with an incorrect Payee TIN, only one transaction is now necessary to make the correction.

(r) Part A, Sec. 12 has been completely revised. Refer to this section for specific changes.

(s) Service center addresses have been deleted from this publication. They are available in the 1986 "Instructions for Forms 1099, 1098, 5498, 1096, and W–2G."

(t) Part A, Sec. 14.02 has been revised to inform filers of the authorization to sign consent Form 6847. Filers who have received approval to file on this program in prior years may be required to resubmit a consent Form 6847 signed by each payer. Refer to Part A, Sec. 14.02 for further information.

(u) The dollar criteria in Table 2 of Part A, Sec. 14 has changed. For the state of Minnesota, Form 5498 must now be reported. Also, two footnotes for Minnesota have now been deleted: $10.01 for Savings and Loan Associations and Credit Unions; and $600.01 for Rents and Royalties.

(v) Acceptable foreign country codes have been added to Part A, Sec. 16 to assist you in developing the address field.

(w) Part B, Sec. 1.04 has been revised to indicate changes made to the external media labels. Form 5064 is the external media label and has been updated for tax year 1986. You must use the updated label for 1986. These will be included in your magnetic media reporting packages.

.03 THE FOLLOWING CHANGES HAVE BEEN MADE TO THE PAYER/TRANSMITTER "A" RECORD:

(a) A note has been added to Part B, Sec. 3.03 to indicate that all alpha characters should be uppercase.

(b) Form 1099–MISC, Amount Code "8," Direct Sales Indicator, NOTE 1, has been clarified.

(c) Form 1099–OID, the title of Amount Code 2 has been changed from "Stated interest," to "Other periodic interest."

(d) Form 1099–R, the term "Insurance Contracts" has been added to the title of the form and insurance premiums has been added to Amount Code "5."

(e) Amount Code "7" has been added to Form 1099–R to report "State income tax withheld."

(f) A note has been added for reporting distributions from KEOGH plans on Form 1099–R.

(g) Form 5498, Amount Code "1" has been changed to report "Regular SEP contributions made in 1986 and 1987 for 1986." The regular SEP contributions have been deleted from Amount Code "3" and now appear separately as Amount Code "1."

(h) Form 5498, the title of Amount Code "4" has been changed to "Life insurance cost included in codes 1 or 3 (for endowment contracts only)."

(i) Amount Code "3" has been added for Form W–2G to report "State income tax withheld."

(j) The First Payer Name Line has been clarified for those reporting Form 1098, "Mortgage Interest Statement." Refer to the First Payer Name Line field description for specific information.

.04 THE FOLLOWING CHANGES HAVE BEEN MADE TO THE PAYEE "B" RECORD:

(a) A note has been added to Part B, Sec. 5.03 concerning invalid addresses.

(b) A note has been added to Part B, Sec. 5.08 to indicate that all alpha characters should be uppercase.

(c) The Document Specific Code field length has been increased from 1 to 2 positions. Diskette positions 5–6 now represent this coding. This change was necessary due to multiple coding required in certain cases for Form 1099–R.

(d) Additional coding and clarification has been added to the Document Specific Code for Form 1099–R. A Code "9" represents PS 58 Costs; Code "P" represents excess contributions refunded plus earnings on such excess contributions taxable in 1985; Code "A" represents distributions that qualify for 10-year averaging; Code "B" represents distributions that qualify for the death benefit exclusion; and Code "C" indicates that the distribution qualifies for both "A" and "B."

(e) The Document Specific Code, Direct Sales indicator has been clarified.

(f) In prior years, diskette position 6 was used as the corrected return indicator. This has now changed to position 7. You must adjust your programs.

(g) Examples have been added to assist you in the development of the Name Control field.

(h) The Type of TIN indicator field has been clarified for those accounts that are questionable. Code "9" has been deleted.

(i) The Payer's Account Number for the Payee field has been clarified.

(j) The First Payee Name Line field description has been clarified for those reporting Form 1098, "Mortgage Interest Statement." Refer to the First Payee Name Line field description for specific information.

(k) The Payee City, Payee State, and Payee ZIP Code are three separate fields. If the payee lives outside of the United States, insert a "1" in position "1" of the Payee City field and spell out the name in the remaining positions. Use the appropriate Country Code as shown in Part A, Sec. 16 in the Payee State field. Some foreign countries utilize alpha characters in the ZIP Code. The use of alpha characters is only acceptable if there is a "1" in position "1" of the Payee City field.

.05 THE FOLLOWING CHANGES HAVE BEEN MADE TO THE END OF PAYER "C" RECORD:

(a) Part B, Sec. 14 clarifies the totals required in the "C" Record.

(b) The Number of Reels field description has been reworded.

.07 A new section has been added to the revenue procedure for filers who wish to submit double density 8 inch diskettes which contain sectors of 256 bytes instead of 128 bytes. Refer to Part C, Sec. 1 through Sec. 17 for Field Description and Record Layout information.

SEC. 4. WAGE AND PENSION INFORMATION FILED WITH SSA

.01 Section 8(b), Pub. L. 94–202, 1976–1 C.B. 503, enacted in January 1976, authorized the combined reporting of FICA detailed information in one consolidated annual W–2 (Copy A) to the Federal government. AS A RESULT, FORMS W–2 AND W–2P ARE TO BE FILED WITH SSA, NOT WITH IRS. Applications to file Forms W–2 and W–2P on magnetic media are to be mailed to SSA; however, undue hardship waivers and extensions of time to file Forms W–2 and W–2P are to be requested from the IRS National Computer Center, NOT from SSA. Requests for undue hardship exemption for these two forms must be filed with the IRS National Computer Center by July 31, 1986, for tax year 1986 for returns to be filed in 1987. Refer to Part A, Sec. 13 for the address and Part A, Sec. 5.08 and Sec. 8 for the required information.

.02 SSA will accept magnetic media filing of Forms W–2 and W–2P and has issued the following concerning this: TIB-4a, "Magnetic Tape Reporting, Submitting FICA Wage and Tax Data to the Social Security Administration"; TIB–4b, "Magnetic Tape Reporting, Submitting Annuity, Pension, Retired Pay or IRA Payment to the Social Security Administration"; and TIB–4c, "Diskette Reporting, Submitting FICA Wage and Tax Data to the Social Security Administration." Applications for filing Forms W–2 and W–2P on magnetic media appear in TIBs–4a, 4b, and 4c.

.03 Copies of Social Security Administration publications TIB–4a, 4b, and 4c are available from any local Social Security Administration office or the SSA Regional Magnetic Media Coordinators.

SEC. 5. APPLICATION FOR MAGNETIC MEDIA REPORTING AND REQUESTS FOR UNDUE HARDSHIP WAIVERS

.01 For purposes of this revenue procedure, the PAYER includes the person making payments, a recipient of mortgage interest payments, a broker, a barter exchange, a trustee or issuer of an IRA, SEP or DEC, or a lender who acquires an interest in secured property or who has reason to know that the property has been abandoned. The TRANSMITTER is the organization preparing the diskette file. The payer and transmitter may be the same organization. Payers or their transmitters are required to complete Form 4419, Application for Magnetic Media Reporting of Information Returns. A copy of this form, for your use, is included in this publication. Requests for additional information or forms relating to magnetic media processing should be addressed to the National Computer Center. Beginning January 1, 1986, magnetic media processing was centralized at the National Computer Center. The address is listed in Part A, Sec. 13.

.02 Applications should be filed with the National Computer Center before "test" files are submitted. ("Test" files must be submitted between August 15 and December 15 each year.) IRS will act on an application and notify the applicant, in writing, of authorization to file. A five character alpha/numeric Transmitter Control Code will be assigned and included in an acknowledgement letter within 30 days of receipt of the application. Diskette returns may not be filed with IRS until the application has been approved. Do not enter blanks in the "A" Record Transmitter Control Code field; enter the five character alpha/numeric Transmitter Control Code that is assigned to you by IRS after you have filed an application and it has been approved. Applications for approval to file Forms W–2 and W–2P on magnetic media must be filed with SSA, NOT with IRS. Refer to Part A, Sec. 4.

.03 After you have received approval to file on magnetic media, you do not need to reapply each year; however, notify IRS in writing if:

(a) there are hardware or software changes that would affect the characteristics of the magnetic media submission (e.g., changing from diskette to tape filing or vice versa) a new Transmitter Control Code may be necessary or,

(b) you discontinue filing on magnetic media for a year (your five character alpha/numeric Transmitter Control Code may be reassigned.)

If either of these conditions applies to you, you should contact IRS for clarification. In ALL correspondence, refer to your current five character alpha/numeric Transmitter Control Code to assist IRS in locating your files.

.04 IRS will assist new filers with their initial diskette submission by reviewing "test" files submitted in advance of the filing season. The "test" data should be actual data for the "A" Record, not fictitious information. This applies to all records submitted in the "test" file. Approved payers or transmitters should submit "test" files to the National Computer Center. You MUST submit a "test" file in order to participate in the Combined Federal/State Program; however, you are encouraged to submit "test" files if you are a new filer on magnetic media. As a guideline, IRS prefers that all "test" files be submitted between August 15 and December 15 each year. Refer to Part A, Sec. 13 for the address. Do not submit "test" diskettes after December 15. If you are unable to submit your "test" file by this date, you may only send a sample hardcopy printout or diskette dump that shows a sample of each type of record (A, B, C, K, and F) used to the National Computer Center. Clearly mark the hardcopy printout or diskette dump as "TEST DATA" and include identifying information such as name, address, and telephone number of someone familiar with the "test" print or diskette dump who may be contacted to discuss its acceptability. With all "test" data, include a transmittal Form 4804, 4802 or computer generated substitute marked as "TEST DATA" that identifies your five character alpha/numeric Transmitter Control Code and total record and money amounts. The "test" data must be a sample of actual data coded according to the proper revenue procedure. The transmittal Form 4804 and 4802 have been updated for tax year 1986. Agencies who produce a computer generated substitute must include the additional information required on these forms. The Form 4804 now includes a checkbox 1 to indicate the type of file (e.g., original, correction, replacement, test).

.05 If your magnetic media files have been prepared for you in the past by a service agency, and you now have computer equipment compatible with that of IRS and wish to prepare your own files, you must request your own five character alpha/numeric Transmitter Control Code by filing an application, Form 4419, as described above.

.06 If you as an individual or organization are an approved filer on magnetic media and you change your name or the name of your organization, please notify the National Computer Center, in writing, so that your file may be updated to reflect the proper name.

.07 In accordance with section 1.6041–7(b) of the Income Tax Regulations, payments to providers of medical and health care services from separate departments of a health care carrier may be reported as separate returns on magnetic media. In this case, the headquarters office will be considered to be the transmitter, and the individual departments of the company filing reports will be considered to be payers. A single application form covering all the departments that will be filing on diskette should be submitted. One five character alpha/numeric Transmitter Control Code may be used for all departments.

.08 Any person required to file original or corrected returns on magnetic media may request a waiver from the filing requirements by submitting Form 8508, Request for Waiver From Filing Information Returns on Magnetic Media, with the IRS National Computer Center if filing on magnetic media would be an undue hardship. Requests for waivers for Forms W–2 and W–2P are due by July 31, 1986, for tax year 1986 for returns to be filed in 1987. For all other returns required to be filed on magnetic media, waiver requests must be filed at least 90 days before the returns are due. This waiver, if approved, will only provide exemption from magnetic media filing for one tax year. Filers may not apply for a waiver for more than one tax year at a time. You must reapply each year that a waiver is necessary. Copies of Form 8508 may be obtained from the IRS National Computer Center. See Part A, Sec. 13 for the address.

.09 Section 1.6045–1(l) of the Income Tax Regulations requires brokers and barter exchanges to use magnetic media in reporting ALL Form 1099–B data to IRS. Generally, NEW brokers and NEW barter exchanges may request an undue hardship exemption by filing a request for waiver with the National Computer Center by the end of the second month following the month in which they became a broker or barter exchange.

.10 All requests for magnetic media related undue hardship exemptions should be submitted to the IRS National Computer Center at least 90 days before the due date of the return except as stated in Sec. 5.09. All magnetic media related undue hardship requests for Forms W–2 and W–2P are to be filed with the IRS National Computer Center, not SSA and must be filed by July 31, 1986, for tax year 1986 for returns to be filed in 1987. Refer to Part A, Sec. 13 for the address.

.11 If you request a waiver from filing on magnetic media and it is approved, do not send a copy of the approved waiver to the service center where you file your paper returns. Keep the waiver for your records. Do not staple, paperclip or use rubberbands on any scannable forms. Paper information returns are read by an optical scanner (OCR) at the service centers.

.12 Waivers are granted on a case-by-case basis and may be approved at the discretion of the National Computer Center. Refer to Part A, Sec. 13 for the address.

.13 If you are required to file on magnetic media but fail to do so, and you do not have an approved waiver on record, you may be subject to a failure to file penalty. Refer to Sec. 6.01 below.

.14 An approved waiver from filing information returns on magnetic media does not provide exemption from filing; you MUST still file your information returns on acceptable paper forms.

.15 A magnetic media reporting package, which includes all the necessary transmittals, labels, and instructions, will be mailed to the last known address of all approved filers each year.

SEC. 6. FILING OF MAGNETIC MEDIA REPORTS AND RETENTION REQUIREMENTS

.01 If you do not file your returns on time, you may be subject to a $50 per document failure to file penalty. If you file without following the instructions in this revenue procedure, you may also be subject to a $50 per document failure to file penalty. The maximum penalty is $50,000. However, there is no maximum penalty for returns of 1099–INT, 1099–OID, 1099–DIV, 1099–PATR, 5498 or if the failure to file is due to intentional disregard of the filing requirements.

.02 Generally, you are now subject to a $50 penalty for each failure to include the payee's correct TIN on an information return unless the payer can demonstrate that the payer met the due diligence requirements. Refer to Part A, Sec. 11.

.03 Rev. Proc. 84–24, 1984–1 C.B. 465, gives detailed information on preparing transmittal documents (Forms 1096 and 4804) for information returns and is available at IRS offices. Specific guidelines are given on how to report the payer's name, address, and TIN on transmittal documents and information returns. Instructions for multiple transmittals and the submission of transmittals by service bureaus or agents are also covered.

.04 THE DISKETTE RECORDS ARE TO BE SUBMITTED TO THE NATIONAL COMPUTER CENTER; HOWEVER, PAPER INFORMATION RETURNS ARE TO CONTINUE TO BE FILED WITH THE APPROPRIATE SERVICE CENTERS. Form 4804, Transmittal of Information Returns Reported on Magnetic Media, must accompany diskette submissions. If you file for multiple payers and have the authority to sign the affidavit on Form 4804, you should also submit Form 4802, Transmittal for Multiple Magnetic Media Reporting.

For IRS to ensure that your actual data records were formatted following THIS revenue procedure, include a hardcopy printout, fast print or diskette dump of the first five and last five blocks of the data that shows a sample of each type of record (A, B, C, K, and F) used on the diskette. This will be reviewed prior to actual processing to ensure that the data is in the proper format. Be sure to include Form 4804, 4802 or computer generated substitute with your diskette shipment. DO NOT MAIL THE DISKETTES AND THE TRANSMITTAL DOCUMENTS SEPARATELY. IRS encourages the use of a computer generated Form 4804 which includes all necessary information requested on the actual form.

Paper information returns must be transmitted to the appropriate service center using Form 1096, Annual Summary and Transmittal of U.S. Information Returns. Do not send information returns filed on paper forms to the National Computer Center.

.05 The affidavit for Form 4804 should be signed by the payer; however, the transmitter, service bureau, paying agent, or disbursing agent may sign the affidavit on behalf of the payer if all of the following conditions are met:

(a) It has the authority to sign the affidavit under an agency agreement (either oral, written or implied) that is valid under the state law.

(b)(i) It has the responsibility (either oral, written or implied) conferred on it by the payer to request the TINs of recipients (or others for whom information is being reported),

OR

(ii) If the return of more than one payer is included in a single tape submission, covered by a single Form 4804, each payer has attested by affidavit to the transmitter, service bureau, paying agent or disbursing agent that the payer has complied with the law in attempting to secure correct TINs

(c) It signs the affidavit and adds the caption "For: (name of payer)."

.06 Although a duly authorized agent signs the affidavit, the payer is held responsible for the accuracy of the Form 4804, and the payer will be liable for penalties for failure to comply with filing requirements.

.07 DO NOT REPORT THE SAME INFORMATION ON PAPER FORMS THAT YOU REPORT ON MAGNETIC MEDIA. IF YOU REPORT PART OF YOUR RETURNS ON PAPER AND PART ON MAGNETIC MEDIA, BE SURE THAT DUPLICATE RETURNS, WITH THE SAME INFORMATION, ARE NOT INCLUDED ON BOTH. This does not mean that corrected documents are not to be filed. If a return has been prepared and submitted improperly, you must file a corrected return as soon as possible. Refer to Part A, Sec. 10 for requirements and instructions on filing corrected returns.

.08 Reports from different branches or locations for one payer, if submitted on the same file, MUST be consolidated under one Payer/Transmitter "A" Record for each type of information return. For example, all Forms 1099–INT for the same payer on a single file must be sorted together under one Payer/Transmitter "A" Record followed by the appropriate "B" Records and one "C" Record.

.09 Payers are required to retain a copy of the information returns filed with IRS or the ability to reconstruct the data for at least three years.

.10 Before submitting magnetic media files, include the following:

(a) A signed Form 4804 or computer generated substitute.

(b) A Form 4802 (if you transmit for multiple payers).

(c) A hard copy printout or listing of the first five and last five blocks of your file. The listing should show a sample of each type of record (A, B, C, K, and F) used on the magnetic media being submitted.

(d) The magnetic media with an external identifying label as described in Part B, Sec. 1.

(e) On the outside of the shipping container, include a Form 4801 or a substitute for the form which reads "DELIVER UNOPENED TO TAPE LIBRARY—MAGNETIC MEDIA REPORTING—BOX ■■ of ■■." If there is only one container, mark the outside as Box 1 of 1. For multiple containers, include the sequence (e.g., Box 1 of 33, 2 of 33, etc.).

(f) If you were granted an extension, include a copy of the approval letter with the magnetic media shipment.

.11 IRS will not pay or accept "Collect on Delivery" or "Charged to IRS" shipments of reportable tax information that an individual or organization is legally required to submit.

.12 Files returned to you due to coding or format errors are to be corrected and returned to IRS within 30 days of your receipt or the payer may be subject to a failure to file penalty.

SEC. 7. FILING DATES

.01 The dates prescribed for filing paper returns with IRS also apply to magnetic media filing. Magnetic media reporting to IRS for Forms 1098, 1099, and W–2G must be on a calendar year basis. Form 5498 is used to report amounts contributed during or after the calendar year but not later than April 15.

.02 Information returns filed on magnetic media for Forms 1098, all types of Forms 1099, and W–2G must be submitted to IRS and postmarked by February 28. The due date for furnishing the required copy or statement to the recipient is January 31.

.03 Information returns filed on magnetic media for Form 5498 must be submitted to IRS and postmarked by May

31. Copies of this form or statements are due to the participant by May 31 for contributions made to IRAs and SEPs for the prior calendar year; however, participant copies or statements for DECs are due at the time the contribution is made or January 31, whichever is later. Form 5498 is filed for contributions to be applied to 1986 that are made between January 1, 1986, and April 15, 1987.

SEC. 8. EXTENSIONS OF TIME TO FILE

.01 If a payer or transmitter of returns on magnetic media filed with IRS or SSA is unable to submit their magnetic media file by the dates prescribed in Sec. 7.02 and 7.03 above, submit a letter requesting an extension of up to 30 days to file, as soon as you are aware that an extension will be necessary. In order to be considered, the request MUST be filed before the due date of the return; otherwise, you will be subject to the late filing penalty. The letter should be sent to the attention of the Magnetic Media Reporting Program at the IRS National Computer Center. See Part A, Sec. 13 for the address. The request should include:

(a) The filer's (or transmitter's, if filing for multiple payers) name and address.

(b) The filer's Taxpayer Identification Number (SSN or EIN).

(c) The tax year for which the extension of time is requested: Tax Year 1986.

(d) The name and telephone number of a person to contact who is familiar with the request.

(e) The type of returns and expected volume (e.g., 5000 Forms 1099-INT).

(f) The five character alpha/numeric Transmitter Control Code assigned to the organization or individual requesting the extension (if a number has been assigned).

(g) The reason for the delay and date that you will be able to file.

(h) If you file for multiple payers, the request must include a list of all payers and their TIN (SSN or EIN).

An approved extension for magnetic media filing does not provide additional time for supplying a copy to the payee.

.02 If an extension of time to file on magnetic media is granted by the National Computer Center, a copy of the letter granting the extension MUST be attached to the transmittal Form 4804 or computer generated submission when the file is submitted.

SEC 9. PROCESSING OF MAGNETIC MEDIA REPORTS

.01 All data received at the National Computer Center for processing will be given the same protection as individual returns (1040), and will be returned to the originator after processing. Files that are received timely by the National Computer Center will be returned to the filers by August 15 of the year in which submitted.

.02 Due to the volume of input received and the cost to return special containers, special shipping containers should not be used for transmitting data to the National Computer Center since IRS cannot guarantee return of such containers.

.03 Files will be returned to you for correction if they are unprocessable due to format or coding errors, or by the request of the filer. Unprocessable files must be corrected and returned to the National Computer Center within 30 days of your receipt or the payer may be subject to a failure to file penalty. The corrected files will be returned to the filer by the National Computer Center within 6 months of receipt. PLEASE BE SURE THAT YOUR FORMAT AND CODING COMPLY WITH THIS REVENUE PROCEDURE. THIS REVENUE PROCEDURE IS TO BE USED FOR THE PREPARATION OF TAX YEAR 1986 INFORMATION RETURNS ONLY. LEGISLATIVE AND FORMS CHANGES AFFECTING INFORMATION RETURNS MAY OCCUR EACH YEAR. THIS PROCEDURE IS UPDATED TO REFLECT NECESSARY CHANGES. PLEASE READ THIS PUBLICATION CAREFULLY.

SEC. 10. HOW TO FILE CORRECTED RETURNS

.01 The filing requirements listed in Part A, Sec. 1 apply to both original and corrected returns. Corrections should be aggregated and filed as soon as possible but not later than October 1 of each year. ALL FIELDS OR BOXES MUST BE COMPLETED WITH THE CORRECT INFORMATION, NOT JUST THE DATA FIELDS NEEDING CORRECTION. Submit corrections only for the returns filed in error, not the entire file. If your complete file is in error, contact the National Computer Center immediately. If you file corrected returns on paper forms, submit Copy A to the appropriate service center. There are numerous types of errors. It may require more than one transaction to properly correct the initial error. In prior years, diskette position 6 of Sector 1 of the "B" Record was used as the corrected return indicator. This has now been changed to position 7. You must adjust your program. You are strongly encouraged to read this ENTIRE section before attempting to make ANY correction. If the initial return was filed as an aggregate, you must consider this in filing the corrected return.

.02 Corrected returns submitted to IRS on magnetic media, using a "G" coded Payee "B" Record, may be submitted on the same diskette as those corrections submitted without the "G" code; however, they must be submitted using a separate "A" Record. Corrected returns for different tax years may not be submitted on the same file. Corrected returns are to be identified as corrections on the transmittal document and the EXTERNAL affixed label of the file.

.03 The instructions that follow will provide information on how to file corrected returns on magnetic media. The 1986 "Instructions for Forms 1099, 1098, 5498, 1096, and W-2G" provide more specific instructions for filing corrections on paper forms and are available from IRS.

.04 If you are not required to file your corrections on magnetic media and you file them on paper forms, do not submit the paper returns to the National Computer Center. All paper returns, whether original or corrected, must be filed with the appropriate service center. Corrected returns filed on magnetic media must be filed with the National Computer Center. Refer to Part A, Sec. 13 for the address.

.05 Statements to the recipient or participant should be identified as "CORRECTED" and should be provided to them as soon as possible.

.06 If you file corrected returns on paper forms, use IRS forms or acceptable OCR scannable paper substitutes. Pinhole feeds on the forms are not acceptable. Always submit Copy A to the appropriate service center. NOTE: Form W-2G is not required to be in OCR scannable format. Publication 1179, "Specifications for Paper Substitutes for Forms 1096, 1098, 1099, 5498, and W-2G" provides requirements and instructions.

.07 For instructions on filing information returns with IRS, refer to the 1986 "Instructions for Forms 1099, 1098, 5498, 1096, and W-2G." If these instructions are not included in your magnetic media reporting packages, request a copy from IRS.

.08 Type or machine print in black carbon based ink all information on returns filed on paper. Print money amounts without dollar signs ($), ampersands (&), asterisks (*), commas (,), or other special characters. Use decimal points (.) to indicate dollars and cents on paper forms only.

.09 Use the proper form. If you are in doubt, review the instructions noted in .07 above or contact IRS.

.10 Use only the boxes provided on the paper forms. Do not add additional boxes.

.11 Do not change the title of any box on any forms and do not insert data in the untitled shaded areas.

.12 Use the same name and TIN (SSN or EIN) for the filer on the Form 1096 transmittal form and all related forms that follow.

.13 A separate transmittal Form 1096 is required for each type of paper information return filed in the 1098, 5498, W–2G, and 1099 series. DO NOT USE THE SAME TRANSMITTAL DOCUMENT TO FILE ORIGINAL AND CORRECTED RETURNS WHETHER ON PAPER FORMS OR MAGNETIC MEDIA. A transmittal Form 4804 or computer generated substitute is used to transmit magnetic media. A Form 4802 is a continuation form for a Form 4804. Please utilize a Form 4802 if you file on magnetic media for multiple payers and are an authorized agent for the payers.

.14 Do not cut, staple, fold, paperclip, tape, or use rubberbands on any paper information returns filed with IRS. This could impair the OCR scanning process. No photocopies of any forms are allowable.

.15 Use the correct tax year's forms to file information returns with IRS (i.e., do not submit tax year 1986 returns using 1985 forms). The same is true for magnetic media filing. You must submit your returns filed on magnetic media using the revenue procedure for the tax year of the returns. Forms and revenue procedures are normally updated each year to include necessary changes.

.16 Most information returns contain a "VOID" box and a "CORRECTED" box. The "VOID" box is used only if you make an error while typing or printing the paper forms. Mark this box ONLY when you wish the return to be disregarded or passed over. The OCR scanner at the service centers will not read a "VOID" return; it will pass over it and go to the next form if the "VOID" box is marked. Do not confuse the "VOID" box and the "CORRECTED" box.

.17 On magnetic media files, the Payee "B" Record provides space to enter a Payer's Account Number for the Payee. This same account number may be provided on paper forms. In order to properly file corrected returns, this number will help identify the appropriate incorrect return. DO NOT ENTER A TIN (SSN OR EIN). A PAYER'S ACCOUNT NUMBER FOR THE PAYEE MAY BE A CHECKING ACCOUNT NUMBER, SAVINGS ACCOUNT NUMBER, SERIAL NUMBER OR ANY OTHER NUMBER ASSIGNED TO THE PAYEE BY THE PAYER, THAT WILL DISTINGUISH THE SPECIFIC ACCOUNT. THIS NUMBER MUST APPEAR ON THE INITIAL RETURN AND ON THE CORRECTED RETURN IN ORDER TO IDENTIFY AND PROCESS THE CORRECTION PROPERLY.

.18 REVIEW THE GUIDELINES THAT FOLLOW. The types of errors made will normally fall under one of the three categories listed. Next to each type of error made, you will find a list of instructions to tell you how to properly file the corrected return for that type of error. READ ALL OF THE INSTRUCTIONS LISTED AND FOLLOW THEM FOR THE TYPE OF ERROR MADE ON THE INITIAL RETURN. IN SOME CASES TWO TRANSACTIONS ARE REQUIRED TO PROPERLY FILE CORRECTIONS. IF THE ORIGINAL RETURN WAS FILED AS AN AGGREGATE, YOU MUST CONSIDER THIS IN FILING THE CORRECTED RETURNS.

If the 1986 form is not available, write, type or machine print in uppercase letters "MAGNETIC MEDIA CORRECTION" at the top of the transmittal form or computer generated substitute. 3. Provide ALL requested information correctly. 4. Include a hardcopy print, listing or diskette dump exhibiting a small sample of each type of record (A, B, C, and F), which can be reviewed for accuracy and acceptability of record format. 5. If you are a Combined Federal/State filer, IRS will not transmit corrected returns to the state. This will be the responsibility of the filer. B. 1098, 1099 Series, 5498 and W–2G Returns 1. Use a separate Payer/Transmitter "A" Record for each type of return being reported. The information in the "A" Record will be exactly the same as it was in the original submission using the same incorrect type of return indicator. 2. The corrected Payee "B" Record must contain the same information as submitted previously EXCEPT: insert a "G" code in diskette position 7 of the "B" Record and for ALL payment amounts used, enter "0" (zero). (In prior years, diskette position 6 of Sector 1 of the "B" Record was used as the corrected return indicator. This has now been changed to position 7. You must adjust your programs.) 3. Corrected returns submitted to IRS using a "G" coded "B" Record may be submitted on the same diskette as those returns submitted without the "G" code; however, separate "A" Records are required. 4. Mark the EXTERNAL label of the diskette "MAGNETIC MEDIA CORRECTION." 5. Submit the diskette(s), a diskette dump showing sample records coded for this type of filing, and the transmittal document to the National Computer Center. (Refer to Part A, Sec. 13 for the address.)

TRANSACTION 2: Report correct information

A. Form 4804 and 4802 (or computer generated substitute)

1. If you submit records with the corrected information on a separate diskette from those that are "G" coded, prepare a new transmittal Form 4804 (and 4802 if you file for multiple payers), or a computer generated substitute, that includes information related to this new file.
2. Mark the Correction box in Block 1 of the 1986 revised copy of Form 4804. If the 1986 form is not available, write, type or machine print in uppercase letters "MAGNETIC MEDIA CORRECTION" at the top of the transmittal form or computer generated substitute.
3. Provide ALL requested information correctly.
4. Include a hardcopy print, listing or diskette dump exhibiting a small sample of each type of record (A, B, C, and F), which can be reviewed for accuracy and acceptability of record format.
5. If you are a Combined Federal/State filer, IRS will not transmit corrected returns to the state. This will be the responsibility of the filer.

B. 1098, 1099 Series, 5498 and W–2G Returns

1. Prepare a new file with the correct information in ALL records.
2. Use a separate Payer/Transmitter "A" Record for each type of return being reported and use the correct Type Of Return indicator.
3. Do not code the Payee "B" Record as a corrected return for this type of correction. (Remove the "G" Code.)
4. Provide all of the correct information.
5. Mark the EXTERNAL label of the diskette "MAGNETIC MEDIA CORRECTION."
6. Submit the diskette(s), a diskette dump showing sample records coded for this type of filing, and the transmittal document to the National Computer Center. (Refer to Part A, Sec. 13 for the address.)

SEC. 11. TAXPAYER IDENTIFICATION NUMBERS

.01 Under section 6109 of the Internal Revenue Code, recipients of all reportable payments on information returns are required to furnish taxpayer identification numbers (TINs) to the payer. The number must be furnished to the payer whether or not the payee is required to file a tax return or is covered by social security. Refer to Part A, Sec. 15 for a definition of taxpayer identification number (TIN).

.02 The recipient's TIN is used to associate and verify amounts reported to IRS with corresponding amounts on tax returns. Therefore, it is particularly important that correct social security and employer identification numbers for payees be provided on magnetic media or paper forms submitted to IRS. DO NOT ENTER HYPHENS, ALPHA CHARACTERS, ALL 9s OR ALL ZEROS.

.03 Under section 6676 of the Internal Revenue Code, a $50 penalty applies for each failure to furnish a TIN to another person who is required to file an information return, and for each failure to include a TIN on an information return. The penalty applies unless the failure to comply is due to reasonable cause and not willful neglect.

.04 With respect to all payers of interest and dividends, section 6676 of the Internal Revenue Code provides that the payer must self-assess a $50 penalty for each failure to include a payee's TIN or each inclusion of an incorrect TIN on an information return, unless the payer can demonstrate the payer met the due diligence requirements in attempting to acquire correct TINs for payees. Use Form 8210, Self-Assessed Penalties Return.

.05 For any reportable payment, if the payee fails to provide a TIN to the payer, then backup withholding must be instituted for that payee. If the payer receives another TIN in the manner required from the payee within 30 days of notice from IRS, no backup withholding is required. If the payee has applied for a TIN, the payee may certify to this on Form W–9 by noting "Applied For" in the TIN block and by signing the form. This form then becomes an "awaiting-TIN certificate." If the TIN is not received and certified, if required, within 60 days, begin withholding and continue until you receive a TIN in the manner required.

.06 The TIN to be furnished to IRS depends primarily upon the manner in which the account is maintained or set up on the payer's record. The TIN to be provided must be that of the owner of the account. If the account is recorded in more than one name, furnish the TIN and name of one of the owners of the account. The TIN provided must be associated with the name of the payee provided in the first name line of the Payee "B" Record. For individuals, including sole proprietors, the payee TIN is the payee's social security number. For other entities, the payee TIN is the payee's employer identification number.

.07 Sole proprietors who are payers should show their employer identification number in the Payer/Transmitter "A" Record. However, sole proprietors who are not otherwise required to have an employer identification number should use their social security number.

.08 Sole proprietors' social security numbers must be used in the Payee "B" Record.

.09 The charts below will help you determine the number to be furnished to IRS for recipients of reportable payments (payees).

SEC. 12. EFFECT ON PAPER RETURNS

.01 Diskette reporting of the information returns listed in Part A, Sec. 1 applies only to the original (Copy A).

.02 For payments of dividends or interest (reported on Forms 1099–DIV, 1099–PATR, 1099–INT or 1099–OID), the payer is required to furnish an official Form 1099 to a payee either in a separate mailing by First-Class mail or in person. These forms may not be combined or mailed with other information furnished to the recipient except Forms W–8, W–9, or other Forms 1099. The payer may use substitute Forms 1099 if they utilize the proper language, are substantially similar to the official forms and if the payer complies with all revenue procedures relating to substitute Forms 1099 in effect at the time (see Publication 1179). Copy B (For Recipient) of the substitute forms must contain the statement "This is important tax information and is being furnished to IRS. If you are required to file a return, a negligence penalty or other sanction will be imposed on you if this income is taxable and IRS determines that it has not been reported." The substitute form must contain instructions substantially similar to those on the back of Copy B of the official form.

.03 Statements to recipients for Forms 1098, 1099–A, 1099–B, 1099–G, 1099–MISC (except for substitute payments in lieu of dividends and tax-exempt interest), 1099–R, 5498, or W–2G need not be a copy of the paper form filed with IRS. It is important that income items be properly classified for Federal tax purposes on the statement the payer gives to recipients. The message "This information is being furnished to IRS" must appear on the statements. In addition, Form 1098 statements must contain the message "The amount shown is deductible by you for Federal income tax purposes only to the extent it was actually paid by you and not reimbursed by another person. The space provisions on official paper forms do not agree with those used in magnetic media. The amount of space on paper forms is less than that allowed on magnetic media. Filers may wish to seek a substitute form for Copy B (For Recipient) that accommodates the space provisions used in magnetic media. Payers are permitted considerable flexibility in designing Copy B of the information return to be furnished to the payee. The payer may combine the information return data with other reports or financial or commercial notices as long as all required information is present and worded properly and the payee's copy is conducive to proper reporting of income on tax returns. (This does not apply to Forms 1099–INT, 1099–OID, 1099–DIV, and 1099–PATR. See .02 above for the requirements for these four forms.) However, when information not requested on the official form is included on these substitute statements, they can no longer be mailed with recipient copies of 1099–DIV, INT, OID, or PATR without violating the separate mailing requirements.

.04 If a portion of the returns is reported on diskette and the remainder is reported on paper forms, those returns not submitted on diskette (including corrected returns) may require a waiver depending on the type of return and volume. Returns filed on paper must be filed on official forms or on acceptable paper substitutes meeting the specifications in Publication 1179.

Do not submit proposed substitutes of Copy A to the National Computer Center.

Your proposed substitutes must comply to the official form and the specifications outlined in Publication 1179. Request a copy of Publication 1179 from an IRS office for information concerning paper substitutes. Do not submit any substitutes for approval. Only those forms that comply with the official form and the specifications in Publication 1179 are acceptable.

SEC. 13. TO CONTACT THE IRS NATIONAL COMPUTER CENTER

Magnetic Media Reporting
Internal Revenue Service

Hours of operation at this address will be 8:30 A.M. until 8:00 P.M. Eastern Time Zone. The telephone number is (304) 263-8700.

Requests for paper returns, publications or forms not related to magnetic media processing should be requested from local IRS offices or by calling the toll-free number in your area.

.02 The National Computer Center will process returns filed on magnetic media only. All information returns, including corrections, filed on paper forms should be submitted to the appropriate service center, not the National Computer Center. Organizations who file their information returns on magnetic media but who submit their corrected returns on paper forms, refer to the 1986 "Instructions for Forms 1099, 1098, 5498, 1096, and W–2G" for the service center addresses.

SEC. 14. COMBINED FEDERAL/STATE FILING

.01 The Combined Federal/State Program was established to simplify information returns filing for the taxpayer. IRS will accept, upon prior approval, diskette files containing state reporting information only for those states listed in Table 1 in this section. FORMS 1098, 1099–A, 1099–B, AND W-2G CANNOT BE FILED UNDER THE COMBINED FEDERAL/STATE FILING PROGRAM.

.02 To request approval to participate in the Combined Federal/State Program, a "test" file, coded for this program, must be submitted by the transmitter to the IRS National Computer Center between August 15 and December 15 using the revenue procedure that will be used for the actual data files. Blanket approval will not be given to software packages. The "test" file is only required for the first year. Once you are approved, you do not need to resubmit "tests" each year, except when notified by IRS. Refer to Part A, Sec. 13 for the address. See Part A, Sec. 5.04 for general guidelines on submission of "test" files. Each record, both in the "test" file and actual data file, must conform exactly to the revenue procedure for the tax year of the actual data. Combined Federal/State records must be coded using each state's dollar criteria from Table 2 of this section for each type of return.

If the "test" diskette is determined to be acceptable, IRS will return it to the filer with Form 6847, Consent for Internal Revenue Service to Release Tax Information. The payer must complete Form 6847. The five character alpha/numeric Transmitter Control Code must be included on the form. The form should then be returned to IRS before IRS will release tax information to any of the participating states.

Form 6847 must be signed by one of the individuals listed at the bottom of the form. If the form is signed by an attorney-in-fact, the written consent from the taxpayer to the attorney-in-fact must be included with the Form 6847. This consent by language and/or scope must clearly indicate that the attorney-in-fact is empowered to authorize release of the information document returns to the state(s). A separate Form 6847 is required for each payer. A transmitter may not combine payers on one Form 6847 even though acting as attorney-in-fact for several payers. Form 6847 may be photocopied if you receive an insufficient number of the form. If you have filed on this program in the past and have not met these requirements, you must resubmit the Form 6847 with the proper signatures as specified. If you file for multiple payers, only code the records to go to the state(s) for those payers that participate and have properly submitted Form 6847. Do not submit actual data records coded for the Combined Federal/State Program without prior approval from IRS.

.03 States that participate in this program and the valid state code assigned to each are listed in Table 1 of this section. If the state that you wish information released to does not participate in the program, do not code your records for that state. If the state participates, if you have received prior approval, and if all other conditions are met, IRS will forward the tax information to the participating state at no charge to the filer.

.04 IF CORRECTIONS MUST BE MADE, IRS WILL NOT TRANSMIT CORRECTED RETURNS TO THE STATES. THIS WILL BE THE RESPONSIBILITY OF THE FILER.

.05 IRS will make no attempt to process files with any deviations. Approval to participate in the Combined Federal/State Program will be revoked if any files are submitted that do not totally conform.

.06 IRS is acting as a forwarding agent ONLY. Some participating states require separate notification that you are filing in this manner. It is your responsibility to contact the appropriate state(s) for further information.

.07 The appropriate state code should be entered for those documents which meet the state's filing requirements. It is the filer's responsibility to determine the state code to be used and to obtain the filing requirements from the appropriate state(s).

.08 If you meet all of the requirements for this program, you must provide the state totals from the "K" Record on a separate Form 4804, Transmittal of Information Returns on Magnetic Media (or Form 4802, Transmittal For Multiple Magnetic Media Reporting) or computer generated substitute for each state, or you must include a listing which identifies each state and the "K" Record totals for each.

.09 If you have met ALL of the above conditions:

(a) You must submit all records using 128 or 256 position sectors which indicate the appropriate coding related to this program.

(b) The "C" Record must be followed by a "K" Record for each state. The "K" Record indicates the number of payees being reported to each particular state.

(c) Payment amount totals and the valid participating state code must be included in the state totals "K" Record. Refer to Part B, Sec. 16 (or Part C, Sec. 14) for a description of the "K" Record.

(d) The "K" Record is followed by an end of transmission "F" Record (if this is the last record of the entire file).

.10 Only those states listed in Table 1 below will receive information from IRS. It is the filer's responsibility to file information returns with states that do not participate in this program.

PART B. SINGLE DENSITY DISKETTE SPECIFICATIONS

SECTION 1. GENERAL

.01 The specifications contained in this part of the revenue procedure define the required format and contents of the records to be included in a single density diskette file. These specifications must be adhered to unless deviations have been specifically granted by IRS.

.02 To be compatible, a single density diskette file must meet the following specifications in total:

(a) 8 inches in diameter.

(b) recorded in EBCDIC.

(c) contain 77 tracks of which:

(1) Track 0 is the index track (the operating system reserves track 0 for the directory information and writes the file name and location in the directory; data cannot be written in track 0).

(2) Tracks 1 through 73 are data tracks.

(3) Track 74 is unused.

(4) Tracks 75 and 76 are alternate data tracks.

(d) each Track must contain 26 sectors.

(e) each Sector must contain 128 bytes.

(f) data must be recorded on only one side of the diskette.

(g) IRS can process single sided, single density, soft sectored diskettes as well as double sided, double density, soft sectored diskettes. Part C provides specifications for double density diskettes which have sectors of 256 bytes.

(h) an IBM 5360 compatible diskette would meet the above specifications. Hard sectored diskettes are not compatible.

.03 Payers who can substantially conform to these specifications, but who require some minor deviations, MUST contact the National Computer Center. Under no circumstances may diskettes deviating from the specifications in this revenue procedure be submitted without prior approval from IRS. If you file under the Combined Federal/State Program, your files must conform totally to this revenue procedure.

.04 An external affixed label, Form 5064, must appear on each diskette submitted for processing. The following information is needed:

(a) The transmitter's name.

(b) The five character alpha/numeric Transmitter Control Code.

(c) State of sender (e.g., NY).

(d) Density (used by magnetic tape filers only).

(e) Check box (used by magnetic tape filers only).

(f) Track (used by magnetic tape filers only).

(g) Recording code (e.g., EBCDIC or ASCII). Diskette filers enter EBCDIC.

(h) The tax year of the data (e.g., 1986).

(i) Document types (e.g., 1099–INT).

(j) The total number of "B" Records after each "A" Record (this figure is taken from the "C" Records).

(k) A number assigned by the transmitter to the diskette.

(l) The sequence of each diskette (e.g., 001 of 008).

The external media label, From 5064, was updated for tax year 1986. You must use the updated label. This information will assist IRS in processing the file or in locating a file, should the transmitter request that it be returned due to errors. IRS advises that special shipping containers not be used for transmitting data since it cannot be guaranteed that they will be returned.

SEC. 2. DISKETTE HEADER LABEL

The header label on the diskette must be formatted as shown in the following layout: (If your system automatically creates a header label, this is not necessary).

HDR1	Blank	Data Set Name (For Transmitter's Use)	Blank	Sector Length	Blank	Beginning of Extent (BOE)
(a)	(b)	(c)	(b)	(d)	(b)	(e)
1–4	5	6–13	14–22	23–27	28	29–33

Blank	End of Extent (EOE)	Blank	Bypass Data Set	Data Set Accessibility	Write Protect	Blank
(b)	(f)	(b)	(g)	(h)	(i)	(b)
34	35–39	40	41	42	43	44

Multi-Volume	Blank	Expiration Date YYMMDD	Verify Mark	Blank	End of Data (EOD)
(j)	(b)	(k)	(l)	(b)	(m)
45	46–66	67–72	73	74	75–79

(a) Header 1—Positions 1 through 4; enter HDR1.

(b) Unused—Any field marked blank is unused and should contain only blanks.

(c) Data Set Name—Positions 6 through 13; you can use this field to identify your data set.

(d) Sector Length—Positions 23 through 27; enter the sector length 128, right-justify and fill positions 23 and 24 with zeros.

(e) Beginning of Extent (BOE)—Positions 29 through 33; enter the five-digit address designated for the first record of this data set. For example, if the first record is to go in track 01, sector 02, enter 01002, or xx0yy where xx is the track number and yy is the sector number.

(f) End of Extent (EOE)—Positions 35 through 39; enter the five-digit address of the last position of the disk reserved for this data set. For example, to reserve the entire disk for a data set, enter 73026.

(g) Bypass Data Set—Position 41; enter B if you want to bypass this data set; otherwise, enter a blank.

(h) Data Set Accessibility—Positions 42; enter a blank. Any other character in this field causes the equipment to refuse the disk.

(i) Write Protect—Position 43; this field defines the protected status of the associated data set. P = read only; blank = read/write. With P in this position, you can only select the Update (U) mode.

(j) Multi-Volume—Position 45; this field indicates whether a complete data set is on a disk. Blank = data set complete; C = data set continued on another disk; L = last disk of a multi-disk data set.

(k) Expiration Date—Positions 67 through 72; may be used to contain the date that the data set expires. The format is YYMMDD where YY is the year, MM is the month and DD is the day.

(l) Verify Mark—Position 73; this single character field shows if the data set is verified. If it is, enter V, if it is not verified, enter a blank.

(m) End of Data (EOD)—Positions 75–79; enter the track number in positions 75 and 76, enter a "0" (zero) in position 77 and enter the sector number in positions 78 and 79.

SEC. 3. PAYER/TRANSMITTER "A" RECORD

.01 Identifies the payer and transmitter of the diskette and provides parameters for the succeeding Payee "B" Records. IRS computer programs rely on the absolute relationship between the parameters and data fields in the "A" Record and the data fields in the "B" Records to which they apply.

.02 The number of "A" Records appearing on a diskette will depend on the number of payers and the different types of returns being reported. After the header label on the diskette, the first record appearing in the file must be an "A" Record. For diskette filing, the actual record lengths for the "A" and "B" Records must agree with whatever is entered in diskette positions 29–31 and 32–34 of the "A" Record.

A transmitter may include Payee "B" Records for more than one payer on a diskette; however, each GROUP of Payee "B" Records must be preceded by an "A" Record. A single diskette may also contain different types of returns, but the returns MUST not be intermingled. A separate "A" Record is required for each payer and each type of return being reported. An "A" Record may be blocked with "B" Records; however, the initial record on a file must be an "A" Record. The IRS will accept an "A" Record after a "C" Record.

.03 All alpha characters entered in the "A" Record should be upper-case.

.04 WHEN REPORTING FORM 1098, "MORTGAGE INTEREST STATEMENT," THE "A" RECORD WILL REFLECT THE NAME OF THE RECIPIENT OF THE INTEREST. THE "B" RECORD WILL REFLECT THE INDIVIDUAL PAYING THE INTEREST AND THE AMOUNT PAID.

If the Payer/Transmitter is not participating in the Combined Federal/State Filing Program, enter blanks. (Refer to Part A, Sec. 14 for the requirements that must be met prior to actual participation in this program.) Forms 1098, 1099–A, 1099–B, and W–2G cannot be filed on this program. Filers who participate in this program must incorporate state totals into corresponding "K" Records as described in Part B, Sec. 16.

19–27	Amount Indicators	9	REQUIRED. In most cases, the boxes or Amount Indicators on paper information returns correspond with the Amount Codes used to file on magnetic media; however, should you notice discrepancies, between this revenue procedure and paper forms, please disregard them and program according to this revenue procedure for your returns filed on magnetic media. For specific instructions on information to be reported in each Amount Code, refer to the 1986 "Instructions for Forms 1099, 1098, 5498, 1096, and W–2G." The amount indicators entered for a given type of return indicate type(s) of payment(s) which were made. For each Amount Code entered in this field, a corresponding payment amount must appear in the Payee "B" Record. Example: If position 18 of the Payer/Transmitter "A" Record is "6" (for 1099–INT) and positions 19–27 are "123bbbbbb", this indicates that 3 payment amount fields are present in all of the following Payee "B" Records. The first payment amount field in the Payee "B" Record will represent Earnings from savings and loan associations, credit unions, bank deposits, bearer certificates of deposit, etc., the second will represent Amount of forfeiture, and the third will represent Federal income tax withheld. Enter the Amount Indicators in ASCENDING SEQUENCE, (i.e., 1247bbbbb), left-justify, filling unused positions with blanks. For any further clarification of the Amount Indicator codes, you may contact the IRS National Computer Center.

6	Medical and health care payments
7	Nonemployee compensation
8	Direct sales "indicator" (see NOTE 1)
9	Substitute payments in lieu of dividends or interest (see NOTE 2)

NOTE 1: Use Amount Code "8" to report that direct sales of consumer products of $5,000 or more to the payee on a buy-sell, deposit-commission, or other basis for resale were made. Do not use this indicator for sales of less than $5,000. The use of Amount Code "8" actually reflects an indicator of direct sales and not an actual payment amount or amount code. The corresponding payment amount field in the Payee "B" Record MUST be reflected as 0000000100. This does not mean that a payment of $1.00 was made or is being reported. The use of Amount Code "8" relates directly to Sector 1, diskette position "5", Document Specific Code and NOTE 2 of the Payment Amount Field in the Payee "B" Record. (If you use Amount Code "8" in the "A" Record, you will enter a "1" in diskette position "5" of Sector 1 of the "B" Record. For any other 1099–MISC Amount Codes, you will enter a "0" (zero) in diskette position "5" of Sector 1 of the "B" Record.)

NOTE 2: Brokers are subject to a reporting requirement for payments received after 1984. Brokers who transfer securities of a customer for use in short sale must use Amount Code 9 to report the aggregate payments received in lieu of dividends or tax-exempt interest on behalf of a customer while the short sale was open. Generally, for substitute payments in lieu of dividends, a broker is required to file a Form 1099–MISC for each affected customer who is not an individual. Refer to the 1986 "Instructions for Form 1099, 1098, 5498, 1096, and W–2G" for detailed information. The instructions are available from IRS offices.

NOTE 3: If you are reporting Excess Golden Parachute Payments, use paper forms 1099–MISC. Do not report these payments on magnetic media. See Part A, Sec. 15 for a definition of an Excess Golden Parachute Payment.

SEC. 5. PAYEE "B" RECORDS—GENERAL INFORMATION FOR ALL FORMS

.01 This section contains the general information concerning the Payee "B" Record for all information returns. For a detailed description of the record refer to the following:

(a) Sec. 6. PAYEE "B" RECORDS—FIELD DESCRIPTIONS FOR FORMS 1098, 1099–DIV, 1099–G, 1099–INT, 1099–MISC, 1099–OID, 1099–PATR, 1099–R, and 5498.

(b) Sec. 8. PAYEE "B" RECORD—FIELD DESCRIPTIONS FOR FORMS 1099–A.

(c) Sec. 10. PAYEE "B" RECORD—FIELD DESCRIPTIONS FOR FORM 1099–B.

(d) Sec. 12. PAYEE "B" RECORD—FIELD DESCRIPTIONS FOR FORM W–2G.

.02 The Payee "B" Record contains the payment information from the individual statements. When filing information documents on diskette(s), the format for the Payee "B" Records will vary in relation to the number of payment amount fields being reported. The number of payment amount fields will depend upon the number of Payment Amount Indicator Codes used in positions 19–27 of the Payer/Transmitter "A" Record. For example, if you are reporting 1099–INT, position 18 of the Payer/Transmitter "A" Record will be coded with a "6." If the Amount Indicators used to report this interest are Amount Codes "1," "2," and "3," then diskette positions 19–27 of the "A" Record will be coded "123bbbbbb" (b represents a blank position). To correspond with Amount Indicators "1," "2," and "3" of the "A" Record, the "B" Record will contain three payment amount fields. Diskette positions 32–41 of the Payee "B" Record will contain the payment amount to be reported for Amount Code "1" (earnings from savings and loan associations, credit unions, bank deposits, bearer certificates of deposits, etc.); diskette positions 42–51 of the "B" Record would contain the payment amount to be reported for Amount Code "2" (amount of forfeiture); and diskette positions 52–61 of the "B" Record would contain the payment amount to be reported for Amount Code "3" (Federal income tax withheld). The First Payee Name Line must begin immediately after the last payment amount that is indicated as being used. In this example, the First Payee Name Line would begin in diskette position 62.

.03 All payee records must contain correct payee name and address information entered in the fields prescribed in this section. Records containing an invalid TIN (SSN or EIN) and having no address data present may be returned for correction. In searching for a payee address, if your efforts fail and you know that the address is invalid, supply the invalid address rather than leave the field blank.

.04 IRS must be able to identify the surname associated with the TIN (SSN or EIN) furnished on a statement. The specifications below include a field in the payee records called "Name Control" in which the first four alphabetic characters of the payee's surname or last name are to be entered by the payers. The surname or last name should appear first in the First Payee Name Line of all Payee "B" Records; however, if your records have been developed using the first name first, IRS programs will accept this but a blank must appear between the first and last name.

.05 If payers are unable to provide the first four characters of the surname, the Name Control Field may be left blank; however, compliance with the following will facilitate IRS computer programs in generating the Name Control.

(a) The surname of the payee whose TIN (SSN or EIN) is shown in the Payee "B" Record should always appear first. If, however, you enter the first name first, you must leave a blank space between the first and last name.

(b) In the case of multiple payees, only the surname of the payee whose TIN (SSN or EIN) is shown in the Payee "B" Record must be present in the First Payee Name Line. Surnames of any other payees in the record must be entered in the Second Payee Name Line.

.06 Provision is also made in these specifications for data entries required by state or local governments. This should minimize the Payer/Transmitter's programming burden should payers desire to report on diskette to state or local governments. See Part A, Sec. 14, for the Combined Federal/State filing requirements.

.07 For those filers participating in the Combined Federal/State Filing Program, positions 127 and 128 or 255 and 256 in the Payee "B" Record Sector 2 or 3 must contain the appropriate state code for the state to receive the information. The file should also meet the money criteria described in Part A, Sec. 14.11. Do not code for the states unless prior approval to participate has been granted by IRS. See Part A, Sec. 14 for a list of the valid participating state codes. FORMS 1098, 1099–A, 1099–B, AND W–2G CANNOT BE FILED UNDER THE COMBINED FEDERAL/STATE FILING PROGRAM. Your files must meet all of the requirements specified in Part A, Sec. 14 in order to participate in this program.

.08 All alpha characters entered in the "B" Record should be upper-case.

.09 IRS STRONGLY ENCOURAGES FILERS TO REVIEW THEIR DATA FOR ACCURACY BEFORE SUBMISSION TO PREVENT ERRONEOUS NOTICES BEING MAILED TO PERSONS FOR WHOM REPORTS ARE FILED. FILERS SHOULD BE ESPECIALLY CAREFUL THAT THEIR TAXPAYER NAMES, SOCIAL SECURITY NUMBERS (SSNs), ACCOUNT NUMBERS, TYPES OF INCOME, AND INCOME AMOUNTS ARE CORRECT. ALTHOUGH IRS ENCOURAGES PAYERS TO FILL IN THE PAYER'S ACCOUNT NUMBER FOR THE PAYEE FIELD, THEY SHOULD NOT INCLUDE EXTRANEOUS DIGITS AS THE FIELD IS LIMITED, IN MAGNETIC MEDIA FILING, TO 10 POSITIONS.

10. WHEN REPORTING FORM 1098, "MORTGAGE INTEREST STATEMENT," THE "A" RECORD WILL REFLECT THE NAME OF THE RECIPIENT OF THE INTEREST. THE "B" RECORD WILL REFLECT THE INDIVIDUAL PAYING THE INTEREST AND THE AMOUNT PAID.

SEC. 6. PAYEE "B" RECORD—FIELD DESCRIPTIONS FOR FORMS 1098, 1099–DIV, 1099–G, 1099–INT, 1099–MISC, 1099–OID, 1099–PATR, 1099–R, AND 5498

.01 This section contains the general payment information from individual statements for Forms 1098, 1099–A, 1099–DIV, 1099–G, 1099–INT, 1099–MISC, 1099–OID, 1099–PATR, 1099–R, and 5498.

.02 In most instances each Payee "B" Record will be composed of two sectors on the diskette with positions 1-41 being a constant format and the variance occurring in positions 42-128 of the first sector and the entire second sector. In those instances where six or more payment amount fields are reported, each Payee "B" Record will be composed of three sectors on the diskette with positions 1-41 of the first sector being a constant format and the variance occurring in positions 42-128 of the first sector and the entire second and third sectors.

(In prior years, diskette position 6 was used as a corrected return indicator. This position was needed for the Document Specific Code. Diskette position 7 now represents a corrected return. You must adjust your programs.)			FOR ALL OTHER FORMS, ENTER BLANK. If only one code is used, left-justify and blank fill.
	Category of Total Distribution (Form 1099–R only)		Use only for reporting on Form 1099–R to identify the category of Total Distribution. You may select two codes except when using Code 9. Enter the applicable code from the table below. Code 7 below is not required for Amount Indicators 1, 2, and 3. A "0" (zero) is not a valid code for Form 1099–R. If you are reporting a distribution from a KEOGH plan, or from any other distribution, to which the following codes do not apply, enter blanks in this field. Category — Code Premature distribution (other than codes 2, 3, 4, 5, 8, or P) — 1 Rollover — 2 Disability — 3 Death (includes payments to a beneficiary) — 4 Prohibited transaction — 5 Other — 6 Normal IRA, SEP or DEC distributions — 7 Excess contributions refunded plus earnings on such excess contributions — 8 PS 58 Costs (see NOTE) — 9 Excess contributions refunded plus earnings on such excess contributions taxable in 1985 — P Qualifies for 10-year averaging — A Qualifies for death benefit exclusion — B Qualifies for both A and B — C NOTE: PS 58 Costs may be reported on Form 1099–R; however, Form W–2P (filed with SSA) is preferable. Since this is not actually a total distribution, a separate "B" Record is required to report PS 58 Costs. These costs may not be reported in combination with a total distribution. Refer to the 1986 "Instructions for Forms 1099, 1098, 5498, 1096, and W–2G," available from IRS offices.
	Direct Sales (Form 1099–MISC only)		Use only for direct sales reporting on Form 1099–MISC. If sales to the recipient of consumer products on a buy-sell, deposit-commission, or any other basis for resale, have amounted to $5,000 or more, ENTER "1". If you are filing 1099–MISC, with an Amount Indicator of "8" in the "A" Record, you must enter a code "1" in this field. For all other 1099–MISC Amount Codes in the "A" Records, enter a "0" (zero) in this field. In Part B, Sec. 3, information concerning the direct sales indicator can be found under Amount Indicators, Form 1099–MISC, NOTE 1 in the "A" Record. This code will appear in position 5. Position 6 will be blank.
	Refund is for Tax Year (Form 1099–G only)		Use only for reporting the tax year for which the refund was issued. If the payment amount field associated with Amount Indicator 2, Income Tax Refunds, contains a refund, credit or offset that is attributable to an income tax which applies exclusively to income fewer than ten characters are required, right-justify filling the remaining positions with blanks.

	Payment Amount Fields (must be numeric)		The number of payment amounts is dependent upon and must agree with the number of Amount Indicators present in positions 19–27 of Sector 1 of the "A" Record. The First Payee Name Line must appear immediately after the last payment amount indicated as being used. For example, if you are reporting 1099–INT and you used only Amount Indicator "3" in the Payer/Transmitter "A" Record, then you will only use one ten position payment amount in the Payee "B" Record, right-justified, and the First Payee Name Line will begin in position 42. Each payment field that you allow for, or use, must contain 10 numeric characters (see NOTE 1). Do not provide a payment amount field when the corresponding Amount Indicator in the Payer/Transmitter "A" Record is blank. Each payment amount must be entered in dollars and cents. Do not enter dollar signs, commas, decimal points, or NEGATIVE PAYMENTS (except those items that reflect a loss on Form 1099–B and must be negative overpunched in the units position). Example: If the Amount Indicators are reflected as "123bbbbbb," the Payee "B" Records must have only 3 payment amount fields. If Amount Indicators are reflected as "12367bbbb," the "B" Records must have only 5 payment amount fields. Payment amounts MUST be right-justified and unused positions MUST be zero filled. Federal income tax withheld is not reported as a negative amount. NOTE 1: If any one payment amount exceeds "9999999999" (dollars and cents), as many SEPARATE Payee "B" Records as necessary to contain the total amount MUST be submitted for the Payee.

Diskette Position	Field Title	Length	Description and Remarks
13-21	Taxpayer Identification Number	9	REQUIRED. Enter the valid 9-digit Taxpayer Identification Number of the payee (SSN or EIN, as appropriate). Where an identification number has been applied for but not received or where there is any other legitimate cause for not having an identification number, enter blanks. Refer to Part A, Sec. 11. DO NOT ENTER HYPHENS, ALPHA CHARACTERS, ALL 9s OR ALL ZEROS. Any record containing an invalid identifying number in this field will be returned for correction.
22-31	Payer's Account Number for Payee	10	REQUIRED. Payer may use this field to enter the payee's account number. The use of this item will facilitate easy reference to specific records in the payer's file should any questions arise. DO NOT ENTER A TAXPAYER IDENTIFICATION NUMBER IN THIS FIELD. An account number can be any account number assigned by the payer to the payee (i.e, checking account, savings account, etc.). THIS NUMBER WILL HELP TO DISTINGUISH THE INDIVIDUAL PAYEE'S ACCOUNT WITH YOU AND SHOULD BE UNIQUE TO IDENTIFY THE SPECIFIC TRANSACTION MADE WITH THE ORGANIZATION, SHOULD MULTIPLE RETURNS BE FILED. This information will be particularly necessary if you need to file a corrected return. You are strongly encouraged to use the field. You may use any number that will help identify the particular transaction that you are reporting. If a number is not determinable, enter blanks. If fewer than ten characters are required, right-justify filling the remaining positions with blanks.
	Payment Amount Fields (must be numeric)		The number of payment amounts is dependent on the number of Amount Indicators present in positions 19–27 of Sector 1 of the "A" Record. The First Payee Name Line must appear immediately after the last payment amount indicated as being used. For example, if you are reporting 1099–INT and you used only Amount Indicator "3" in the Payer/Transmitter "A" Record, then you will only use one ten position payment amount in the Payee "B" Record, right-justified, and the First Payee Name Line will begin in position 42. Each payment field that you allow for, or use, must contain 10 numeric characters (see NOTE 1). Do not provide a payment amount field when the corresponding Amount Indicator in the Payer/Transmitter "A" Record is blank. Each payment amount must be entered in dollars and cents. Do not enter dollar signs, commas, decimal points, or NEGATIVE PAYMENTS (except those items that reflect a loss on Form 1099–B and must be negative overpunched in the units position). Example: If the Amount Indicators are reflected as "123bbbbbb", the Payee "B" Records must have only 3 payment amount fields. If Amount Indicators are reflected as "12367bbbb", the "B" Records must have only 5 payment amount fields. Payment amounts MUST be right-justified and unused positions MUST be zero filled. Federal income tax withheld is not reported as a negative amount. NOTE 1: If any one payment amount exceeds "9999999999" (dollars and cents), as many SEPARATE Payee "B" Records as necessary to contain the total amount MUST be submitted for the Payee.
32-41	Payment Amount 1	10	This amount is identified by the indicator in position 19 of Sector 1 of the Payer/Transmitter "A" Record. This amount must always be present.

SEC. 14. END OF PAYER "C" RECORD

.01 The Control Total fields have been expanded from 12 to 15 positions. Adjust your programs accordingly.

.02 The End of Payer "C" Record is a summary record for a type of return for a given payer. This record will contain the total number of payees and the totals of the payment amount fields filed by a given payer. The "C" Record must be written after the last "B" Record for each type of return for a given payer. For each "A" Record and group of "B" Records on the file, there must be a corresponding "C" Record.

.03 In developing the "C" Record, for example, if you used Amount Codes 1, 3, and 6 in the "A" Record, the totals from the "B" Records will appear in Control Totals 1, 2, and 3 of the "C" Record. Positions 54–128 would be zero filled in this example.

.04 Payers/Transmitters must verify the accuracy of the totals in the "C" Record and must enter the totals on the transmittal Form 4804, 4802 or computer generated substitute, which will accompany the shipment. The lines used on Forms 4804 and 4802 to record payment amounts correspond with the Amount Codes used in the "A" Record. These forms have been updated for 1986.

.05 The End of Payer "C" Record must be followed by a State Totals "K" Record (if any), or new Payer/Transmitter "A" Record for the next Payer (if any), or an End of Transmission "F" Record.

PART C. DOUBLE DENSITY DISKETTE SPECIFICATIONS

SECTION 1. GENERAL

.01 The specifications contained in this part of the revenue procedure prescribe the required format and contents of the records to be included in a double density diskette file. These specifications must be adhered to unless deviations have been specifically granted by IRS.

.02 To be compatible, a double density diskette file must meet the following specifications in total:

(a) 8 inches in diameter.

(b) Recorded in EBCDIC.

(c) Contains 77 cylinders (A cylinder refers to both of the tracks available to the read/write heads at any of the 77 locations on the double sided, double density diskette.

(1) Cylinder 00 is the index cylinder (the operating system reserves cylinder 00 for the directory information and writes the file name and location in the directory; data cannot be written in cylinder 00).

(2) Cylinders 1–74 are the primary data cylinders.

(3) Cylinders 75 and 76 are reserved for alternative cylinder assignment.

(d) Each Track contains 26 sectors; therefore, each cylinder contains 52 sectors.

(e) Each sector must contain 256 bytes.

(f) Data may be recorded on both sides of the diskette.

(g) IRS can process single sided, single density, soft sectored diskettes as well as double sided, double density, soft sectored diskettes. Part B provides specifications for single density diskettes which have sectors of 128 bytes.

(h) An IBM 5360 compatible diskette would meet the above specifications. If using other processers, data should be recorded in the Basic Data Exchange format. Hard sectored diskettes are not compatible.

.03 Refer to Part B, Sec. 1.03 through Sec. 2 for further information concerning diskette requirements which apply to both single and double density diskettes.

22-31	Payer's Account Number for Payee	10	REQUIRED. Payer may use this field to enter the payee's account number. The use of this item will facilitate easy reference to specific records in the payer's file should any questions arise. DO NOT ENTER A TAXPAYER IDENTIFICATION NUMBER IN THIS FIELD. An account number can be any account number assigned by the payer to the payee (i.e., checking account, savings account, etc.). THIS NUMBER WILL HELP TO DISTINGUISH THE INDIVIDUAL PAYEE'S ACCOUNT WITH YOU AND SHOULD BE UNIQUE TO IDENTIFY THE SPECIFIC TRANSACTION MADE WITH THE ORGANIZATION, SHOULD MULTIPLE RETURNS BE FILED. This information will be particularly necessary if you need to file a corrected return. You are strongly encouraged to use this field. You may use any number that will help identify the particular transaction that you are reporting. If a number is not determinable, enter blanks. If fewer than ten characters are required, right-justify filling the remaining positions with blanks.
	Payment Amount Fields (must be numeric)		The number of payment amounts is dependent upon and must agree with the number of Amount Indicators present in positions 19–27 of Sector 1 of the "A" Record. THE FIRST PAYEE NAME LINE MUST APPEAR IMMEDIATELY AFTER THE LAST PAYMENT AMOUNT INDICATED AS BEING USED. For example, if you are reporting 1099–INT and you used only Amount Indicator "3" in the Payer/Transmitter "A" Record, then you will only use one ten position payment amount in the Payee "B" Record, right-justified, and the First Payee Name Line will begin in position 42. Each payment field that you allow for, or use, must contain 10 numeric characters (see NOTE 1). Do not provide a payment amount field when the corresponding Amount Indicator in the Payer/Transmitter "A" Record is blank. Each payment amount must be entered in dollars and cents. Do not enter dollar signs, commas, decimal points, or NEGATIVE PAYMENTS (except those items that reflect a loss on Form 1099–B and must be negative overpunched in the units position). Example: If the Amount Indicators are reflected as "123bbbbbb", the Payee "B" Records must have only 3 payment amount fields. If Amount Indicators are reflected as "12367bbbb", the "B" Records must have only 5 payment amount fields. Payment amounts MUST be right-justified and unused positions MUST be zero filled. Federal income tax withheld is not reported as a negative amount. NOTE 1: If any one payment amount exceeds "9999999999" (dollars and cents), as many SEPARATE Payee "B" Records as necessary to contain the total amount MUST be submitted for the Payee. NOTE 2: If you file 1099-MISC and use Amount Code "8" in the Amount Indicator field of the Payer/Transmitter "A" Record, you must enter 0000000100 in the corresponding Payment Amount Field. This will not represent an actual money amount; this is an indicator of direct sales. (Refer to Part B, Sec. 3, NOTE 1, of the amount Indicators, Form 1099–MISC, for clarification.)
-41	Payment Amount 1	10	This amount is identified by the indicator in position 19 of Sector 1 of the Payer/Transmitter "A" Record. This amount must always be present.

	Payment Amount Fields (must be numeric)		The number of payment amounts is dependent upon and must agree with the number of Amount Indicators present in positions 19–27 of Sector 1 of the "A" Record. The First Payee Name Line must appear immediately after the last payment amount indicated as being used. For example, if you are reporting 1099–INT and you used only Amount Indicator "3" in the Payer/Transmitter "A" Record, then you will only use one ten position payment amount in the Payee "B" Record, right-justified, and the First Payee Name Line will begin in position 42. Each payment field that you allow for, or use, must contain 10 numeric characters (see NOTE 1). Do not provide a payment amount field when the corresponding Amount Indicator in the Payer/Transmitter "A" Record is blank. Each payment amount must be entered in dollars and cents. Do not enter dollar signs, commas, decimal points, or NEGATIVE PAYMENTS (except those items that reflect a loss on Form 1099–B and must be negative overpunched in the units position). Example: If the Amount Indicators are reflected as "123bbbbbb", the Payee "B" Records must have only 3 payment amount fields. If Amount Indicators are reflected as "12367bbbb", the "B" Records must have only 5 payment amount fields. Payment amounts MUST be right-justified and unused positions MUST be zero filled. Federal income tax withheld is not reported as a negative amount. NOTE 1: If any one payment amount exceeds "9999999999" (dollars and cents), as many SEPARATE Payee "B" Records as necessary to contain the total amount MUST be submitted for the Payee.

			DO NOT ENTER HYPHENS, ALPHA CHARACTERS, ALL 9s OR ALL ZEROS. Any record containing an invalid identification number in this field will be returned for correction.
22–31	Payer's Account Number for Payee	10	REQUIRED. Payer may use this field to enter the payee's account number. The use of this item will facilitate easy reference to specific records in the payer's file, should any questions arise. DO NOT ENTER A TAXPAYER IDENTIFICATION NUMBER IN THIS FIELD. Enter blanks if the Payer's Account Number for Payee is not to be entered in this field. An account number can be any account number assigned by the payer to the payee (i.e., checking account, savings account, etc.). THIS NUMBER WILL HELP TO DISTINGUISH THE INDIVIDUAL PAYEE'S ACCOUNT WITH YOU AND SHOULD BE UNIQUE TO IDENTIFY THE SPECIFIC TRANSACTION MADE WITH THE ORGANIZATION, SHOULD MULTIPLE RETURNS BE FILED. This information will be particularly necessary if you need to file a corrected return. You are strongly encouraged to use this field. You may use any number that will help identify the particular transaction that you are reporting. If a number is not determinable, enter blanks. If fewer than ten characters are required, right-justify filling the remaining positions with blanks.
	Payment Amount Fields (must be numeric)		The number of payment amounts is dependent on the number of Amount Indicators present in positions 19–27 of Sector 1 of the "A" Record. The First Payee Name Line must appear immediately after the last payment amount indicated as being used. For example, if you are reporting 1099–INT and you used only Amount Indicator "3" in the Payer/Transmitter "A" Record, then you will only use one ten position payment amount in the Payee "B" Record, right-justified, and the First Payee Name Line will begin in position 42. Each payment field that you allow for, or use, must contain 10 numeric characters (see NOTE 1). Do not provide a payment amount field when the corresponding Amount Indicator in the Payer/Transmitter "A" Record is blank. Each payment amount must be entered in dollars and cents. Do not enter dollar signs, commas, decimal points, or NEGATIVE PAYMENTS (except those items that reflect a loss on Form 1099–B and must be negative overpunched in the units position). Example: If the Amount Indicators are reflected as "123bbbbbb," the Payee "B" Records must have only 3 payment amount fields. If Amount Indicators are reflected as "12367bbbb," the "B" Rec ords must have only 5 payment amount fields. Payment amount MUST be right-justified and unused positions MUST be zero filled. Federal income tax withheld is not reported as a negative amount. NOTE: 1 If any one payment amount exceeds "9999999999" (dol lars and cents), as many SEPARATE Payee "B" Records as ne essary to contain the total amount MUST be submitted for th Payee.
32–41	Payment Amount 1	10	This amount is identified by the indicator in position 19 of Secto 1 of the Payer/Transmitter "A" Record. This amount must alwa be present.

SEC. 12. END OF PAYER "C" RECORD

.01 The Control Total fields have been expanded from 12 to 15 positions. Adjust your programs accordingly.

.02 The End of Payer "C" Record is a summary record for a type of return for a given payer. This record will contain the total number of payees and the totals of the payment amount fields filed by a given payer. The "C" Record must be written after the last "B" Record for each type of return for a given payer. For each "A" Record and group of "B" Records on the file, there must be a corresponding "C" Record. For example, if you used Amount Codes 1, 3, and 6 in the "A" Record, the totals from the "B" Records will appear in Control Totals 1, 2, and 3 of the "C" Record.

.03 Payers/Transmitters must verify the accuracy of the totals in the "C" Record and must enter the totals on the transmittal Form 4804, 4802 or computer generated substitute, which will accompany the shipment. The lines used on Forms 4804 and 4802 to record payment amounts correspond with the Amount Codes used in the "A" Record. These forms have been updated for 1986.

.04 The End of Payer "C" Record must be followed by a State Totals "K" Record (if any), or new Payer/Transmitter "A" Record for the next Payer (if any), or an End of Transmission "F" Record.

.01 The Control Total fields have been expanded from 12 to 15 positions. Adjust your programs accordingly.

.02 The State Totals "K" Record is a summary for a given payer and a given state in the Combined Federal/State Filing Program, used ONLY when state reporting approval has been granted.

Rev. Proc. 86–35

SECTION 1. PURPOSE

This Revenue Procedure establishes a handling and shipping charge for processing requests for bulk quantities of tax forms. This charge only applies to those engaged in the preparation of tax returns for private gain.

SEC. 2. CHARGES

.01 Charges for tax forms will be established on the basis of each 100 printed units ordered. The schedule of charges for handling and shipping bulk quantities of tax forms will be based on a rate of $1.00 per hundred printed units, or fraction thereof. However, all bulk orders for tax forms will be subject to a minimum charge of $3.00.

.02 No charge will be made to practitioners or their firms who order no more than 15 "information" copies of any tax form nor more than 2 "information" copies of any instruction or taxpayer information publication. Additionally, no charge will be made to practitioner firms who order bulk quantities of optically scanned information returns.

.03 No charge will be made to a bank, post office, public library or other organization for any quantity of forms and instructions intended for the convenience and use of the taxpayer, so long as such organization is not engaged in the preparation of tax returns for private gain.

.04 Single copies of Publications 17 and 334 will be provided without charge. Multiple copies of either publication will not be provided to individuals or organizations except where the Regional Commissioner or District Director determines that such distribution will further the interests of taxpayer service or education. A user charge of $.50 per copy will apply to all approved multiple copy requests. Regional Commissioners, District Directors and appropriate National Office officials may continue to provide multiple copies without charge for use in Service-sponsored programs (e.g. Understanding Taxes and VITA). Additionally, in an effort to reduce the number of separate orders, multiple copies (one per employee) of Publications 17 and 334 may be issued to practitioner firms, without regard to the user charge. Priority must be given to filling single copy requests for Publications 17 and 334. Requests for bulk quantities of either publication which jeopardize the Service's ability to respond on a timely basis to such single copy demand should not be honored. For individuals who wish for their own purposes to print copies of Publications 17 or 334, the Service will provide page negatives of either publication for a user charge of $3.00 per page negative.

.05 All user charges will be commensurate with the prevailing postage and handling costs and will be established by the Assistant Commissioner (Human Resources).

.06 All requestors that are subject to the user charge as outlined above will be sent a bill to cover shipping and handling charges for processing bulk orders.

SEC. 3. EFFECT ON OTHER DOCUMENTS

Rev. Proc. 84–38, 1984–1 C.B. 514, is superseded.

Under 31 Code of Federal Regulations, Part 10, an attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary, in order to avoid the institution or conclusion of a proceeding for his disbarment or suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service, may offer his consent to suspension from such practice. Department of the Treasury
Internal Revenue Service

T22.23:

Mission of the Service

The purpose of the Internal Revenue Service is to collect the proper amount of tax revenues at the least cost to the public, and in a manner that warrants the highest degree of public confidence in our integrity, efficiency and fairness. To achieve that purpose, we will:

—Encourage and achieve the highest possible degree of voluntary compliance in accordance with the tax law and regulations;

—Advise the public of their rights and responsibilities;

—Determine the extent of compliance and the causes of noncompliance;

—Do all things needed for the proper administration and enforcement of the tax laws;

—Continually search for and implement new, more efficient and effective ways of accomplishing our Mission.

Statement of Principles of Internal Revenue Tax Administration

The function of the Internal Revenue Service is to administer the Internal Revenue Code. Tax policy for raising revenue is determined by Congress.

With this in mind, it is the duty of the Service to carry out that policy by correctly applying the laws enacted by Congress; to determine the reasonable meaning of various Code provisions in light of the Congressional purpose in enacting them; and to perform this work in a fair and impartial manner, with neither a government nor a taxpayer point of view.

At the heart of administration is interpretation of the Code. It is the responsibility of each person in the Service, charged with the duty of interpreting the law, to try to find the true meaning of the statutory provision and not to adopt a strained construction in the belief that he or she is "protecting the revenue." The revenue is properly protected only when we ascertain and apply the true meaning of the statute.

The Service also has the responsibility of applying and administering the law in a reasonable, practical manner. Issues should only be raised by examining officers when they have merit, never arbitrarily or for trading purposes. At the same time, the examining officer should never hesitate to raise a meritorious issue. It is also important that care be exercised not to raise an issue or to ask a court to adopt a position inconsistent with an established Service position.

Administration should be both reasonable and vigorous. It should be conducted with as little delay as possible and with great courtesy and considerateness. It should never try to overreach, and should be reasonable within the bounds of law and sound administration. It should, however, be vigorous in requiring compliance with law and it should be relentless in its attack on unreal tax devices and fraud.

Introduction

The Internal Revenue Bulletin is the authoritative instrument of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for announcing official rulings and procedures of the Internal Revenue Service and for publishing Treasury Decisions, Executive Orders, Tax Conventions, legislation, court decisions, and other items of general interest. It is published weekly and may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. Bulletin contents of a permanent nature are consolidated semiannually into Cumulative Bulletins, which are sold on a single-copy basis.

It is the policy of the Service to publish in the Bulletin all substantive rulings necessary to promote a uniform application of the tax laws, including all rulings that supersede, revoke, modify, or amend any of those previously published in the Bulletin. All published rulings apply retroactively unless otherwise indicated. Procedures relating solely to matters of internal management are not published; however, statements of internal practices and procedures that affect the rights and duties of taxpayers are published.

Revenue rulings represent the conclusions of the Service on the application of the law to the pivotal facts stated in the revenue ruling. In those based on positions taken in rulings to taxpayers or technical advice to Service field offices, identifying details and information of a confidential nature are deleted to prevent unwarranted invasions of privacy and to comply with statutory requirements.

Rulings and procedures reported in the Bulletin do not have the force and effect of Treasury Department Regulations, but they may be used as precedents. Unpublished rulings will not be relied on, used, or cited as precedents by Service personnel in the disposition of other cases. In applying published rulings and procedures, the effect of subsequent legislation, regulations, court decisions, rulings, and procedures must be considered, and Service personnel and others concerned are cautioned against reaching the same conclusions in other cases unless the facts and circumstances are substantially the same.

The Bulletin is divided into four parts as follows:

Part I.—1954 Code.

This part includes rulings and decisions based on provisions of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

Part II.—Treaties and Tax Legislation.

This part is divided into two subparts as follows: Subpart A, Tax Conventions, and Subpart B, Legislation and Related Committee Reports.

Part III.—Administrative, Procedural, and Miscellaneous.

To the extent practicable, pertinent cross references to these subjects are contained in the other Parts and Subparts.

Part IV.—Items of General Interest.

With the exception of the disbarment and suspension list included in this part, none of these announcements is consolidated in the Cumulative Bulletins.

The first Bulletin for each month includes an index for the matters published during the preceding month. These monthly indexes are cumulated on a quarterly and semiannual basis, and are published in the first Bulletin of the succeeding quarterly and semi-annual period, respectively.

The Bulletin Index-Digest System, a research and reference service supplementing the Bulletin, may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. It consists of four Services: Service No. 1, Income Tax; Service No. 2, Estate and Gift Taxes; Service No. 3, Employment Taxes; Service No. 4, Excise Taxes. Each Service consists of a basic volume and a cumulative supplement that provide (1) finding lists of items published in the Bulletin, (2) digests of revenue rulings, revenue procedures, and other published items, and (3) indexes of Public Laws, Treasury Decisions, and Tax Conventions.

The contents of this publication are not copyrighted and may be reprinted freely. A citation of the Internal Revenue Bulletin as the source would be appropriate.

Part I. Rulings and Decisions Under the Internal Revenue Code of 1954

Section 29.—Credit for Producing Fuel from a Nonconventional Source

(Also Section 48(l))

Credit for producing fuel from a nonconventional source. A liquid coal-water mixture produced by taxpayer is not a synthetic fuel produced from coal and is, therefore, not a qualified fuel eligible for the credit as fuel produced from nonconventional sources under section 29(c)(1)(C) of the Code.

Rev. Rul. 86-100

ISSUE

If a taxpayer produces a viscous, heavy, liquid coal-water mixture that can be used as a substitute for oil, then under section 29(c)(1)(C) (formerly section 44D) of the Internal Revenue Code, is that mixture a "synthetic fuel produced from coal" and therefore a qualified fuel which is eligible for the credit as fuel produced from nonconventional sources?

FACTS

Taxpayer produces a fuel by a process that finely grinds coal, mixes it with water, mechanically removes impurities (such as particles of pyritic sulfur) by flotation, and adds surfactants that adhere to the surface of each coal particle. Because the surfactants give each coal particle a negative electrical charge, the coal particles repel one another and remain in suspension. The resulting coal-water mixture has the physical properties of a viscous, heavy liquid that can be stored, pumped, and burned as a substitute for No. 6 oil in properly modified furnaces or boilers. The coal-water mixture is approximately 70 percent coal, 29 percent water, and 1 percent additives.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 29(a) of the Code provides that there is allowed a credit of $3, multiplied by the barrel-of-oil equivalent of qualified fuels sold by the taxpayer to an unrelated person during the tax year.

Section 29(c)(1)(C) of the Code provides that the term "qualified fuels" includes liquid, gaseous, or solid synthetic fuels produced from coal (including lignite), including such fuels when used as feedstocks.

The credit allowed by section 29 (originally designated as section 44D) of the Code was added by section 231 of the Crude Oil Windfall Profit Tax Act of 1980, 1980-3 C.B. 1, 40. The conference committee report that accompanied that Act outlined the eligible sources for the credit and specifically included liquid, gaseous, or solid synthetic fuel from coal liquefaction or gasification facilities. That report also stated that solid synthetic fuel produced from coal liquefaction or gasification would include solvent refined coal. H.R. Rep. No. 96-817 (Conf. Rep.) 96th Cong., 2d Sess. 138 (1980), 1980-3 C.B. 245, 298.

Section 48(l)(3)(A)(iii) of the Code includes in the definition of alternative energy property (for purposes of allowing an investment tax credit under section 38 of the Code) equipment for converting an alternate substance into a synthetic liquid, gaseous, or solid fuel. This provision was added by section 301 of the Energy Tax Act of 1978, 1978-3 (Vol. 2) C.B. 1, 20. The Senate report that accompanied that Act specifically included, in the definition of alternative energy property, property used in coal liquefaction and gasification. S. Rep. No. 95–529, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 75 (1977), 1978-3 (Vol. 2) C.B. 203, 267.

Both sections 29(c) and 48(l) reflect a congressional intent to encourage domestic energy conservation and production. In identifying certain fuels that qualify for the production credit, section 29 uses language almost identical to the language in section 48(l) that lists certain property that qualifies as energy property for purposes of the business energy tax credit. Qualified fuels, under section 29, include "liquid, gaseous, or solid synthetic fuels" produced from coal. Alternative energy property, under section 48(l), includes equipment for converting an alternate substance into a "synthetic liquid, gaseous, or solid fuel." Thus, the definition provided for the term "synthetic fuel" under section 48(l) and Income Tax Regulations thereunder is relevant to the interpretation of the term "synthetic fuel" in section 29(c)(1)(C).

Section 1.48-9(c)(5) of the regulations defines a synthetic fuel as one that must differ significantly in chemical composition, as opposed to physical composition, from the alternate substance used to produce it. That section further provides that synthetic fuel equipment does not include equipment that merely mixes an "alternate" substance with another substance. The regulation expressly states that synthetic fuel equipment does not include equipment that mixes coal and water to produce a slurry for purposes of transportation.

The Code and regulations recognize that a synthetic fuel is the result of substantial chemical change. Coal liquefaction and gasification processes, which were discussed in the congressional reports, are examples of processes that involve substantial chemical changes. Coal liquefaction and gasification processes are chemical processes that use pressure, heat, and the addition of hydrogen to change substantially the chemical composition of coal into substances that are chemically similar to oil or natural gas or noncoal-like solids. To produce solvent refined coal, finely ground coal is subjected to pressures up to 4,000 pounds per square inch and temperatures of about 800 degrees Fahrenheit in the presence of hydrogen and an oily hydrocarbon liquid solvent. Under these conditions, the coal is chemically changed by cracking and hydrogenation.

On the other hand, the process at issue in this revenue ruling is not a process similar to liquefaction or gasification because it does not result in a chemical change to the coal. It primarily results in a physical surface change, a coating, to the solid coal. As a result of that coating, mixing the coal with water produces a mixture that can be handled and used like a liquid. The lack of a chemical change to the coal itself precludes, under section 1.48-9(c)(5) of the regulations, a conclusion that the coal-water mixture is a "synthetic fuel" for purposes of the qualified fuels credit.

Section 1.48-9(c)(5) of the regulations clearly provides that equipment that merely mixes an alternate substance with another substance or mixes coal and water to form a slurry for transportation is not synthetic fuel equipment. The coal-water mixture in this situation differs from a slurry only in the manner in which the coal is held in suspension. In a slurry, agitation is used to keep the particles in suspension. Here, it is the polarization that keeps the particles in suspension. However, in both instances the processes produce a coal and water mixture with the required physical separation of particles necessary to produce the characteristics of a liquid. The presence of the surfactants does not contribute any improvement in the characteristics of the mixture as a fuel. Therefore, under the regulations, the equipment used is not synthetic fuel equipment. It follows that the product is not a synthetic fuel.

HOLDING

The coal-water mixture described in this revenue ruling is not a synthetic fuel produced from coal and thus under section 29(c)(1)(C) of the Code is not a qualified fuel eligible for credit.

Section 48(l).—Definitions; Special Rules; Energy Property

Whether a viscous, heavy liquid coal-water mixture produced by the taxpayer that can be used as a substitute for oil is a "synthetic fuel produced from coal" and, therefore, a qualified fuel that is eligible for the credit as fuel produced from nonconventional sources. Section 468.—Special Rules for Mining and Solid Waste Reclaimation and Closing Costs

Section 706.—Taxable Year of Partner and Partnership

26 CFR 1.706-1: Taxable years of partner and partnership.

Partnerships; conversion of a general partnership interest into a limited partnership interest upon death of general partner. Conversion does not constitute disposition of partnership interest that closes the partnership year with respect to the deceased partner.

Rev. Rul. 86-101

ISSUE

If a partnership agreement provides that, upon the death of a general partner, the partner's interest converts into that of a limited partner, does the partnership taxable year close with respect to a deceased partner under section 706 of the Internal Revenue Code?

FACTS

A, B, and C were general partners in LP, a limited partnership. The partnership agreement provided that, upon the death of any general partner, that partner's interest would be automatically converted into a limited partnership interest. All three general partners, as well as LP, were calendar year taxpayers. A died on July 1, and under the partnership agreement, A's interest automatically became that of a limited partner.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 706(c)(1) of the Code provides that, except in the case of a termination of a partnership and except as provided in section 706(c)(2), the taxable year of a partnership shall not close as the result of the death of a partner or the sale or exchange of a partner's interest in the partnership.

Section 706(c)(2)(A)(i) of the Code provides that the taxable year of a partnership shall close with respect to a partner who sells or exchanges the partner's entire interest in the partnership.

Section 706(c)(2)(B) of the Code provides that, other than at the end of the partnership's taxable year, the taxable year of a partnership shall not close with respect to a partner who sells or exchanges less than the partner's entire interest in the partnership.

Section 1.706-1(c)(3)(i) of the Income Tax Regulations provides that if a deceased partner's estate or other successor sells or exchanges its entire interest in the partnership or if its entire interest is liquidated, the partnership's taxable year with respect to the estate or other successor shall close on the date of the sale or exchange, or on the date of the completion of the liquidation.

Section 1.706-1(c)(3)(iv) of the regulations provides that if, under the terms of an agreement existing on the date of death of a partner, a sale or exchange of the decedent partner's interest in the partnership occurs upon that date, then the taxable year of the partnership with respect to the decedent partner shall close upon the date of death.

Rev. Rul. 84-52, 1984-1 C.B. 157, holds that, for purposes of section 721 of the Code, the conversion of a general partnership interest into a limited partnership interest is treated as a contribution to the partnership of the general partnership interest in exchange for the limited partnership interest.

The legislative history of section 706(c)(2) of the Code indicates that Congress did not intend to close the taxable year of a partnership with respect to a partner whose interest is liquidated, sold, or exchanged to an outsider unless the partner no longer retains any interest in the partnership. If the partner's interest is merely reduced, the partnership year remains open with respect to the partner. H.R. Rep. No. 1337, 83d Cong., 2d Sess. A226 (1954); S. Rep. No. 1622, 83d Cong., 2d Sess. 386 (1954).

In the present case, since A's successor continued to hold an interest in the partnership, the conversion is not an exchange of the partner's entire partnership interest for purposes of section 706(c)(2)(A) of the Code or section 1.706-1(c)(3)(iv) of the regulations. Consequently, the general rule under section 706(c) applies and the partnership year as to A remains open.

HOLDING

A conversion of a general partnership interest into a limited partnership interest is an exchange that does not result in a disposition of the converting partner's entire partnership interest, and, therefore, the taxable year of the partnership is not closed under section 706(c)(2)(A) of the Code or section 1.706-1(c)(3)(iv) of the regulations.

Section 1274.—Determination of Issue Price in the Case of Certain Debt Instruments Issued for Property

(Also Sections 280G, 467, 468.)

Rev. Rul. 86-102

For purposes of section 1274(d) of the Internal Revenue Code, the short-term, mid-term, and long-term applicable federal rates (AFR) for the month of September 1986 are as follows:

TITLE 26—INTERNAL REVENUE.—CHAPTER I, SUBCHAPTER B, SUBCHAPTER H, PART 20—ESTATE TAX; ESTATES OF DECEDENTS DYING AFTER AUGUST 16, 1954—PART 25—GIFT TAX; GIFTS MADE AFTER DECEMBER 31, 1954—PART 602—OMB CONTROL NUMBERS UNDER THE PAPERWORK REDUCTION ACT

Qualified Disclaimers

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Final regulations.

SUMMARY: This document contains final regulations relating to the disclaimer of property transferred by gift or inheritance. Changes to the applicable law were made by the Tax Reform Act of 1976, the Revenue Act of 1978 and the Act of October 4, 1966. These regulations provide necessary guidance to the public for compliance with the law and affect those persons who disclaim an interest in property.

DATES: The regulations are effective for taxable transfers made after December 31, 1976, which create an interest in a person who disclaims that interest.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

On July 22, 1980, the FEDERAL REGISTER published proposed amendments to the Estate and Gift Tax Regulations (26 CFR Parts 20 and 25) under sections 2041, 2045, 2055, 2056, 2511, 2514, and 2518 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (Code) (45 FR 48922). The amendments were proposed to conform the regulations to section 2009(b) of the Tax Reform Act of 1976 (90 Stat. 1893), which added section 2518 to the Code; section 702 (m) of the Revenue Act of 1978 (92 Stat. 2935), which allowed a surviving spouse to receive an interest in property as a result of a qualified disclaimer by the spouse; and the Act of October 4, 1966 (80 Stat. 872), which allowed an interest disclaimed by a person other than the surviving spouse to be treated as passing from the decedent to the surviving spouse where the spouse receives the interest as a result of the disclaimer. A public hearing was held on November 18, 1980. After consideration of all comments regarding the proposed amendments, those amendments are adopted as revised by this Treasury decision.

SUMMARY OF REVISIONS

Effective Dates

Sections 20.2041-3(d)(6)(i) and 25.2518-1(a) have been revised to clarify that section 2518 applies to all interests in property if the interest in the property was created by a taxable transfer made after December 31, 1976. Thus, section 2518 applies to a revocable trust created prior to December 31, 1976 if it becomes irrevocable after that date. The 9-month period in such a case would be measured from the date on which the transfer creating the interest became irrevocable.

Effect of a Qualified Disclaimer

One commentator suggested that §25.2518-1(b) be amended to clarify that a beneficiary of a generation-skipping trust who makes a qualified disclaimer is treated as never having been a beneficiary. No revision was made in paragraph (b) of §25.2518-1 because that paragraph already states that the disclaimed interest is treated as if it had never been transferred to the disclaimant and that the interest is treated as passing directly to the person entitled to receive the property as a result of the disclaimer.

The same commentator also suggested that §25.2056(d)-1(a) be amended to specify the effect of a nonqualified disclaimer by a surviving spouse. No change has been made under §25.2056(d)-1(a) because §25.2511-1(c)(1) already specifically states that any disposition which is not a qualified disclaimer constitutes the making of a gift.

Effect of Local Law

Several commentators believed that the proposed regulation under paragraph (c)(1) of §25.2518-1, relating to the effect of local law, is wrong because of the requirement that the disclaimer be effective under local law. In response to these comments, paragraph (c)(1) has been revised to clarify that even if the requirements of local law are not met, one can nevertheless make a qualified disclaimer under section 2518 if, under applicable local law, the interest is transferred, as a result of attempting the disclaimer, to another person without any direction on the part of the disclaimant. Mandatory actions by the disclaimant which are required under local law merely to divest ownership of the property in the disclaimant and vest it in another person will not disqualify the disclaimer for purposes of section 2518. Further, the rule under paragraph (c)(2) of §25.2518-1 has been changed to make it clear that whether a transfer is voidable has no effect on the determination of whether a disclaimer constitutes a qualified disclaimer. This Treasury decision does not contain regulations relating to the changes made to the law by the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981 which allows certain transfers to be treated as qualified disclaimers even if no effective disclaimer has been made under local law. Proposed regulations relating to this change will be published shortly in another project (LR-212-81).

Beneficiary Under Twenty-One Years of Age

In order to make a qualified disclaimer under section 2518, a disclaimer must be made no later than 9 months after the transfer creating the interest in the person disclaiming, or, if later, 9 months after the day the disclaimant attains age 21. The proposed regulations have been revised to clarify in paragraph (d)(3) of §25.2518-2 that in the case of a beneficiary of an interest in property who is under 21 years of age, any actions taken with regard to the interest by the beneficiary or a custodian prior to the beneficiary's twenty-first birthday will not be considered to be an acceptance of the interest by the beneficiary.

Joint Ownership

Several commentators believed the regulations should be revised to allow a qualified disclaimer to be made with respect to jointly owned property within 9 months of the death of the first joint tenant. Several other commentators believe that the regulations should allow at least the accretive portion to be disclaimed. Other commentators suggested that examples be inserted into the final regulations that illustrate the effect of the joint ownership rules in community property jurisdictions, the issue of acceptance, the effect of revocability, and the effect of former section 2515, relating to the creation of a joint tenancy.

A minor revision has been made in the regulations regarding the ability of a surviving joint tenant to disclaim the jointly held property. The general rule that a disclaimer of a joint interest must be made within 9 months of the transfer creating the interest remains unchanged because each joint tenant receives an interest in the entire property subject to the tenancy, as well as the rights of survivorship, at the time of the transfer creating the joint interest. See Pearl M. Kennedy v. Commissioner, Docket No. 33349-83, T.C. Memo, 1986-3, January 2, 1986. However, in the case of a joint tenancy between spouses or a tenancy by the entirety in real property created after 1976 and before 1982 where no election is made under section 2515, the surviving tenant can make a qualified disclaimer of the entire jointly held property (except any portion attributable to consideration furnished by the surviving tenant) within 9 months after the death of the first tenant to die if such tenant dies before 1982. If such tenant dies in 1982 or thereafter, the surviving tenant may only disclaim one-half of the jointly held property. In addition, a joint tenant cannot make a qualified disclaimer of any portion of the joint interest attributable to consideration furnished by that tenant. Examples have been added to the final regulations illustrating the other issues raised by the commentator.

Surviving Spouse

Under the proposed regulations, a surviving spouse could not make a qualified disclaimer if the spouse retained the power to direct the beneficial enjoyment of disclaimed property. Several commentators believe that the Revenue Act of 1978 reversed this result. No change has been made regarding the requirements that a surviving spouse must meet in order to make a qualified disclaimer. The statute states that the interest must pass to a person without any direction on the part of the person making the disclaimer. If the spouse retains the power to direct beneficial enjoyment of the disclaimed property, the disclaimer would violate this rule.

Disclaimer of Less than an Entire Interest

Section 25.2518-3 has been revised in response to the many comments received. Under the proposed regulations, all interests in income were treated as one separate interest and all interests in corpus were treated as another separate interest. Under the final regulations, each interest or power with respect to property that is separately created by the transferor is generally treated as a separate interest. Thus, a person could make a qualified disclaimer of one interest in corpus while retaining another interest in corpus, assuming that all other requirements of section 2518(b) have been met. However, if local law merges separately created interests, a qualified disclaimer will be allowed only if there is a disclaimer of the entire merged interest or an undivided portion of such merged interest. In addition, the final regulations provide that where a merger of separate interests would occur but for the creation by the transferor of a nominal interest, a qualified disclaimer will be allowed only if there is a disclaimer of all of the separate interests, or an undivided portion of all such interests, which would have merged but for the nominal interest.

Disclaimer of a Pecuniary Amount

Section 25.2518-3(c) of the proposed regulations has been revised to provide that a disclaimer of a specific pecuniary amount out of a pecuniary or nonpecuniary bequest or gift can be a qualified disclaimer provided that no income or other benefit of the disclaimed amount inures to the benefit of the disclaimant either prior to or subsequent to the disclaimer. Thus, following a disclaimer of a specific pecuniary amount, the disclaimed amount and any income attributable to such amount must be segregated from the portion of the gift or bequest that was not disclaimed. Further, the segregation of any assets making up the disclaimed amount must be made on the basis of the fair market value of the assets on the date of the disclaimer or on a basis fairly representative of the value changes that may have occurred between the date of the transfer and the date of the disclaimer. The final regulations also provide rules for making a disclaimer of a specific pecuniary amount after the beneficiary has already received a distribution from the gift or bequest.

Life Insurance and Annuity Contracts

Two commentators questioned the necessity of singling out life insurance proceeds and annuities because the same rules apply to such interests as apply to any other interest in property. In response to this comment, §25.2518-4 has been deleted from the final regulations.

REGULATORY FLEXIBILITY ACT AND EXECUTIVE ORDER 12291

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has determined that this final rule is not a major rule as defined in Executive Order 12291 and that a Regulatory Impact Analysis is therefore not required. The notice of proposed rule-making relating to this final rule was published before January 1, 1981. Accordingly, a regulatory flexibility analysis under the Regulatory Flexibility Act is not required for this final rule.

PAPERWORK REDUCTION ACT

The collection of information requirements contained in this regulation have been submitted to the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) in accordance with the requirements of the Paperwork Reduction Act of 1980. These requirements have been approved by OMB (control number 1545-0959).

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal author of this regulation is William A. Jackson of the Legislation and Regulations Division of the Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. Adoption of amendments to the regulations.

Accordingly, 26 CFR Parts 20, 25, and 602 are amended as follows:

Paragraph 1. The authority citation for Part 20 continues to read as follows:

Authority: 26 U.S.C. 7805.

Par. 2. Section 20.2041-3 (d) (6) is revised to read as follows:

§20.2041-3 Powers of appointment created after October 21, 1942

(6)(i) A disclaimer or renunciation of a general power of appointment created in a taxable transfer after December 31, 1976, in the person disclaiming is not considered a release of the power if the disclaimer or renunciation is a qualified disclaimer as described in section 2518 and the corresponding regulations. If the disclaimer or renunciation is not a qualified disclaimer, it is considered a release of the power by the disclaimant.

(ii) The disclaimer or renunciation of a general power of appointment created in a taxable transfer before January 1, 1977, in the person disclaiming is not considered to be a release of the power. The disclaimer or renunciation must be unequivocal and effective under local law. A disclaimer is a complete and unqualified refusal to accept the rights to which one is entitled. There can be no disclaimer or renunciation of a power after its acceptance. In the absence of facts to the contrary, the failure to renounce or disclaim within a reasonable time after learning of its existence will be presumed to constitute an acceptance of the power. In any case where a power is purported to be disclaimed or renounced as to only a portion of the property subject to the power, the determination as to whether or not there has been a complete and unqualified refusal to accept the rights to which one is entitled will depend on all the facts and circumstances of the particular case, taking into account the recognition and effectiveness of such a disclaimer under local law. Such rights refer to the incidents of the power and not to other interests of the decedent in the property. If effective under local law, the power may be disclaimed or renounced without disclaiming or renouncing-such other interests.

Par. 3. There is added immediately after §20.2044-1, the following new section:

§20.2046-1 Disclaimed property.

This section shall apply to the disclaimer or renunciation of a taxable transfer creating an interest in the person disclaiming made after December 31, 1976. If a qualified disclaimer is made with respect to such a transfer, the Federal estate tax provisions are to apply with respect to the property interest disclaimed as if the interest had never been transferred to the person making the disclaimer. See section 2518 and the corresponding regulations for rules relating to a qualified disclaimer.

Par. 4. Section 20-2055-2(c) is revised to read as follows:

§20.2055-2 Transfers not exclusively for charitable purposes

(c) Disclaimers—(1) Decedents dying after December 31, 1976. In the case of a bequest, devise, or transfer made by a decedent dying after December 31, 1976, the amount of a bequest, devise or transfer for which a deduction is allowable under section 2055 includes an interest which falls into the bequest, devise or transfer as the result of either—

(i) A qualified disclaimer (see section 2518 and the corresponding regulations for rules relating to a qualified disclaimer), or

(ii) The complete termination of a power to consume, invade, or appropriate property for the benefit of an individual by reason of the death of such individual or for any other reason, if the termination occurs within the period of time (including extensions) for filing the decedent's Federal estate tax return and before such power has been exercised.

(2) Decedents dying before January 1, 1977. In the case of a bequest, devise or transfer made by a decedent dying before January 1, 1977, the amount of a bequest, devise or transfer, for which a deduction is allowable under section 2055 includes an interest which falls into the bequest, devise or transfer as a result of either—

(i) A disclaimer of a bequest, devise, transfer, or power, if the disclaimer is made within 9 months (15 months if the decedent died on or before December 31, 1970) after the decedent's death (the period of time within which the estate tax return must be filed under section 8075) or within any extension of time for filing the return granted pursuant to section 8081, and the disclaimer is irrevocable at the time the deduction is allowed, or

(ii) The complete termination of a power to consume, invade, or appropriate property for the benefit of an individual (whether the termination occurs by reason of the death of the individual, or otherwise) if the termination occurs within the period described in paragraph (c)(2)(i) of this section and before the power has been exercised. Ordinarily, a disclaimer made by a person not under any legal disability will be considered irrevocable when filed with the probate court. A disclaimer is a complete and unqualified refusal to accept the rights to which one is entitled. Thus, if a beneficiary uses these rights for his own purposes, as by receiving a consideration for his formal disclaimer, he has not refused the rights to which he was entitled. There can be no disclaimer after an acceptance of these rights, expressly or impliedly. The disclaimer of a power is to be distinguished from the release or exercise of a power. The release or exercise of a power by the donee of the power in favor of a person or object described in paragraph (a) of §20.2055-1 does not result in any deduction under section 2055 in the estate of the donor of a power (but see paragraph (b)(1) of §20.2055-1 with respect to the donee's estate).

Par. 5. Section 20.2056 (a)-1 (a) is amended by removing the phrase

“§20.2056(d)–1 states special rules concerning disclaimers of interests in property;” from the last sentence and inserting in its place “§§20.2056(d)–1 and 20.2056 (d)–2 state special rules concerning disclaimers of interests in property;”.

Par. 6. Section 20.2056(a)–1(b)(2) is amended by adding “§20.2056(d)–2” to follow “§20.2056(d)–1.”

Par. 7. Section 20.2056(d)–1 is revised to read as set forth below, and a new §20.2056(d)–2 is added to read as set forth below:

20.2056(d)–1 Marital deduction; effect of disclaimers of post-December 31, 1976 transfers.

(a) Disclaimer by a surviving spouse. If a surviving spouse disclaims an interest in property passing to such spouse from the decedent in a taxable transfer made after December 31, 1976, the efficacy of the disclaimer will be determined by section 2518 and the corresponding regulations. If a qualified disclaimer is determined to have beem made by the surviving spouse, the property interest disclaimed is treated as if such interest had never been transferred to the surviving spouse.

(b) Disclaimer by a person other than a surviving spouse. If an interest in property passes to one other than the surviving spouse from a decedent in a taxable transfer made after December 31, 1976 and—

(1) The person other than the surviving spouse makes a qualified disclaimer with respect to such interest in property, and

(2) The surviving spouse is entitled to such interest in property as a result of such disclaimer.

the disclaimed interest is treated as passing directly from the decedent to the surviving spouse. If the disclaimer is not a qualified disclaimer, the interest in property is considered as passing from the decedent to the person who made the disclaimer as if the disclaimer had not been made. See section 2518 and the corresponding regulations for rules relating to a qualified disclaimer.

§20.2056(d)–2. Marital deduction; effect of disclaimers of pre-January 1, 1977 transfers.

(a) Disclaimer by a surviving spouse. If an interest in property passes to a decedent's surviving spouse in a taxable transfer made by a decedent dying before January 1, 1977, and the decedent's surviving spouse makes a disclaimer of this property interest the disclaimed interest is considered as passing from the decedent to the person or persons entitled to receive the interest as a result of the disclaimer. A disclaimer is a complete and unqualified refusal to accept the rights to which one is entitled. It is, therefore, necessary to distinguish between the surviving spouse's disclaimer of a property interest and such surviving spouse's acceptance and subsequent disposal of a property interest. For example, if proceeds of insurance are payable to the surviving spouse and the proceeds are refused so that they consequently pass to an alternate beneficiary designated by the decedent, the proceeds are considered as having passed from the decedent to the alternate beneficiary. On the other hand, if the insurance company is directed by the surviving spouse to hold the proceeds at interest during such spouse's life and, upon this spouse's death, to pay the principal sum to another person designated by the surviving spouse, thus affecting a transfer of a remainder interest, the proceeds are considered as having passed from the decedent to the surviving spouse. See paragraph (c) of §20.2056(e)–2 with respect to a spouse's exercise or failure to exercise a right to take against a decedent's will.

(b) Disclaimer by a person other than a surviving spouse—(1) Decedents dying after October 3, 1966 and before January 1, 1977. This paragraph (b)(1) applies in the case of a disclaimer of property passing to one other than the surviving spouse from a decedent dying after October 3, 1966 and before January 1, 1977. If a surviving spouse is entitled to receive property from the decedent as a result of the timely disclaimer made by the disclaimant, the property received by the surviving spouse is to be treated as passing to the surviving spouse from the decedent. Both a disclaimer of property passing by the laws of intestacy or otherwise, as by insurance or by trust, and a disclaimer of bequests and devises under the will of a decedent are to be fully effective for purposes of computing the marital deduction under section 2056. A disclaimer is a complete and unqualified refusal to accept some or all of the rights to which one is entitled. It must be a valid refusal under State law and must be made without consideration. For example, a disclaimer for the benefit of a surviving spouse who promises to give or bequeath property to a child of the person who disclaims is not a disclaimer within the meaning of this paragraph (b)(1). The disclaimer must be made before the person disclaiming accepts any property under the disclaimed interest. In the case of property transferred by a decedent dying after December 31, 1970, and before January 1, 1977, the disclaimer must be made within 9 months after the decedent's death (or within any extension of time for filing the estate tax return granted pursuant to section 6081). In the case of property transferred by a decedent dying after October 3, 1966, and before January 1, 1971, the disclaimer must be made within 15 months after the decedent's death (or within any extension of time for filing the estate tax return granted pursuant to section 6061). If the disclaimer does not satisfy the requirements of this paragraph (b)(1), for the purpose of the marital deduction, the property is considered as passing from the decedent in the person who made the disclaimer as if the disclaimer had not been made.

(2) Decedents dying after September 30, 1963 and before October 4, 1966. This paragraph (b)(2) applies in the case of a disclaimer of property passing to one other than the surviving spouse from a decedent dying after September 30, 1963 and before October 4, 1966. If, as a result of the disclaimer by the disclaimant, the surviving spouse is entitled to receive the disclaimed property interest, then such interest shall, for the purposes of this paragraph (b)(2), be considered as passing from the decedent to the surviving spouse if the following conditions are met. First, the interest disclaimed was bequeathed or devised to the disclaimant. Second, the disclaimant disclaimed all bequests and devises under the will before the date prescribed for the filing of the estate tax return. Third, the disclaimant did not accept any property under the bequest or devise before making the disclaimer. The interests passing by disclaimer to the surviving spouse under this paragraph (b)(2) are to qualify for the marital deduction only to the extent that, when added to any other allowable marital deduction without regard to this paragraph (b)(2), they do not exceed the greater of the deductions which would be allowable for the marital deduction without regard to the disclaimer if the surviving spouse exercised the election under State law to take against the will, or an amount equal to one-third of the decedent's adjusted gross estate. If the disclaimer does not satisfy the requirements of this paragraph (b)(2), the property is treated as passing from the decedent to the person who made the disclaimer, in the same manner as if the disclaimer had not been made.

(3) Decedents dying before October 4, 1966. Unless the rule of paragraph (b)(2) of this section applies, this paragraph (b)(3) applies in the case of a disclaimer of property passing to one other than the surviving spouse from a decedent dying before October 4, 1966. For the purpose of these transfers, it is unnecessary to distinguish for the purpose of the marital deduction between a disclaimer by a person other than the surviving spouse and a transfer by such person. If the surviving spouse becomes entitled to receive an interest in property from the decedent as a result of a disclaimer made by some other person, the interest is, nevertheless, considered as having passed from the decedent, not to the surviving spouse, but to the person who made the disclaimer, as though the disclaimer had not been made. If, as a result of a disclaimer made by a person other than the surviving spouse, a property interest passes to the surviving spouse under circumstances which meet the conditions set forth in §20.2056(b)-3 (relating to a life estate with a power of appointment), the rule stated in the preceding sentence applies, not only with respect to the portion of the interest which beneficially vests in the surviving spouse, but also with respect to the portion over which such spouse acquires a power to appoint. The rule applies also in the case of proceeds under a life insurance, endowment, or annuity contract which, as a result of a disclaimer made by a person other than the surviving spouse, are held by the insurer subject to the conditions set forth in §20.2056(b)-6.

Gift Tax Regulations

Par 8. The authority citation for Part 25 continues to read as follows:

Authority: 26 U.S.C. 7805.

Par. 9. Section 25.2511-1 (c) is revised to read as follows:

§26.2511-1 Transfers in general.

(c)(1) The gift tax also applies to gifts indirectly made. Thus, any transaction in which an interest in property is gratuitously passed or conferred upon another, regardless of the means or device employed, constitutes a gift subject to tax. See further §25.2512-8 relating to transfers for insufficient consideration. However, in the case of a taxable transfer creating an interest in the person disclaiming made after December 31, 1976, this paragraph (c)(1) shall not apply to the donee if, as a result of a qualified disclaimer by the donee, the property passes to a different donee. Nor shall it apply to a donor if, as a result of a qualified disclaimer by the donee, a completed transfer of an interest in property is not effected. See section 2518 and the corresponding regulations for rules relating to a qualified disclaimer.

(2) In the case of taxable transfers creating an interest in the person disclaiming made before January 1, 1977, where the law governing the administration of the decedent's estate gives a beneficiary, heir, or next-of-kin a right completely and unqualifiedly to refuse to accept ownership of property transferred from a decedent (whether the transfer is effected by the decedent's will or by the law of descent and distribution) a refusal to accept ownership does not constitute the making of a gift if the refusal is made within a reasonable time after knowledge of the existence of the transfer. The refusal must be unequivocal and effective under the local law. There can be no refusal of ownership of property after its acceptance. In the absence of the facts to the contrary, if a person fails to refuse to accept a transfer to him of ownership of a decedent's property within a reasonable time after learning of the existence of the transfer, he will be presumed to have accepted the property. Where the local law does not permit such a refusal, any disposition by the beneficiary, heir, or next-of-kin whereby ownership is transferred gratuitously to another constitutes the making of a gift by the beneficiary, heir, or next-of-kin. In any case where a refusal is purported to relate to only a part of the property, the determination of whether or not there has been a complete and unqualified refusal to accept ownership will depend on all the facts and circumstances in each particular case, taking into account the recognition and effectiveness of such a purported refusal under the local law. In illustration, if Blackacre was devised to A under the decedent's will (which also provided that all lapsed legacies and devises shall go to B, the residuary beneficiary), and under the local law A could refuse to accept ownership in which case title would be considered as never having passed to A. A's refusal to accept Blackacre within a reasonable time of learning of the devise will not constitute the making of a gift by A to B. However, if a decedent who owned Greenacre died intestate with C and D as his only heirs, and under local law the heir of a decedent cannot, by refusal to accept, prevent himself from becoming an owner of intestate property, any gratuitous disposition by C (by whatever term it is known) whereby he gives up his ownership of a portion of Greenacre and D acquires the whole thereof constitutes the making of a gift by C to D.

Par 10. Section 25.2514-3(c) is amended by adding headings to paragraphs (c)(1) through (c)(4), by revising paragraph (c)(5), and by adding a new paragraph (c)(6). The added and revised provisions of §25.2514-3(c) read as follows:

§29.2514-3 Powers of appointment created after October 21, 1942.

* * * * *

(c) Partial releases, lapses, and disclaimers of general powers of appointment created after October 21, 1942—(1) Partial release of power. * * *

(2) Power partially released before June 1, 1951. * * *

(3) Power partially released after May 31, 1951. * * *

(4) Release or lapse of power. * *

(5) Disclaimer of power created after December 31, 1976. A disclaimer or renunciation of a general power of appointment created in a taxable transfer after December 31, 1976, in the person disclaiming is not considered a release of the power for gift tax purposes if the disclaimer or renunciation is a qualified disclaimer as described in section 2518 and the corresponding regulations. If the disclaimer or renunciation is not a qualified disclaimer, it is considered a release of the power.

(6) Disclaimer of power created before January 1, 1977. A disclaimer or renunciation of a general power of appointment created in a taxable transfer before January 1, 1977, in the person disclaiming is not considered a release of the power. The disclaimer or renunciation must be unequivocal and effective under local law. A disclaimer is a complete and unqualified refusal to accept the rights to which one is entitled. There can be no disclaimer or renunciation of a power after its acceptance. In the absence of facts to the contrary, the failure to renounce or disclaim within a reasonable time after learning of the existence of a power shall be presumed to constitute an acceptance of the power. In any case where a power is purported to be disclaimed or renounced as to only a portion of the property subject to the power, the determination as to whether there has been a complete and unqualified refusal to accept the rights to which one is entitled will depend on all the facts and circumstances of the particular case, taking into account the recognition and effectiveness of such a disclaimer under local law. Such rights refer to the incidents of the power and not to other interests of the possessor of the power in the property. If effective under local law, the power may be disclaimed or renounced without disclaiming or renouncing such other interests.

Par. 11. New §§25.2518–1, 25.2518–2, and 25.2518–3 are added immediately after §25.2517–1 to read as follows:

§25.2518–1 Qualified disclaimers of property; In general.

(a) Applicability—(1) In general. The rules described in §§25.2518–1 through 25.2518–3 apply to the qualified disclaimer of an interest in property which is created in the person disclaiming by a taxable transfer made after December 31, 1976. In general, a qualified disclaimer is an irrevocable and unqualified refusal to accept the ownership of an interest in property. For rules relating to the determination of when a transfer occurs, see §25.2518–2(c)(3) and (4).

(2) Example. The provisions of paragraph (a)(1) of this section may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. W creates an irrevocable trust on December 10, 1968, and retains the right to receive the income for life. Upon the death of W, which occurs after December 31, 1976, the trust property is distributable to W's surviving issue, per stirpes. The creation of the remainder interest in the trust was a taxable transfer. Therefore, section 2518 does not apply to the disclaimer of the remainder interest because the taxable transfer was made prior to January 1, 1977. If, however, W had also retained the power to designate the person or persons to receive the trust principal at her death, and as a result no taxable gift was made of the remainder interest at the time of the creation of the trust, section 2518 would apply to any disclaimer made after W's death with respect to an interest in the trust property.

(b) Effect of a qualified disclaimer. If a peson makes a qualified disclaimer as described in section 2518(b) and §25.2518–2, for purpose of the Federal estate, gift, and generation-skipping transfer tax provisions, the disclaimed interest in property is treated as if it had never been transferred to the person making the qualified disclaimer. Instead, it is considered as passing directly from the transferor of the property to the person entitled to receive the property as a result of the disclaimer. Accordingly, a person making a qualified disclaimer is not treated as making a gift. Similarly, the value of a decedent's gross estate for purposes of the Federal estate tax does not include the value of property with respect to which the decedent, or the decedent's executor or administrator on behalf of the decedent, has made a qualified disclaimer. If the disclaimer is not a qualified disclaimer, for the purposes of the Federal estate, gift, and generation-skipping transfer tax provisions, the disclaimer is desregarded and the disclaimant is treated as having received the interest.

(c) Effect of local law—(1) In general—(i) Interests created before 1982. A disclaimer of an interest created in a taxable transfer before 1982 which otherwise meets the requirements of a qualified disclaimer under section 2518 and the corresponding regulations but which, by itself, is not effective under applicable local law to divest ownership of the disclaimed property from the disclaimant and vest it in another, is nevertheless treated as a qualified disclaimer under section 2518 if, under applicable local law, the disclaimed interest in property is transferred, as a result of attempting the disclaimer, to another person without any direction on the part of the disclaimant. An interest in property will not be considered to be transferred without any direction on the part of the disclaimant if, under applicable local law, the disclaimant has any discretion (whether or not such discretion is exercised) to determine who will receive such interest. Actions by the disclaimant which are required under local law merely to divest ownership of the property from the disclaimant and vest ownership in another person will not disqualify the disclaimer for purposes of section 2518(a). See §25.2518–2(d)(1) for rules relating to the immediate vesting of title in the disclaimant.

(ii) Interests created after 1981. [Reserved].

(2) Creditor's claims. The fact that a disclaimer is voidable by the disclaimant's creditors has no effect on the determination of whether such disclaimer constitutes a qualified disclaimer. However, a disclaimer that is wholly void or that is voided by the disclaimant's creditors cannot be a qualified disclaimer.

(3) Examples. The provisions of paragraphs (c) (1) and (2) of this section may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). F dies testate in State Y on June 17, 1978. G and H are beneficiaries under the will. The will provides that any disclaimed property is to pass to the residuary estate. H has no interest in the residuary estate. Under the applicable laws of State Y, a disclaimer must be made within 6 months of the death of the testator. Seven months after F's death, H disclaimed the real property H received under the will. The disclaimer statute of State Y has a provision stating that an untimely disclaimer will be treated as an assignment of the interest disclaimed to those persons who would have taken had the disclaimer been valid. Pursuant to this provision, the disclaimed property became part of the residuary estate. Assuming the remaining requirements of section 2518 are met, H has made a qualified disclaimer for purposes of section 2518(a).

Example (2). Assume the same facts as in example (1) except that the law of State Y does not treat an ineffective disclaimer as a transfer to alternative takers. H assigns the disclaimed interest by deed to those who would have taken had the disclaimer been valid. Under these circumstances, H has not made a qualified disclaimer for purposes of section 2518 (a) because the disclaimant directed who would receive the property.

Example (3). Assume the same facts as in example (1) except that the law of State Y requires H to pay a transfer tax in order to effectuate the transfer under the ineffective disclaimer provision. H pays the transfer tax. H has made a qualified disclaimer for purposes of section 2518(a).

(d) Cross-reference. For rules relating to the effect of qualified disclaimers on the estate tax charitable and marital deductions, see §§20.2055–2(c) and 20.2056(d)—1 respectively. For rules relating to the effect of a qualified disclaimer of a general power of appointment, see §20.2041–3(d).

§25.2518–2 Requirements for a qualified disclaimer.

(a) In general. For the purposes of section 2518(a), a disclaimer shall be a qualified disclaimer only if it satisfies the requirements of this section. In general, to be a qualified disclaimer—

(1) The disclaimer must be irrevocable and unqualified:

(2) The disclaimer must be in writing:

(3) The writing must be delivered to the person specified in paragraph (b)(2) of this section within the time limitations specified in paragraph (c)(1) of this section;

(4) The disclaimant must not have accepted the interest disclaimed or any of its benefits; and

(5) The interest disclaimed must pass either to the spouse of the decedent or to a person other than the disclaimant without any direction on the part of the person making the disclaimer:

(b) Writing—(1) Requirements. A disclaimer is a qualified disclaimer only if it is in writing. The writing must identify the interest in property disclaimed and be signed either by the disclaimant or by the disclaimant's legal representative.

(2) Delivery. The writing described in paragraph (b)(1) of this section must be delivered to the transfer of the interest, the transferor's legal representative, the holder of the legal title to the property to which the interest relates, or the person in possession of such property.

(c) Time limit—(1) In general. A disclaimer is a qualified disclaimer only if the writing described in paragraph (b)(1) of this section is delivered to the persons described in paragraph (b)(2) of this section no later than the date which is 9 months after the later of—

(i) The date on which the transfer creating the interest in the disclaimant is made, or

(ii) The day on which the disclaimant attains age 21.

(2) A timely mailing of a disclaimer treated as a timely delivery. Although section 7502 and the regulations under that section apply only to documents to be filed with the Service, a timely mailing of a disclaimer to the person described in paragraph (b)(2) of this section is treated as a timely delivery if the mailing requirements under paragraphs (c)(1), (c)(2) and (d) of §301.7502–1 are met. Further, if the last day of the period specified in paragraph (c)(1) of this section falls on Saturday, Sunday or a legal holiday (as defined in paragraph (b) of §301.7503–1), then the delivery of the writing described in paragraph (b)(1) of this section shall be considered timely if delivery is made on the first succeeding day which is not Saturday, Sunday or a legal holiday. See paragraph (d)(3) of this section for rules applicable to the exception for the individuals under 21 years of age.

(3) Transfer. For purposes of the time limitation described in paragraph (c)(1)(i) of this section, the 9-month period for making a disclaimer generally is to be determined with reference to the taxable transfer creating the interest in the disclaimant. With respect to inter vivos transfers, a taxable transfer occurs when there is a completed gift for Federal gift tax purposes regardless of whether a gift tax is imposed on the completed gift. Thus, gifts qualifying for the gift tax annual exclusion under section 2503(b) are regarded as taxable transfers for this purpose. With respect to transfers made by a decedent at death or transfers which become irrevocable at death, a taxable transfer occurs upon the date of the decedent's death. However, where there is a taxable transfer of an interest for Federal gift tax purposes and such interest is later included in the transferor's gross estate for Federal estate tax purposes, the 9-month period for making a qualified disclaimer is determined with reference to the earlier taxable transfer. In the case of a general power of appointment, the holder of the power has a 9-month period after the creation of the power in which to disclaim. A person to whom any interest in property passes by reason of the exercise or lapse of a general power may disclaim such interest within a 9-month period after the exercise or lapse. In the case of a nongeneral power of appointment, the holder of the power, permissible appointees, or takers in default of appointment must disclaim within a 9-month period after the original taxable transfer that created or authorized the creation of the power. If the transfer is for the life of an income beneficiary with succeeding interests to other persons, both the life tenant and the other remaindermen, whether their interests are vested or contingent, must disclaim no later than 9 months after the original taxable transfer. In the case of a remainder interest in property which an executor elects to treat as qualified terminable interest property under section 2056(b)(7), the remainder must disclaim within 9 months of the transfer creating the interest, rather than 9 months from the date such interest is subject to tax under section 2044 or 2519. A person who receives an interest in property as the result of a qualified disclaimer of the interest must disclaim the previously disclaimed interest no later than 9 months after the date of the taxable transfer creating the interest in the proceding disclaimant. Thus, if A were to make a qualified disclaimer of a specific bequest and as a result of the qualified disclaimer the property passed as part of the residue, the beneficiary of the residue could make a qualified disclaimer no later than 9 months after the date of the testator's death. See paragraph (d)(3) of this section for the time limitation rule with reference to recipients who are under 21 years of age.

(4) Joint property—(i) In general. Except as otherwise provided in paragraph (c)(4)(ii) of this section, a qualified disclaimer under section 2518(a) of an interest or any portion of an interest in a joint tenancy or a tenancy by the entirety must be made no later than 9 months after the transfer creating the tenancy. Thus, a surviving joint tenant cannot disclaim any part of the interest, including the survivorship interest, if more than 9 months have passed since the transfer creating the joint tenancy. In addition, a joint tenant cannot make a qualified disclaimer of any portion of the joint interest attributable to consideration furnished by that tenant.

(ii) Tenancies in real property between spouses created before 1982. In the case of joint tenancies between spouses or a tenancy by the entirety in real property created after 1976 and before 1982 where no election was made under section 2515, the surviving spouse must make a qualified disclaimer no later than 9 months after the date of death of the first spouse to die. Such a qualified disclaimer will be effective for—

(A) The entire joint interest (except any portion attributable to consideration furnished by the surviving spouse) if the date of death of the deceased spouse is before 1982; or

(B) One-half the value of the joint interest if the date of death of the deceased spouse is after 1981.

See examples (7) and (8) under paragraph (c)(5) of this section.

(5) Examples. The provisions of paragraphs (c)(1) through (c)(4) of this section may be illustrated by the following examples. For purposes of the following examples, assume that all beneficiaries are over 21 years of age.

Example (1). On May 13, 1978, in a transfer which constitutes a completed gift for Federal gift tax purposes, A creates a trust in which B is given a lifetime interest in the income from the trust. B is also given a nongeneral testamentary power of appointment over the corpus of the trust. The power of appointment may be exercised in favor of any of the issue of A and B. If there are no surviving issue at B's death or if the power is not exercised, the corpus is to pass to E. On May 13, 1978, A and B have two surviving children, C and D. If A, B, C or D wishes to make a qualified disclaimer, the disclaimer must be made no later than 9 months after May 13, 1978.

Example (2). Assume the same facts as in example (1) except that B is given a general power of appointment over the corpus of the trust. B exercises the general power of appointment in favor of C upon B's death on June 17, 1989. C may make a qualified disclaimer no later than 9 months after June 17, 1989. If B had died without exercising the general power of appointment, E could have made a qualified disclaimer no later than 9 months after June 17, 1989.

Example (3). F creates a trust on April 1, 1978, in which F's child G is to receive the income from the trust for life. Upon G's death, the corpus of the trust is to pass to G's child H. If either G or H wishes to make a qualified disclaimer, it must be made no later than 9 months after April 1, 1978.

Example (4). A creates a trust on February 15, 1978, in which B is named the income beneficiary for life. The trust further provides that upon B's death the proceeds of the trust are to pass to C, if then living. If C predeceases D, the proceeds shall pass to D or D's estate. To have timely disclaimers for purposes of section 2518, B, C, and D must disclaim their respective interest no later than 9 months after February 15, 1978.

Example (5). A, a resident of State Q, dies on January 10, 1979, devising certain real property to B. The disclaimer laws of State Q requires that a disclaimer be made with a reasonable time after a transfer. B disclaims the entire interest in real property on November 10, 1979. Although B's disclaimer may be effective under State Q law, it is not a qualified disclaimer under section 2518 because the disclaimer was made later than 9 months after the taxable transfer to B.

Example (6). A creates a revocable trust on June 1, 1980, in which B and C are given the income interest for life. Upon the death of the last income beneficiary, the remainder interest is to pass to D. The creation of the trust is not a completed gift for Federal gift tax purposes, but each distribution of trust income to B and C is a completed gift at the date of distribution. B and C must disclaim each income distribution no later than 9 months after the date of the particular distribution. In order to disclaim an income distribution in the form of a check, the recipient must return the check to the trustee uncashed along with a written disclaimer. A dies on September 1, 1982, causing the trust to become irrevocable, and the trust corpus is includible in A's gross estate for Federal estate tax purposes under section 2038. If B or C wishes to make a qualified disclaimer of his income interest, he must do so no later than 9 months after September 1, 1982. If D wishes to make a qualfied disclaimer of his remainder interest, he must do so no later than 9 months after September 1, 1982.

Example (7). On March 1, 1977, H and W purchase a tract of vacant land which is conveyed to them as tenants by the entirety. The entire consideration is paid by H. H does not elect, under section 2515, to have the transaction treated as a transfer for purposes of Chapter 12. H dies on June 1, 1981. On October 1, 1981, W disclaims the property. Assuming the other requirements of section 2518(b) are satisfied, W has made a qualified disclaimer because the transfer which created W's interest is treated as not occurring until H's death since no election was made under section 2515. Had an election been made under section 2515, then W's disclaimer of any of W's interest in the property would not be a qualified disclaimer.

Example (8). Assume the same facts as in example (7) except that H dies on September 3, 1982. W has until 9 months after September 3, 1984 to make a qualfied disclaimer, but she can only make a qualified disclaimer of one-half of the joint interest.

Example (9). On July 1, 1980, B transfers $10,000 to a bank account which is held jointly by B and C. Assume the transfer is not a completed gift for Federal gift tax purposes. The funds in the bank account may be withdrawn in full by either B or C at any time. C never receives funds from the bank account. B dies on August 15, 1989, and C disclaims the amount in the bank account on October 15, 1989. Assuming the remaining requirements of section 2518(b) are satisfied, C made a qualified disclaimer under section 2518(a) because it was made no later than 9 months after the taxable transfer that created an interest in C.

Example (10). H and W reside in State X, a community property state. On April 1, 1978, H and W purchase real property with community funds. The property is not held by H and W as jointly owned property with rights of survivorship. H and W hold the property until January 3, 1985, when H dies. H devises the portion of the property to W. On March 15, 1985, W disclaims the portion of the property devised to her by H. Assuming all the other requirements of section 2518(b) have been met, W has made a qualified disclaimer of the interest devised to her by H. However, W could not disclaim the interest in the property that she acquired on April 1, 1978.

(d) No acceptance of benefits—(1) Acceptance. A qualified disclaimer cannot be made with respect to an interest in property if the disclaimant has accepted the interest or any of its benefits, expressly or impliedly, prior to making the disclaimer. Acceptance is manifested by an affirmative act which is consistent with ownership of the interest in property. Acts indicative of acceptance include using the property or the interest in property; accepting dividends, interest, or rents from the property; and directing others to act with respect to the property or interest in property. However, merely taking delivery of an instrument of title, without more, does not constitute acceptance. Moreover, a disclaimant is not considered to have accepted property merely because under applicable local law title to the property vests immediately in the disclaimant upon the death of a decedent. The acceptance of one interest in property will not, by itself, constitute an acceptance of any other separate interests created by the transferor and held by the disclaimant in the same property. In the case of residential property, held in joint tenancy by some or all of the residents, a joint tenant will not be considered to have accepted the joint interest merely because the tenant resided on the property prior to disclaiming his interest in the property. The exercise of a power of appointment to any extent by the donee of the power is an acceptance of its benefits. In addition, the acceptance of any consideration in return for making the disclaimer is an acceptance of the benefits of the entire interest disclaimed.

(2) Fiduciaries. If a beneficiary who disclaims an interest in property is also a fiduciary, actions taken by such person in the exercise of fiduciary powers to preserve or maintain the disclaimed property shall not be treated as an acceptance of such property or any of its benefits. Under this rule, for example, an executor who is also a beneficiary may direct the harvesting of a crop of the general maintenance of a home. A fiduciary, however, cannot retain a wholly discretionary power to direct the enjoyment of the disclaimed interest. For example, a fiduciary's disclaimer of a beneficial interest does not meet the requirements of a qualified disclaimer if the fiduciary exercised or retains a discretionary power to allocate enjoyment of that interest amoung members of a designated class. See paragraph (a) of this section for rules relating to the effect of directing the redistribution of disclaimed property.

(3) Under 21 years of age. A beneficiary who is under 21 years of age has until 9 months after his twenty-first birthday in which to make a qualified disclaimer of his interest in property. Any action taken with regard to an interest in property by a beneficiary or a custodian prior to the beneficiary's twenty-first birthday will not be an acceptance by the beneficiary of the interest.

(4) Examples. The provisions of paragraph (d)(1), (2) and (3) of this section may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). On April 9, 1977. A established a trust for the benefit of B, then age 22. Under the terms of the trust, the current income of the trust is to be paid quarterly to B. Additionally, one half the principal is to be distributed to B when B attains the age of 30 years. The balance of the principal is to be distributed to B when B attains the age of 40 years. Pursuant to the terms of the trust. B received a distribution of income on June 30, 1977. On August 1, 1977, B disclaimed B's right to receive both the income from the trust and the principal of the trust. B's disclaimer of the income interest is not a qualified disclaimer for purposes of section 2518(a) because B accepted income prior to making the disclaimer. B's disclaimer of the principal however, does satisfy section 2518(b)(3). See also §25.2518–3 for rules relating to the disclaimer of less than an entire interest in property.

Example (2). B is the recipient of certain property devised to B under the will of A. The will stated that any disclaimed property was to pass to C. B and C entered into negotiations in which it was decided that B would disclaim all interest in the real property that was devised to B. In exchange, C promised to let B live in the family home for life. B's disclaimer is not a qualified disclaimer for purposes of section 2518(a) because B accepted consideration for making the disclaimer.

Example (3). A received a gift of Blackacre on December 25, 1978. A never resided on Blackacre but when property taxes on Blackacre became due on July 1, 1979, A paid them out of personal funds. On August 15, 1979, A disclaimed the gift of Blackacre. Assuming all the requirements of section 2518 (b) have been met, A has made a qualified disclaimer of Blackacre. Merely paying the properly taxes does not consitute an acceptance of Blackacre even though A's personal funds were used to pay the taxes.

Example (4). A died on February 15, 1978. Pursuant to A's will, B received a farm in State Z. B requested the excutor to sell the farm and to give the proceeds to B. The executor then sold the farm pursuant to B's request. B then disclaimed $50,000 of the proceeds from the sale of the farm. B's disclaimer is not a qualified disclaimer. By requesting the executor to sell the farm B accepted the farm even though the executor may not have been legally obligated to comply with B's request. See also §25.2518–3 for rules relating to the disclaimer of less than an entire interest in property.

Example (5). Assume the same facts as in example (4) except that instead of requesting the executor to sell the farm, B pledged the farm as security for a short-term loan which was paid off prior to distribution of the estate. B then disclaimed his interest in the farm. B's disclaimer is not a qualified disclaimer. By pledging the farm as security for the loan, B accepted the farm.

Example (6). A delivered 1,000 shares of stock in Corporation X to B as a gift on February 1, 1980. A had the shares registered in B's name on that date. On April 1, 1980, B disclaimed the interest in the 1,000 shares. Prior to making the disclaimer, B did not pledge the shares, accept any dividends or otherwise commit any acts indicative of acceptance. Assuming the remaining requirements of section 2518 are satisfied, B's disclaimer is a qualified disclaimer.

Example (7). On January 1, 1980, A created an irrevocable trust in which B was given a testamentary general power of appointment over the trust's corpus. B executed a will on June 1, 1980, in which B provided for the exercise of the power of appointment. On September 1, 1980, B disclaimed the testamentary power of appointment. Assuming the remaining requirements of section 2518 (b) are satisfied, B's disclaimer of the testamentary power of appointment is a qualified disclaimer.

Example (8). H and W reside in X, a community property state. On January 1, 1981, H and W purchase a residence with community funds. They continued to reside in the house until H dies testate on February 1, 1990. Although H could devise his portion of the residence to any person, H devised his portion of the residence to W. On September 1, 1990, W disclaims the portion of the residence devised to her pursuant to H's will but continues to live in the residence. Assuming the remaining requirements of section 2518 (b) are satisfied, W's disclaimer is a qualified disclaimer under section 2518 (a). W's continued occupancy of the house prior to making the disclaimer will not by itself be treated as an acceptance of the benefits of the portion of the residence devised to her by H.

Example (9). In 1979, D established a trust for the benefit of D's minor children E and F. Under the terms of the trust, the trustee is given the power to make discretionary distributions of current income and corpus to both children. The corpus of the trust is to be distributed equally between E and F when E becomes 35 years of age. Prior to attaining the age of 21 years on April 8, 1982, E receives several distributions of income from the trust. E receives no distributions of income between April 8, 1982 and August 15, 1982, which is the date on which E disclaims all interest in the income from the trust. As a result of the disclaimer the income will be distributed to F. If the remaining requirements of section 2518 are met, E's disclaimer is a qualified disclaimer under section 2518(a). To have a qualified disclaimer of the interest in corpus, E must disclaim the interest no later than 9 months after April 8, 1982, E's 21st birthday.

Example (10). Assume the same facts as in example (9) except that E accepted a distribution of income on May 13, 1982. E's disclaimer is not a qualified disclaimer under section 2518 because by accepting an income distribution after attaining the age of 21, E accepted benefits from the income interest.

Example (11). F made a gift of 10 shares of stock to G as custodian for H under the State X Uniform Gifts to Minors Act. At the time of the gift, H was 15 years old. At age 18, the local age of majority, the 10 shares were deliverd to and registered in the name of H. Between the receipt of the shares and H's 21st birthday, H received dividends from the shares. Within 9 months of attaining age 21, H disclaimed the 10 shares. Assuming H did not accept any dividends from the shares after attaining age 21, the disclaimer by H is a qualified disclaimer under section 2518.

(1) In general. A disclaimer is not a qualified disclaimer unless the disclaimed interest passes without any direction on the part of the disclaimant to a person other than the disclaimant (except as provided in paragraph (e)(2) of this section. If there is an express or implied agreement that the disclaimed interest in property is to be given or bequeathed to a person specified by the disclaimant, the disclaimant shall be treated as directing the transfer of the property interest. The requirements of a qualified disclaimer under section 2518 are not satisified if—

(i) The disclaimant, either alone or in conjunction with another, directs the redistribution or transfer of the property or interest in property to another person (or has the power to direct the redistribution or transfer of the property or interest in property to another person unless such power is limited by an ascertainable standard); or

(ii) The disclaimed property or interest in property passes to or for the benefit of the disclaimant as a result of the disclaimer (except as provided in paragraph (e)(2) of this section).

If a power of appointment is disclaimed, the requirements of this paragraph (e)(1) are satisfied so long as there is no direction on the part of the disclaimant with respect to the transfer of the interest subject to the power or with respect to the transfer of the power to another person. A person may make a qualified disclaimer of a beneficial interest in property even if after such disclaimer the disclaimant has a fiduciary power to distribute to designated beneficiaries, but ony if the power is subject to an ascertainable standard. See examples (11) and (12) of paragraph (e) (5) of this section.

(2) Disclaimer by surviving spouse. In the case of a disclaimer made by a decedent's surviving spouse with respect to property transferred by the decedent, the disclaimer satisfies the requirements of this paragraph (e) if the interest passes as a result of the disclaimer without direction on the part of the surviving spouse either to the surviving spouse or to another person. If the surviving spouse, however, retains the right to direct the beneficial enjoyment of the disclaimed property in a transfer that is not subject to Federal estate and gift tax (whether as trustee or otherwise), such spouse will be treated as directing the beneficial enjoyment of the disclaimed property, unless such power is limited by an ascertainable standard. See examples (4), (5), and (6) in paragraph (e)(5) of this section.

(3) Partial failure of disclaimer. If a disclaimer made by a person other than the surviving spouse is not effective to pass completely an interest in property to a person other than the disclaimant because—

(i) The disclaimant also has a right to receive such property as an heir at law, residuary beneficiary, or by any other means; and

(ii) The disclaimant does not effectively disclaim these rights, the disclaimer is not a qualified disclaimer with respect to the portion of the disclaimed property which the disclaimant has a right to receive. If the portion of the disclaimed interest in property which the disclaimant has a right to receive is not severable property or an undivided portion of the property, then the disclaimer is not a qualified disclaimer with respect to any portion of the property. Thus, for example, if a disclaimant who is not a surviving spouse receives a specific bequest of a fee simple interest in property and as a result of the disclaimer of the entire interest, the property passes to a trust in which the disclaimant has a remainder interest, then the disclaimer will not be a qualified disclaimer unless the remainder interest in the property is also disclaimed. See §25.2518–3 (a) (1) (ii) for the definition of severable property.

(4) Effect of precatory language. Precatory language is a disclaimer naming takers of disclaimed property will not be considered as directing the redistribution or transfer of the property or interest in property to such persons if the applicable State law gives the language no legal effect.

(5) Examples. The provisions of this paragraph (e) may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). A, a resident of State X, died on July 30, 1978. Pursuant to A's will, B, A's son and heir at law, received the family home. In addition, B and C each received 50 percent of A's residuary estate. B disclaimed the home. A's will made no provision for the distribution of property in the case of a beneficiary's disclaimer. Therefore, pursuant to the disclaimer laws of State X, the disclaimed property became part of the residuary estate. Because B's 50 percent share of the residuary estate will be increased by 50 percent of the value of the family home, the disclaimed property will not pass solely to another person. Consequently, B's disclaimer of the family home is a qualified disclaimer only with respect to the 50 percent portion that passes solely to C. Had B also disclaimed B's 50 percent interest in the residuary estate, the disclaimer would have been a qualified disclaimer under section 2518 of the entire interest in the home (assuming the remaining requirements of a qualified disclaimer were satisfied). Similarly, if under the laws of State X, the disclaimer has the effect of divesting B of all interest in the home, both as devisee and as a beneficiary of the residuary estate, including any property resulting from its sale, the disclaimer would be a qualified disclaimer of B's entire interest in the home.

Example (2). D, a resident of State Y, died testate on June 30, 1978. E, an heir at law of D, received specific bequests of certain severable personal property from D. E disclaimed the property transferred by D under the will. The will made no provision for the distribution of property in the case of a beneficiary's disclaimer. The disclaimer laws of State Y provide that such property shall pass to the decedent's heirs at law in the same manner as if the disclaiming beneficiary had died immediately before the testator's death. Because State Y's law treats E as predeceasing D, the property disclaimed by E does not pass to E as an heir at law or otherwise. Consequently, if the remaining requirements of section 2518(b) are satisfied, E's disclaimer is a qualified disclaimer under section 2518 (a).

Example (3). Assume the same facts as in example (2) except that State Y has no provision treating the disclaimant as predeceasing the testator. E's disclaimer satisfies section 2518 (b)(4) only to the extent that E does not have a right to receive the property as an heir at law. Had E disclaimed both the share E received under D's will and E's intestate share, the requirement of sectioa 2518 (b)(4) would have been satisfied.

Example (4). B died testate on February 13, 1980. B's will established both a marital trust and a nonmarital trust. The decedent's surviving spouse, A, is an income beneficiary of the marital trust and has a testamentary general power of appointment over its assets. A is also an income beneficiary of the nonmarital trust, but has no power to appoint or invade the corpus. The provisions of the will specify that any portion of the marital trust disclaimed is to be added to the nonmarital trust. A disclaimed 30 percent of the marital trust. (See §25.2518–3(b) for rules relating to the disclaimer of an undivided portion of an interest in property.) Pursuant to the will, this portion of the marital trust property was transferred to the nonmarital trust without any direction on the part of A. This disclaimer by A satisfies section 2518 (b)(4).

Example (5). Assume the same facts as in example (4) except that A, the surviving spouse, has both an income interest in the nonmarital trust and a testamentary nongeneral power to appoint amount designated beneficiaries. This power is not limited by an ascertainable standard. The requirements of section 2518 (b)(4) are not satisfied unless A also disclaims the non-general power to appoint the portion of the trust corpus that is attributable to the property that passed to the nonmarital trust as a result of A's disclaimer. Assuming that the fair market value of the disclaimed property on the date of the disclaimer is $250,000 and that the fair market value of the nonmarital trust (including the disclaimed property) immediately after the disclaimer is $750,000, A must disclaim the power to appoint one-third of the nonmarital trust's corpus. The result is the same regardless of whether the nongeneral power is testamentary or inter vivos.

Example (6). Assume the same facts as in example (4) except that A has both an income interest in the nonmarital trust and a power to invade corpus if needed for A's health or maintenance. In addition, an independent trustee has power to distribute to A any portion of the corpus which the trustee determines to be desirable for A's happiness. Assuming the other requirements of section 2518 are satisfied, A may make a qualified disclaimer of interests in the marital trust without disclaiming any of A's interests in the nonmarital trust.

Example (7). B died testate on June 1, 1980. B's will created both a marital trust and a nonmarital trust. The decedent's surviving spouse, C, is an income beneficiary of the marital trust and has a testamentary general power of appointment over its assets. C is an income beneficiary of the nonmarital trust, and additionally has the noncumulative right to withdraw yearly the greater of $5,000 or 5 percent of the aggregate value of the principal. The provisions of the will specify that any portion of the marital trust disclaimed is to be added to the nonmarital trust. C disclaims 50 percent of the marital trust corpus. Pursuant to the will, this amount is transferred to the nonmarital trust. Assuming the remaininag requirements of section 518(b) are satisfied, C's disclaimer is a qualified disclaimer.

Example (8). A, a resident of State X, died on July 19, 1979. A was survived by a spouse B, and three children, C, D, and E. Pursuant to A's will, B received one-half of A's estate and the children received equal shares of the remaining one-half of the estate. B disclaimed the entire interest B had received. The will made no provisions for the distribution of property in the case of a beneficiary's disclaimer. The disclaimer laws of State X provide that under these circumstances disclaimed property passes to the decedent's heirs at law in the same manner as if the disclaiming beneficiary had died immediately before the testator's death. As a result, C, D, and E are A's only remaining heirs at law, and will divide the disclaimed property equally among themselves. B's disclaimer includes language stating that "it is my intention, that C, D, and E will share equally in the division of this property as a result of my disclaimer. "State X considers these to be precatory words and gives them no legal effect. B's disclaimer meets all other requirements imposed by State X on disclaimers, and is considered as effective disclaimer under which the property will vest solely in C, D, and E in equal shares without any further action required by B. Therefore, B is not treated as directing the redistribution or transfer of the property. If the remaining requirements of section 2518 are met, B's disclaimer is a qualified disclaimer.

Example (9). C died testate on January 1, 1979. According to C's will, D was to receive ⅓ of the residuary estate with any disclaimed property going to E. D was also to receive a second ⅓ of the residuary estate with any disclaimed property going to F. Finally, D was to receive a final ⅓ of the residuary estate with any disclaimed property going to G. D specifically states that he is disclaiming the interest in which the disclaimed property is designated to pass to E. D has effectively directed that the disclaimed property will pass to E and therefore D's disclaimer is not a qualified disclaimer under section 2518(a).

Example (10). Assume the same facts as in example (9) except the C's will also states that D was to receive Blackacre and Whiteacre. C's will further provides that if D disclaimed Blackacre then such property was to pass to E and that if D disclaimed Whiteacre then Whiteacre was to pass to F. D specifically disclaims Blackacre with the intention that it pass to E. Assuming the other requirments of section 2518 are met, D has made a qualified disclaimer of Blackacre. Alternatively, D could disclaim an undivided disclaimer of Blackacre. Alternatively, D could disclaim an undivided portion of both Blackacre and Whiteacre. Assuming the other requirements of section 2518 are met, this would also be a qualified disclaimer.

Example (11). G creates an irrevocable trust on February 16, 1983, naming H, I and J as the income beneficiaries for life and F as the remainderman. F is also named the trustee and as trustee has the discretionary power to invade the corpus and make discretionary distributions to H, I or J during their lives. F disclaims the remainder interest on August 8, 1983, but retains his discretionary power to invade the corpus. F has not made a qualified disclaimer because F retains the power to direct enjoyment of the corpus and the retained fiduciary power is not limited by an ascertainable standard.

Example (12). Assume the same facts as in example (11) except that F may only invade the corpus to make distributions for the health, maintenance or support of H, I or J during their lives. If the other requirements of section 2518(b) are met, F has made a qualified disclaimer of the remainder interest because the retained fiduciary power is limited by an ascertainable standard.

(a) Disclaimer of a partial interest—(1) In general—(i) Interest. If the requirements of this section are met, the disclaimer of all or an undivided portion of any separate interest in property may be a qualified disclaimer even if the disclaimant has another interest in the same property. In general, each interest in property that is separately created by the transferor is treated as a separate interest. For example, if an income interest in securities is bequeathed to A for life, then to B for life, with the remainder interest in such securities bequeathed to A's estate, and if the remaining requirements of section 2518(b) are met, A could make a qualified disclaimer of either the income interest of the remainder, or an undivided portion of either interest. A could not, however, make a qualified disclaimer of the income interest for a certain number of years. Further, where local law merges interests separately created by the transferor, a qualified disclaimer will be allowed only if there is a disclaimer of the entire merged interest or an undivided portion of such merged interest. See example (12) in paragraph (d) of this section. See §25.2518–3(b) for rules relating to the disclaimer of an undivided portion. Where the merger of separate interests would occur but for the creation by the transferor of a nominal interest (as defined in paragraph (a)(1)(iv) of this section), a qualified disclaimer will be allowed only if there is a disclaimer of all the separate interests, or an undivided portion of all such interests, which would have merged but for the nominal interest.

(ii) Severable property. A disclaimant shall be treated as making a qualified disclaimer of a separate interest in property if the disclaimer relates to severable property and the disclaimant makes a disclaimer which would be a quailfied disclaimer if such property were the only property in which the disclaimant had an interest. If applicable local law does not recognize a purported disclaimer of severable property, the disclaimant must comply with the requirements of paragraph (c)(1) of §25.2518–1 in order to make a qualified disclaimer of the severable property. Severable property is property which can be divided into separate parts each of which, after severance, maintains a complete and independent existence. For example, a legatee of shares of corporate stock may accept some shares of the stock and make a qualified disclaimer of the remaining shares.

(iii) Powers of appointment. A power of appointment with respect to property is treated as a separate interest in such property and such power of appointment with respect to all or undivided portion of such property may be disclaimed independently from any other interests separately created by the transferor in the property if the requirements of section 2518(b) are met. See example (21) of paragraph (d) of this section. Further, a disclaimer of a power of appointment with respect to property is a qualified disclaimer only if any right to direct the beneficial enjoyment of the property which is retained by the disclaimant is limited by an ascertainable standard. See example (9) of paragraph (d) of this section.

(iv) Nominal interest. A nominal interest is an interest in property created by the transferor that—

(A) Has an actuarial value (as determined under §20.2031–10) of less than 5 percent of the total value of the property at the time of the taxable transfer creating the interest,

(B) Prevents the merger under local law of two or more other interests created by the transferor, and

(C) Can be clearly shown from all the facts and circumstances to have been created primarily for the purpose of preventing the merger of such other interests.

Factors to be considered in determining whether an interest is created primarily for the purpose of preventing merger include (but are not limited to) the following: the relationship between the transferor and the interest holder; the age difference between the interest holder and the beneficiary whose interests would have merged; the interest holder's state of health at the time of the taxable transfer; and, in the case of a contingent remainder, any other factors which indicate that the possibility of the interest vesting as a fee simple is so remote as to be negligible.

(2) In trust. A disclaimer is not a qualified disclaimer under section 2518 if the beneficiary disclaims income derived from specific property transferred in trust while continuing to accept income derived from the remaining properties in the same trust unless the disclaimer results in such property being removed from the trust and passing, without any direction on the part of the disclaimant, to persons other than the disclaimant or to the spouse of the decedent. Moreover, a disclaimer of both an income interest and a remainder interest in specific trust assets is not a qualified disclaimer if the beneficiary retains interest in other trust property unless, as a result of the disclaimer, such assets are removed from the trust and pass, without any direction on the part of the disclaimant, to persons other than the disclaimant or to the spouse of the decedent. The disclaimer of an undivided portion of an interest in a trust may be a qualified disclaimer. See also paragraph (b) of this section for rules relating to the disclaimer of an undivided portion of an interest in property.

(b) Disclaimer of undivided portion. A disclaimer of an undivided portion of a separate interest in property which meets the other requirements of a qualified disclaimer under section 2518(b) and the corresponding regulations is a qualified disclaimer. An undivided portion of a disclaimant's separate interest in property must consist of a fraction or percentage of each and every substantial interest or right owned by the disclaimant in such property and must extend over the entire term of the disclaimant's interest in such property and in other property into which such property is converted. A disclaimer of some specific rights while retaining other rights with respect to an interest in the property is not a qualified disclaimer of an undivided portion of the disclaimant's interest in property. Thus, for example, a disclaimer made by the devisee of a fee simple interest in Blackacre is not a qualified disclaimer if the disclaimant disclaims a remainder interest in Blackacre but retains a life estate.

(c) Disclaimer of a pecuniary amount. A disclaimer of a specific pecuniary amount out of a pecuniary or nonpecuniary bequest or gift which satisfies the other requirements of a qualified disclaimer under section 2518(b) and the corresponding regulations is a qualified disclaimer provided that no income or other benefit of the disclaimed amount inures to the benefit of the disclaimant either prior to or subsequent to the disclaimer. Thus, following the disclaimer of a specific pecuniary amount from a bequest or gift, the amount disclaimed and any income attributable to such amount must be segregated from the portion of the gift or bequest that was not disclaimed. Such a segregation of assets making up the disclaimer of a pecuniary amount must be made on the basis of the fair market value of the assets on the date of the disclaimer or on a basis that is fairly representative of value changes that may have occurred between the date of transfer and the date of the disclaimer. A pecuniary amount distributed to the disclaimant from the bequest or gift prior to the disclaimer shall be treated as a distribution of corpus from the bequest or gift. However, the acceptance of a distribution from the gift or bequest shall also be considered to be an acceptance of a proportionate amount of income earned by the bequest or gift. The proportionate share of income considered to be accepted by the disclaimant shall be determined at the time of the disclaimer according to the following formula:

$$\frac{\text{total amount of distributions received by the disclaimant out of the gift or bequest}}{\text{total value of the gift or bequest on the date of transfer}} \times \text{total amount of income earned by the gift or bequest between date of transfer and date of disclaimer.}$$

See examples (17), (18), and (19) in §25.2518–3(d) for illustrations of the rules set forth in this paragraph (c).

(d) Examples. The provisions of this section may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). A, a resident of State Q, died on August 1, 1978. A's will included specific bequests of 100 shares of stock in X corporation; 200 shares of stock in Y corporation; 500 shares of stock in Z corporation; personal effects consisting of paintings, home furnishings, jewelry, and silver, and a 500 acre farm consisting of a residence, various outbuildings, and 500 head of cattle. The laws of State Q provide that a disclaimed interest passes in the same manner as if the disclaiming beneficiary had died immediately before the testator's death. Pursuant to A's will. B was to receive both the personal effects and the farm. C was to receive all the shares of stock in Corporation X and Y and D was to receive all the shares of stock in Corporation Z. B disclaimed 2 of the paintings and all the jewelry, C disclaimed 50 shares of Y corporation stock, and D disclaimed 100 shares of Z corporation stock. If the remaining requirements of section 2518(b) and the corresponding regulations are met, each of these disclaimers is a qualified disclaimer for purposes of section 2518(a).

Example (2). Assume the same facts as in example (1) except that D disclaimed the income interest in the shares of Z corporation stock while retaining the remainder interest in such shares. D's disclaimer is not a qualified disclaimer.

Example (3). Assume the same facts as in example (1) except that B disclaimed 300 identified acres of the 500 acres. Assuming that B's disclaimer meets the remaining requirements of section 2518(b), it is a qualified disclaimer.

Example (4). Assume the same facts as in example (1) except that A devised the income from the farm to B for life and the remainder interest to C. B disclaimed 40 percent of the income from the farm. Assuming that it meets the remaining requirements of section 2518(b), B's disclaimer of an undivided portion of the income is a qualified disclaimer.

Example (5). E died on September 13, 1978. Under the provisions of E's will, E's shares of stock in X, Y, and Z corporations were to be transferred to a trust. The trust provides that all income is to be distributed currently to F and G in equal parts until F attains the age of 45 years. At that time the corpus of the trust is to be divided equally between F and G. F disclaimed the income arising from the shares of X stock. G disclaimed 20 percent of G's interest in the trust. F's disclaimer is not a qualified disclaimer because the X stock remains in the trust. If the remaining requirements of section 2518(b) are met, G's disclaimer is a qualified disclaimer.

Example (6). Assume the same facts as in example (5) except that F disclaimed both the income interest and the remainder interest in the shares of X stock. F's disclaimer results in the X stock being transferred out of the trust to G without any direction on F's part. F's disclaimer is a qualified disclaimer under section 2518(b).

Example (7). Assume the same facts as in example (5) except that F is only an income beneficiary of the trust. The X stock remains in the trust after F's disclaimer of the income arising from the shares of X stock. F's disclaimer is not a qualified disclaimer under section 2518.

Example (8). Assume the same facts as in example (5) except that F disclaimed the entire income interest in the trust while retaining the interest F has in corpus. Alternatively, assume that G disclaimed G's entire corpus interest while retaining G's interest in the income from the trust. If the remaining requirements of section 2518(b) are met, either disclaimer will be a qualified disclaimer.

Example (9). G creates an irrevocable trust on May 13, 1980, with H, I, and J as the income beneficiaries. In addition, H, who is the trustee, holds the power to invade corpus for H's health, maintenance, support and happiness and a testamentary power of appointment over the corpus. In the absence of the exercise of the power of appointment, the property passes to I and J in equal shares. H disclaimed the power to invade corpus for H's health, maintenance, support and happiness. Because H retained the testamentary power to appoint the property in the corpus, H's disclaimer is not a qualified disclaimer. If H also disclaimed the testamentary power of appointment, H's disclaimer would have been a qualified disclaimer.

Example (10). E creates an irrevocable trust on May 1, 1980, in which D is the income beneficiary for life. Subject to the trustee's discretion, E's children, A, B, and C, have the right to receive corpus during D's lifetime. The remainder passes to D if D survives A, B, C, and all their issue. D also holds an inter vivos power to appoint the trust corpus to A, B, and C. On September 1, 1980, D disclaimed the remainder interest. D's disclaimer is not a qualified disclaimer because D retained the power to direct the use and enjoyment of corpus during D's life.

Example (11). Under H's will, a trust is created from which W is to receive all of the income for life. The trustee has the power to invade the trust corpus for the support or maintenance of D during the life of W. The trust is to terminate at W's death, at which time the trust property is to be distributed to D. D makes a timely disclaimer of the right to corpus during W's lifetime, but does not disclaim the remainder interest. D's disclaimer is a qualified disclaimer assuming the remaining requirements of section 2518 are met.

Example (12). Under the provisions of G's will A received a life estate in a farm, and was the sole beneficiary of property in the residuary estate. The will also provided that the remainder interest in the farm pass to the residuary estate. Under local law A's interests merged to give A a fee simple in the farm. A made a timely disclaimer of the life estate. A's disclaimer of a partial interest is not a qualified disclaimer under section 2518(a). If A makes a disclaimer of the entire merged interest in the farm or an undivided portion of such merged interest than A would be making a qualified disclaimer assuming all the other requirements of section 2518(b) are met.

Example (13). A, a resident of State Z, dies on September 3, 1980. Under A's will, Blackacre is devised to C for life, then to D for 1 month, remainder to C. Had A not created D's interest, State Z law would have merged C's life estate and the remainder to C to create a fee simple interest in C. Assume that the actuarial value of D's interest is less than 5 percent of the total value of Blackacre on the date of A's death. Further assume that facts and circumstances (particularly the duration of D's interest) clearly indicate that D's interest was created primarily for the purpose of preventing the merger of C's two interests in Blackacre. D's interest in Blackacre is a nominal interest and C's two interests will, for purposes of making a qualified disclaimer, be considered to have merged. Thus, C cannot make a qualified disclaimer of his remainder while retaining the life estate. C can, however, make a qualified disclaimer of both of these interests entirely or an undivided portion of both.

Example (14). A, a resident of State X, dies on October 12, 1978. Under A's will, Blackacre was devised to B for life, then to C for life if C survives B, remainder to B's estate. On the date of A's death, B and C are both 8 year old grandchildren of A. In addition, C is in good health. The actural value of C's interest is less than 5 percent of the total value of Blackacre on the date of A's death. No facts are present which would indicate that the possibility of C's contingent interest vesting is so remote as to be negligible. Had C's contingent life estate not been created, B's life estate and remainder interests would have merged under local law to give B a fee simple interest in Blackacre. Although C's interest prevents the merger of B's two interests and has an actual value of less than 5 percent, C's interest is not a nominal interest within the meaning of §25.2518–3(a)(1)(iv) because the facts and circumstances do not clearly indicate that the interest was created primarily for the purpose of preventing the merger of other interests in the property. Assuming all the other requirements of section 2518(b) are met, B can make a qualified disclaimer of the remainder while retaining his life estate.

Example (15). In 1981, A transfers $60,000 to a trust created for the benefit of B who was given the income interest for life and who also has a testamentary nongeneral power of appointment over the corpus. A transfers an additional $25,000 to the trust on June 1, 1984. At that time the trust corpus (exclusive of the $25,000 transfer) has a fair market value of $75,000. On January 1, 1985, B disclaims the right to receive income attributable to 25 percent of the corpus

Assuming that no distributions were made to B attributable to the $25,000, B's disclaimer is a qualified disclaimer for purposes of section 2518(a) if all the remaining requirements of section 2518(b) are met.

Example (16). Under the provisions of B's will, A is left an outright cash legacy of $50,000 and has no other interest in B's estate. A timely disclaimer by A of any stated dollar amount is a qualified disclaimer under section 2518(a).

Example (17). D bequeaths his brokerage account to E. The account consists of stocks and bonds and a cash amount earning interest. The total value of the cash and assets in the account on the date of D's death is $100,000. Four months after D's death, E makes a withdrawal of cash from the account for personal use amounting to $40,000. Eight months after D's death, E disclaims $60,000 of the account without specifying any particular assets or cash. The cumulative fair market value of the stocks and bonds in the account on the date of the disclaimer is equal to the value of such stocks and bonds on the date of D's death. The income earned by the account between the date of D's death and the date of E's disclaimer was $20,000. The amount of income earned by the account that E accepted by withdrawing $40,000 from the account prior to the disclaimer is determined by applying the formula set forth in §25.2518–3(c) as follows:

$$\frac{$40{,}000}{$100{,}000} \times $20{,}000 = $8{,}000$$

E is considered to have accepted $8,000 of the income earned by the account. If (i) the $60,000 disclaimed by E and the $12,000 of income earned prior to the disclaimer which is attributable to that amount are segregated from the $8,000 of income E is considered to have accepted, (ii) E does not accept any benefits of the $72,000 so segregated, and (iii) the other requirements of section 2518(b) are met, then E's disclaimer of $60,000 from the account is a qualified disclaimer.

Example (18). A bequeathed his residuary estate to B. The residuary estate had a value of $1 million on the date of A's death. Six months later, B disclaimed $200,000 out of this bequest. B received distributions of all the income from the entire estate during the period of administration. When the estate was distributed, B received the entire residuary estate except for $200,000 in cash. B did not make a qualified disclaimer since he accepted the benefits of the $200,000 during the period of estate administration.

Example (19). Assume the same facts as in example (18) except that no income was paid to B and the value of the residuary estate on the date of the disclaimer (including interest earned from date of death) was $1.5 million. In addition, as soon as B's disclaimer was made, the executor of A's estate set aside assets worth $300,000 and the interest earned after the disclaimer on that amount in a separate fund so that none of the income was paid to B. B's disclaimer is a qualified disclaimer under section 2518(a).

Example (20). A bequeathed his residuary estate to B. B disclaims a fractional share of the residuary estate. Any disclaimed property will pass to A's surviving spouse, W. The numerator of the fraction disclaimed is the smallest amount which will allow A's estate to pass free of Federal estate tax and the denominator is the value of the residuary estate. B's disclaimer is a qualified disclaimer.

Example (21). A created a trust on July 1, 1979. The trust provides that all current income is to be distributed equally between B and C for the life of B. B also is given a testamentary general power of appointment over the corpus. If the power is not exercised, the corpus passes to C or C's heirs. B disclaimed the testamentary power to appoint an undivided one-half of the trust corpus. Assuming the remaining requirements of section 2518(b) are satisfied, B's disclaimer is a qualified disclaimer under section 2518(a).

Part III. Administrative, Procedural, and Miscellaneous

Application of Proposed Product Grouping Rules for Purposes of the Possessions Tax Credit

Notice 86–9

The Internal Revenue Service announced today that it will grant relief under section 7805(b) with respect to the product grouping rules of the final regulations under section 936(h), which were published in the Federal Register on June 13, 1986. Under section 1.936–5(a), question and answer 9, of those regulations, products may be "grouped" only on the basis of similarities in the production processes of the products. However, under the product grouping rules provided in Proposed Regulations section 1.936–5(a), question and answer 5, which were published in the Federal Register on January 10, 1984, taxpayers were permitted to group pharmaceutical products either on the basis of similarities in the production process or on the basis of active ingredient. This notice provides that, except as provided below, for taxable years beginning before July 1, 1986, taxpayers can continue to use either grouping method with respect to pharmaceutical products. Thus, no amended return will be required if taxpayers have grouped under either method for those years.

This limited grant of Section 7805(b) relief does not affect the determination under the final regulations of whether a product is a new product for purposes of satisfying the start-up significant business presence test. Accordingly, a product will be treated as a new product only if that product could not have been grouped on the basis of similarities in the production process. Furthermore, this limited grant of 7805(b) relief does not apply for any taxable year if—

(1) The taxpayer produced a product which could have been grouped with other products under an active ingredient grouping, but

(2) That product could not have been grouped with those other products based on similarities in production process, and

(3) The taxpayer, for that year, treats, or would treat on the filing of an amended return for that year, the subject product as a new product for purposes of the start-up significant business presence test.

Those taxpayers must utilize the grouping rules of the final regulations.

Part IV. Items of General Interest

Alternative Minimum Tax Computation

Announcement 86–93

Section 13208 of Public Law 99–272, Consolidated Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Action of 1985, 1986–29 I.R.B. 4, 36, amends section 57(a)(9) of the Internal Revenue Code to allow certain insolvent taxpayers to reduce the capital gains preference item for purposes of the Individual Alternative Minimum Tax. This relief is directed towards farm insolvencies and applies to transfers, sales or exchanges of farm land made after December 31, 1981. The statute states that the taxpayer had to be insolvent (excess of liabilities over fair market value of assets) immediately prior to the transaction. If a taxpayer claims relief under these provisions, he/she should notate, "SECTION 13208 RELIEF," on the dotted line next to Item 4(b), 60 percent Capital Gain deduction, on Form 6251, Alternative Minimum Tax Computation, so that the Internal Revenue Service can properly compute the tax liability.

Announcement of the Disbarment, Suspension, or Consent to Voluntary Suspension of Attorneys, Certified Public Accountants, Enrolled Agents and Enrolled Actuaries from Practice Before the Internal Revenue Service

Under 31 Code of Federal Regulations, Part 10, an attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary, in order to avoid the institution or conclusion of a proceeding for his disbarment or suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service, may offer his consent to suspension from such practice. The Director of Practice, in his discretion, may suspend an attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary in accordance with the consent offered.

Attorneys, certified public accountants, enrolled agents, and enrolled actuaries are prohibited in any Internal Revenue Service matter from directly or indirectly employing, accepting assistance from, being employed by or sharing fees with, any practitioner disbarred or under suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service.

To enable attorneys, certified public accountants, enrolled agents and enrolled actuaries to identify practitioners under consent suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service, the Director of Practice will announce in the Internal Revenue Bulletin the names and addresses of practitioners who have been suspended from such practice, their designation as attorneys, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary, and the date or period of suspension. This announcement will appear in the weekly Bulletin at the earliest practicable date after such action and will continue to appear in the weekly Bulletin for five successive weeks or for as many weeks as is practicable for each attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary so suspended and will later be consolidated and published in the Cumulative Bulletin.

The following individuals have been placed under consent suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service:

Definition of Terms

Revenue rulings and revenue procedures (hereinafter referred to as "rulings") that have an effect on previous rulings use the following defined terms to describe the effect:

Amplified describes a situation where no change is being made in a prior published position, but the prior position is being extended to apply to a variation of the fact situation set forth therein. Thus, if an earlier ruling held that a principle applied to A, and the new ruling holds that the same principle also applies to B, the earlier ruling is amplified. (Compare with modified, below).

Clarified is used in those instances where the language in a prior ruling is being made clear because the language has caused, or may cause, some confusion. It is not used where a position in a prior ruling is being changed.

Distinguished describes a situation where a ruling mentions a previously published ruling and points out an essential difference between them.

Modified is used where the substance of a previously published position is being changed. Thus, if a prior ruling held that a principle applied to A but not to B, and the new ruling holds that it applies to both A and B, the prior ruling is modified because it corrects a published position. (Compare with amplified and clarified, above).

Obsoleted describes a previously published ruling that is not considered determinative with respect to future transactions. This term is most commonly used in a ruling that lists previously published rulings that are obsoleted because of changes in law or regulations. A ruling may also be obsoleted because the substance has been included in regulations subsequently adopted.

Revoked describes situations where the position in the previously published ruling is not correct and the correct position is being stated in the new ruling.

Superseded describes a situation where the new ruling does nothing more than restate the substance and situation of a previously published ruling (or rulings). Thus, the term is used to republish under the 1954 Code and regulations the same position published under the 1939 Code and regulations. The term is also used when it is desired to republish in a single ruling a series of situations, names, etc., that were previously published over a period of time in separate rulings. If the new ruling does more than restate the substance of a prior ruling, a combination of terms is used. For example, modified and superseded describes a situation where the substance of a previously published ruling is being changed in part and is continued without change in part and it is desired to restate the valid portion of the previously published ruling in a new ruling that is self contained. In this case the previously published ruling is first modified and then, as modified, is superseded.

Supplemented is used in situations in which a list, such as a list of the names of countries, is published in a ruling and that list is expanded by adding further names in subsequent rulings. After the original ruling has been supplemented several times, a new ruling may be published that includes the list in the original ruling and the additions, and supersedes all prior rulings in the series.

Suspended is used in rare situations to show that the previous published rulings will not be applied pending some future action such as the issuance of new or amended regulations, the outcome of cases in litigation, or the outcome of a Service study.

Internal Revenue Service

T 22.23:

Mission of the Service

The purpose of the Internal Revenue Service is to collect the proper amount of tax revenues at the least cost to the public, and in a manner that warrants the highest degree of public confidence in our integrity, efficiency and fairness. To achieve that purpose, we will:

—Encourage and achieve the highest possible degree of voluntary compliance in accordance with the tax law and regulations;

—Advise the public of their rights and responsibilities;

—Determine the extent of compliance and the causes of noncompliance;

—Do all things needed for the proper administration and enforcement of the tax laws;

—Continually search for and implement new, more efficient and effective ways of accomplishing our Mission.

Statement of Principles of Internal Revenue Tax Administration

The function of the Internal Revenue Service is to administer the Internal Revenue Code. Tax policy for raising revenue is determined by Congress.

With this in mind, it is the duty of the Service to carry out that policy by correctly applying the laws enacted by Congress; to determine the reasonable meaning of various Code provisions in light of the Congressional purpose in enacting them; and to perform this work in a fair and impartial manner, with neither a government nor a taxpayer point of view.

At the heart of administration is interpretation of the Code. It is the responsibility of each person in the Service, charged with the duty of interpreting the law, to try to find the true meaning of the statutory provision and not to adopt a strained construction in the belief that he or she is "protecting the revenue." The revenue is properly protected only when we ascertain and apply the true meaning of the statute.

The Service also has the responsibility of applying and administering the law in a reasonable, practical manner. Issues should only be raised by examining officers when they have merit, never arbitrarily or for trading purposes. At the same time, the examining officer should never hesitate to raise a meritorious issue. It is also important that care be exercised not to raise an issue or to ask a court to adopt a position inconsistent with an established Service position.

Administration should be both reasonable and vigorous. It should be conducted with as little delay as possible and with great courtesy and considerateness. It should never try to overreach, and should be reasonable within the bounds of law and sound administration. It should, however, be vigorous in requiring compliance with law and it should be relentless in its attack on unreal tax devices and fraud.

Introduction

The Internal Revenue Bulletin is the authoritative instrument of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for announcing official rulings and procedures of the Internal Revenue Service and for publishing Treasury Decisions, Executive Orders, Tax Conventions, legislation, court decisions, and other items of general interest. It is published weekly and may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. Bulletin contents of a permanent nature are consolidated semiannually into Cumulative Bulletins, which are sold on a single-copy basis.

It is the policy of the Service to publish in the Bulletin all substantive rulings necessary to promote a uniform application of the tax laws, including all rulings that supersede, revoke, modify, or amend any of those previously published in the Bulletin. All published rulings apply retroactively unless otherwise indicated. Procedures relating solely to matters of internal management are not published; however, statements of internal practices and procedures that affect the rights and duties of taxpayers are published.

Revenue rulings represent the conclusions of the Service on the application of the law to the pivotal facts stated in the revenue ruling. In those based on positions taken in rulings to taxpayers or technical advice to Service field offices, identifying details and information of a confidential nature are deleted to prevent unwarranted invasions of privacy and to comply with statutory requirements.

Rulings and procedures reported in the Bulletin do not have the force and effect of Treasury Department Regulations, but they may be used as precedents. Unpublished rulings will not be relied on, used, or cited as precedents by Service personnel in the disposition of other cases. In applying published rulings and procedures, the effect of subsequent legislation, regulations, court decisions, rulings, and procedures must be considered, and Service personnel and others concerned are cautioned against reaching the same conclusions in other cases unless the facts and circumstances are substantially the same.

The Bulletin is divided into four parts as follows:

Part I.—1954 Code.

This part includes rulings and decisions based on provisions of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

Part II.—Treaties and Tax Legislation.

This part is divided into two subparts as follows: Subpart A, Tax Conventions, and Subpart B, Legislation and Related Committee Reports.

Part III.—Administrative, Procedural, and Miscellaneous.

To the extent practicable, pertinent cross references to these subjects are contained in the other Parts and Subparts.

Part IV.—Items of General Interest.

With the exception of the disbarment and suspension list included in this part, none of these announcements is consolidated in the Cumulative Bulletins.

The first Bulletin for each month includes an index for the matters published during the preceding month. These monthly indexes are cumulated on a quarterly and semiannual basis, and are published in the first Bulletin of the succeeding quarterly and semi-annual period, respectively.

The Bulletin Index-Digest System, a research and reference service supplementing the Bulletin, may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. It consists of four Services: Service No. 1, Income Tax; Service No. 2, Estate and Gift Taxes; Service No. 3, Employment Taxes; Service No. 4, Excise Taxes. Each Service consists of a basic volume and a cumulative supplement that provide (1) finding lists of items published in the Bulletin, (2) digests of revenue rulings, revenue procedures, and other published items, and (3) indexes of Public Laws, Treasury Decisions, and Tax Conventions.

The contents of this publication are not copyrighted and may be reprinted freely. A citation of the Internal Revenue Bulletin as the source would be appropriate.

For sale by the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402. Prices: Domestic—$1.75 a single copy, $82.00 a year subscription. Foreign—$2.19 a single copy, $102.50 a year for subscription.

Announcement Relating to Decisions of the Tax Court

It is the policy of the Internal Revenue Service to announce in the Internal Revenue Bulletin at the earliest practicable date the determination of the Commissioner to acquiesce or not acquiesce in a decision of the Tax Court which disallows a deficiency in tax determined by the Commissioner to be due.

Notice that the Commissioner has acquiesced or nonacquiesced in a decision of the Tax Court relates only to the issue or issues decided adversely to the Government.

Actions of acquiescences in adverse decisions shall be relied on by Revenue officers and others concerned as conclusions of the Service only to the application of the law to the facts in the particular case. Caution should be exercised in extending the application of the decision to a similar case unless the facts and circumstances are substantially the same, and consideration should be given to the effect of new legislation, regulations, and rulings as well as subsequent court decisions and actions thereon.

Acquiescence in a decision means acceptance by the Service of the conclusion reached, and does not necessarily mean acceptance and approval of any or all of the reasons assigned by the Court for its conclusions.

No announcements are made in the Bulletin with respect to memorandum opinions of the Tax Court.

The announcements published in the weekly Internal Revenue Bulletins are consolidated semiannually and annually. The semiannual consolidation appears in the first Bulletin for July and in the Cumulative Bulletin for the first half of the year and the annual consolidation appears in the first Bulletin for the following January and in the Cumulative Bulletin for the last half of the year.

The Commissioner ACQUIESCES in the following decisions:

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: BACKGROUND

This document adds new temporary regulations §1.338(b)–4T to Part 1 of Title 26 of the Code of Federal Regulations. Section 338(b) was added top the Internal Revenue Code by section 224 of TEFRA (Pub. L. No. 97–248; 96 Stat. 485) and was amended by section 712(k) of the Tax Reform Act of 1984 (Pub. L. No. 98–369; 98 Stat. 948) [1984–3 C.B. 1, 456]. On January 29, 1986, T.D. 8072 was published in the Federal Register (51 FR 3583) [1986–1 C.B. 111] to implement section 338(b) of the Code by adding temporary regulations §§1.338(b)–1T, 1.338(b)–2T, and 1.338(b)–3T. (Due to typesetting errors, the Federal Register republished T.D. 8072 in its entirety on March 28, 1986 (51 FR 10617).) Conforming amendments are made to temporary regulations §§1,338(b)–2T, 1.338–1T, and 1.338–4T. Additional amendments are made to §§1.338–1T, 1.338-3T, 1.338–4T, and 1.338–5T to change the filing requirements for certain documents. Sections 1.338–1T, 1.338–4T, 1.338–5T, and 1.338(h)(10)–1T were most recently amended by T.D. 8088 [1986–1 C.B. 103] published in the Federal Register on May 16, 1986 (51 FR 17929). Section 1.338–3T was most recently amended by T.D. 7975, published in the Federal Register on September 6, 1984 (49 FR 35086) [1984–2 C.B. 81]. The temporary regulations added and amended by this document will provide certain transitional rules under section 338(b) of the Code and change the place for filing certain documents related to elections under section 338. These temporary regulations will remain in effect until superseded by later temporary or final regulations relating to these matters.

EXPLANATION OF PROVISIONS

Introduction

Section 338 generally provides that if a corporation ("purchasing corporation") acquires the stock of another corporation ("target") in a qualified stock purchase, the purchasing corporation may elect (or may be deemed to elect under certain consistency rules) to have the target treated as if it sold all of its assets (as "old target") at fair market value and then purchased those assets (as "new target"). The deemed sale of assets by old target takes place at the close of the day on which the qualified stock purchase occurred ("acquisition date") and generally is governed by the nonrecognition provisions of section 337. New target is deemed to purchase those assets ("acquisition date assets") at the beginning of the day after the acquisition date. Section 338(b) sets forth the framework for determining the aggregate amount of new target's deemed purchase price for old target's assets ("adjusted grossed-up basis") and allocating this amount among new target's acquisition date assets. The temporary regulations added by this document provide transitional rules relating to the method of allocating adjusted grossed-up basis among the assets of new target.

Allocation of Adjusted Grossed-up Basis Under §1.338(b)–2T

Section 1.338(b)–2T of the temporary regulations, published on January 29, 1986, prescribes the method for allocating adjusted grossed-up basis among new target's acquistion date assets. Section 1.338(b)–2T(b) identifies four classes of assets. "Class I assets" are cash, deposits in banks, and similar cash items.

"Class II assets" are certificates of deposit, United States government securities, certain marketable stocks and securities, foreign currency, and similar items. "Class IV assets" are intangible assets in the nature of goodwill and going concern value. All assets not described above are "Class III assets." As a general rule, a proportionate method of allocation is prescribed for the allocation of basis within each class of assets, although a residual method of allocation is prescribed for the allocation of basis within each class of assets, although a residual method of allocation is prescribed for allocation among the asset classes, allocation beginning with the lowest numbered class.

Under the existing temporary regulations, the amount of adjusted grossed-up basis allocated to any asset, other than Class IV assets, cannot exceed its fair market value. In general, the existing temporary regulations provide that adjusted grossed-up basis, after reduction by the amount of Class I assets, is allocated among Class II assets of target in proportion to their fair market values as of the beginning of the day after the acquisition date, then among Class III assets in such proportion, and, finally, to Class IV assets in such proportion. Thus, adjusted grossed-up basis is allocated within each class of assets to the extent of the fair market value of the assets in that class, with any remaining amount allocated to the next class of assets. The unallocated amount of adjusted grossed-up basis remaining after allocation among the Class III assets is allocated to Class IV assets.

Transitional Rule in Response to Public Comments

The temporary regulations under section 338(b), published on January 29, 1986, apply to qualified stock purchases that occurred after August 31, 1982, for which an election under section 338 applies. Several public comments received subsequent to publication of the temporary regulations have asserted that the temporary regulations constitute a departure from prior law. Accordingly, prospective application of these rules has been requested. In support of this request, comments have noted a lack of specific guidance concerning the allocation of adjusted grossed-up basis following the enactment of TEFRA in 1982 until the temporary regulations were published on January 29, 1986. Although the time for making a section 338 election has been extended many times so that taxpayers could postpone the election decision until all significant regulations under section 338 were published, taxpayers contend that fairness requires that adjusted grossed-up basis may be allocated among new target's assets in the manner permitted under the law for analogous cases.

Taxpayers assert that business necessity compelled them to act in advance of the publication of all significant regulations. As a result, in deciding whether to proceed with taxable stock acquisitions, taxpayers were compelled to predict the basis allocation method that would be prescribed. In doing so, it is asserted that they justifiably relied upon authority applicable to transactions analogous to section 338 transactions.

The Internal Revenue Service believes that the allocation method prescribed in the temporary regulations is a reasonable, proper, and correct allocation method. Nevertheless, due to the substantial period during which there were no regulations relating to the allocation of adjusted grossed-up basis, it has concluded that a transitional rule permitting the allocation of basis under rules which would govern the acquisition of a combination of assets for a lump sum is appropriate for qualified stock purchases that occurred before the regulations were published. Accordingly, this document adds a new §1.338(b)–4T to the temporary regulations under section 338(b) to provide such a rule.

If the purchase price for a business equals the aggregate fair market value of its assets, the residual method of allocation prescribed in §1.338(b)–2T will result in the same allocation as an allocation under the transitional allocation election. If the purchaser believes it paid a premium for the business, that is, an amount in excess of the aggregate fair market value of each of the underlying assets (including goodwill and going concern value), the purchaser may desire to use a proportionate allocation method which would provide for a "second-tier allocation," i.e., an allocation of the premium to the target's assets in proportion to their respective fair market values. For a description of the second-tier method of allocation, see S. Rep. 313, 99th Cong., 2d Sess, 253 (1986).

The Internal Revenue Service believes that, as a factual proposition, the price paid for target stock will, in most cases, reflect the aggregate fair market value of all of the target's assets, including assets in the nature of goodwill and going concern value. Therefore, the Internal Revenue Service believes that in most cases the allocation of basis under the transitional allocation election will produce the same results as allocation of basis under the residual method prescribed in §1.338(b)–2T. For these reasons, the allocation of adjusted grossed-up basis under the transitional allocation election will be closely scrutinized by the Internal Revenue Service. Specifically, an allocation of basis to an asset in excess of its fair market value must be supported by facts and circumstances indicating that the purchase price for target stock exceeds the aggregate fair market value of all of the target's assets. The taxpayer bears the burden of establishing the existence of such facts and circumstances.

The new provision allows taxpayers to allocate adjusted grossed-up basis pursuant to the rules of Federal income tax law that apply to the purchase on the acquisition date of a combination of assets for a lump sum. For purposes of making an allocation under such method, the provisions of §1.338(b)–2T, other than paragraphs (a) and (c)(2) of that section, do not apply. In order to use such method of allocation, the purchasing corporation must make a "tansitional allocation election." The election is made by filing a "transitional allocation election statement" with the district director for the internal revenue district in which the purchasing corporation has its principal place of business. The statement also must be attached to the first return of new target. The transitional allocation election is irrevocable and can only be made for an original target the stock of which was acquired in a qualified stock purchase on or before January 29, 1986, or which was acquired after that date but pursuant to a binding contract in effect (or a tender offer outstanding) as of January 29, 1986. The transitional allocation election applies to the original target and to all affected targets that were acquired on or before January 29, 1986.

The allocation of adjustments to adjusted grossed-up basis resulting from events occurring after the close of new target's first taxable year is also subject to the transitional allocation election. Thus, such adjustments are allocated among target's acquisition date assets in the same manner as adjusted grossed-up basis is allocated under §1.338(b)–4T and, except as otherwise provided in §1.338(b)–4T(e)(3), the rules in §1.338(b)–3T do not apply. In addition, if the aggregate deemed sale price (ADSP) for old target is calculated under the elective formula described in §1.338–4T(h)(3), then the ADSP must be allocated among old target's assets pursuant to the method used to allocate adjusted grossed-up basis among new target's assets pursuant to the transitional allocation election. Conforming amendments are made to §1.338–4T to effect this result.

This document also contains certain amendments to §1.338–1T to provide additional guidance relating to the transitional allocation election.

Amendments to §1.338(h)(10)–1T

This document amends the regulations under section 338(h)(10) to conform the method of allocating MADSP among old target's assets to the method of allocating adjusted grossed-up basis among new target's assets. A similar amendment was made to §1.338–4T(h) for the allocation of ADSP among old target's assets by T.D. 8072, published in the Federal Register on January 29, 1986 (51 FR 3583, republished on March 28, 1986 (51 FR 10617): The amendment to §1.338(h)(10)–1T does not apply to qualified stock purchases that occurred on or before July 1, 1986.

Miscellaneous Amendments

This document also contains miscellaneous amendments to §§1.338–1T, 1.338–3T, 1.338–4T, and 1.338–5T. Prior to these amendments, the statement of section 338 election and other documents related to elections under section 338 generally were required to be filed with Service Centers. Beginning January 1, 1987, many documents relating to elections made under section 338 are required to be filed with the District Director for the internal revenue district in which is located the principal place of business or the principal office or agency of the purchasing corporation. Documents filed on or after July 1, 1986 and before January 1, 1987 may be filed with either the District Director or with any other office permitted under the regulations. These changes are necessary in order to more effectively administer the provisions of section 338. An amendment is also made to the Example in §1.338–4T(h)(3) Answer 3 to clarify the method of allocating the aggregate deemed sale price under the elective formula under section 338(h)(11).

Regulatory Flexibility Act; Executive Order 12291; and Paperwork Reduction Act of 1980

A general notice of proposed rulemaking is not required by 5 U.S.C. 553 for temporary regulations. Accordingly, these temporary regulations do not constitute regulations subject to the Regulatory Flexibility Act (5 U.S.C. chapter 6). The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has determined that this temporary rule is not a major rule as defined in Executive Order 12291 and that a regulatory impact analysis therefore is not required. The collection of information contained in these regulations has been submitted to the Office of Management and Budget in accordance with the requirements of the Paperwork Reduction Act of 1980. These requirements have been approved by OMB (Control number 1545-0702).

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal author of these temporary regulations is Patricia Wendlandt of the Legislation and Regulations Division of the Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, personnel from other offices of the Internal Revenue Service and Treasury Department participated in developing the regulations, both on matters of substance and style.

§1.338–1T Elections under section 338(g) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (temporary).

(c) Time and manner of making election—(1) In general. The purchasing corporation makes an election under section 338(g) for the original target only by filing, not later than the 15th day of the 9th month beginning after the month in which the acquisition date occurs (or if later, July 15, 1986), a statement of section 338 election in the Form 8023 filing place. The Form 8023 filing place is:

(i) For a statement of section 338 election that is filed before July 1, 1986, the Internal Revenue Service Center with which the purchasing corporation files its annual income tax return.

(ii) For a statement of section 338 election that is filed on or after January 1, 1987, the District Director (Attention: Chief of Examination) for the internal revenue district in which the purchasing corporation's income tax return would be filed if §1.6091–2(b) applied (i.e., the internal revenue district in which is located the principal place of business or the principal office or agency of the corporation).

(iii) For a statement of section 338 election that is filed on or after July 1, 1986 and before January 1, 1987, either of the places described in subdivisions (i) and (ii) of this subparagraph (1).

(2) Additional rules. If the statement of section 338 election for the original target will cause section 338(a) to apply to other corporations ("affected targets") by reason of section 338(f)(1), a separate statement of section 338 election need not be filed for those affected targets. See paragraph (e)(1) of this section for requirement to attach a schedule containing information relating to the original target and the affected targets. See paragraph (k)(7) of this section for a required notice to the domestic shareholders of foreign targets in certain cases. See also paragraph (k) of this section generally for other special rules applicable to certain foreign corporations and DISCs. For special rules applicable to certain statements of section 338 election filed on or after December 9, 1985, and on or before July 15, 1986, see paragraph (m) of this section.

(d) Statement of section 338 election. * * *

(3) Qualified stock purchase made by several corporations in the aggregate. * * * A copy of this single statement of section 338 election must be filed within the time specified in paragraph (c) of this section in the Form 83 filing place (determined under paragraph (c) of this section) of each such member.

(e) Schedule; attachments to target returns—(1) Schedule of information relating to certain corporations and persons. * * *

(ii) Corrective statements—(A) Transitional rule. If a statement of section 338 election filed on or before July 15, 1986, does not include the schedule with all of the required data, the requirements of paragraph (e)(1)(i) of this section will be satisfied if, on or before July 15, 1986, a corrective statement in the form of the schedule (containing all of the required data, and with a copy of the previously filed statement of section 338 election attached) is filed in the Form 8023 filing place(s) where a statement of section 338 election would be filed, under paragraphs (c) and (d) of this section, on the date the corrective statement is filed.

(B) Regular exclusion election invalidated. If, subsequent to the making of a regular exclusion election, that exclusion election is invalidated by reason of an invalidation event described in §1.338–5T(c)(2)(iii) and if, by reason of the invalidation event, a previously filed schedule under this subparagraph (1) incorrectly identifies certain corporations as excludible foreign target affiliates subject to a regular exclusion election, then the requirements of paragraph (e)(1)(i) of this section will be satisfied if, on or before the later of July 15, 1986, or the 120th day after the date of the invalidation event, a corrective statement in the form of an amended schedule (along with a copy of the previously filed statement of section 338 election) is filed in the Form 8023 filing place(s) where a statement of section 338 election would be filed, under paragraphs (c) and (d) of this section, on the date the corrective statement is filed. * * *

(2) Attachments to target returns; additional filings with certain Service Centers and District Directors. * * *

(ii) Corrective statements—(A) Transitional rule. If all of the required items (containing all of the information required to be included in those items) are not attached to a final return of old target or a first return of new target that is filed on or before July 15, 1986, the requirements of paragraph (e)(2)(i) of this section will be satisfied if on or before that date a corrective statement consisting of all of the required items (containing all of the information required to be included in those items) is filed with the Internal Revenue Service Center(s) with which the returns to which the required items should have been attached were filed. A corrective statement that is filed on or after January 1, 1987, must be attached to an amended return. Prior to that date, however, attachment to an amended return is optional.

(B) Special rule if regular exclusion election invalidated. If, under the circumstances described in paragraph (e)(1)(ii)(B) of this section (relating to invalidation of regular exclusion election), a previously filed schedule under this paragraph (e)(2) incorrectly identifies certain corporations as excludible foreign target affiliates subject to a regular exclusion election, then the requirements of paragraph (e)(2)(i) of this section will be satisfied only if, on or before the 120th day after the date of the invalidation event, a corrective statement in the form of an amended schedule (containing the information and attachment required by paragraph (e)(1)(ii)(B) of this section) is filed with the Internal Revenue Service Center(s) with which the returns to which the previously filed schedule was attached were filed. A corrective statement that is filed on or after January 1, 1987, must be attached to an amended return. Prior to that date, however, attachment to an amended return is optional.

(iii) Additional filings with certain Service Centers and District Directors. On or before the day on which any return or corrective statement described in paragraph (e)(2)(i) or (ii) of this section is filed, the required items also must be filed in the Form 8023 filing place(s) where a statement of section 338 election would be filed, under paragraphs (c) and (d) of this section, on the date the return or corrective statement is filed. If a gain recognition election under section 338(b)(3) is made in connection with the statement of section 338 election (so that a copy of the gain recognition statement ("GRS") under §1.338–4T(j)(2) is a required item pursuant to paragraph (e)(2)(i)(A) of this section and the required items are filed with a Service Center under paragraph (c)(1) of this section, then, on or before the day specified in the preceding sentence, the required items also must be filed with each other Internal Revenue Service Center with which each affected P group member (determined as of the day of filing) files its annual income tax return. For the definition of "affected P group member," see §1.338–4T(j)(2) Answer 5(ii)(A). The required items need not, however, be filed with a Service Center or District Director that already has received the identical required items.

(vi) Transitional allocation election statements. A copy of the transitional allocation election statement prescribed in §1.338(b)–4T(c)(1) is required to be attached to the first return (or amended return) of the original target (and each affected target) as new target. A copy of the supplemental transitional allocation election statement prescribed by §1.338(b)–4T(c)(3) is required to be attached only to the first return of the new target (or new targets) identified in that statement.

* * * * *

(h) Waiver: certain additions to tax and times to act, etc. * * *

(2) Elections or other actions required to be specified on a timely filed return. * * *

(ii) New target in purchasing group's consolidated return. If new target is includible for its first taxable year in a consolidated return filed by the purchasing group on or before the later of July 15, 1986, or the last day for making the election under section 338, then any election or other action that must be specified in a timely filed return for new target's first taxable year (but which is not specified in the consolidated return) will be considered timely if specified in an amended return filed on or before the later of July 15, 1986, or such last day, with the Internal Revenue Service Center with which the consolidated return was filed. Before January 1, 1987, if the contents of the consolidated return itself are not affected by the election or other action, a separate statement may serve as a substitute for the amended return. Such separate statement must cite this provision and must include the name, address, and EIN of the parent corporation of the purchasing group.

* * * * *

(k) Special rules for foreign corporations or DISCs—(1) Elections by certain foreign purchasing corporations—(i) In general. This subparagraph (1) applies to a statement of section 338 election (or any other election under section 338) that is filed by a foreign purchasing corporation that is not required under §1.6012–2(g) (other than subparagraph (2)(i)(b)(2) thereof) to file a United States income tax return for its taxable year that includes the acquisition date.

(ii) Place of filing. An election to which this subparagraph (1) applies that is filed—

(A) Before July 1, 1986 must be filed with the Philadelphia Service Center, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania 19255.

(B) On or after January 1, 1987, must be filed with the District Director of the Foreign Operations District (Attention: Chief of Examination), 1325 K Street, NW., Washington, DC 20225.

(C) On or after July 1, 1986 and before January 1, 1987, may be filed in either of the places described in (A) or (B) of this subdivision (ii).

(iii) Special rule. Notwithstanding subdivision (ii) of this subparagraph (1), the items required (under paragraph (m) of this section and §1.338(b)–4T(b)) to be filed by such a foreign purchasing corporation with the District Director shall be filed with the District Director of the Foreign Operations District (Attention: Chief of Examination), 1325 K Street, N.W., Washington, DC 20225.

(2) Election not required until relevant—(i) General rule. * * * A transitional allocation election statement under §1.338(b)–4T for a qualifying foreign target must be filed on or before the last day that the qualifying purchasing corporation may file a statement of section 338 election.

* * * * *

Par. 3. Paragraph (b)(2) of §1.338–3T is revised to read as set forth below.

§1.338-3T Miscellaneous rules under section 224 of TEFRA (temporary).

(b) Certain acquisitions of financial institutions. * * *

(2) Manner of electing out. A purchasing corporation is considered to elect out only if the requirements of section 224(d)(3) of TEFRA are satisfied and the purchasing corporation files a statement of election-out within 30 days after adoption of the plan of complete liquidation of the financial institution specified in section 224(d)(3)(C) (or by May 8, 1984, if later) in the Form 8023 filing place(s) where a statement of section 338 election would be filed, under §1.338–1T (c) and (d), on the date the statement of election-out is filed.

Par. 4. Section 1.338–4T is amended as follows:

1. Paragraph (f)(6)(ii) Answer 1 (i) is revised to read as set forth below.

2. A new sentence is added immediately after the first sentence of paragraph (f)(6)(ii) Answer 1 (iii)(A). The new sentence reads as set forth below.

3. The first sentence of paragraph (f)(6)(ii) Answer 2 (iv) is revised to read as set forth below.

4. The last sentence of paragraph (f)(6)(ii) Answer 2 (iv) is amended by adding after the words "Service Center" the words "or District Director."

5. The second sentence in paragraph (h)(2)(iii) is removed and two new sentences are added in its place. The new sentences read as set forth below.

6. A new sentence is added immediately after the third sentence of paragraph (h)(3) Answer 2 (vi). The new sentence reads as set forth below.

7. In the Example in paragraph (h)(3) Answer 3—

a. Subdivision (i) is amended by adding a new sentence immediately after the third sentence. The new sentence reads as set forth below.

b. Two new sentences are added at the end of subdivision (ii). The new sentences read as set forth below.

c. Subdivision (iii) is amended by adding a new sentence at the end to read as set forth below.

8. Paragraph (j)(2) Answer 5 is amended by—

a. Revising subdivision (i) to read as set forth below.

b. Adding in the appropriate place a new subdivision (iii) to read as set forth below.

§1.338–4T Questions and answers relating to miscellaneous issues under section 338 (temporary).

(f) Application of the asset consistency rule of section 338(e). * * *

(6) Carryover basis election exception under section 338(e)(2)(D) and (i). * * *

(ii) Procedure for making protective carryover election and affirmative action carryover election.

Question 1: * * *

Answer 1: (i) Filing procedure. The protective carryover election is made in the form of a statement of protection carryover election ("protective carryover election sattement") filed within the period during which an express election may be made for T. A protective carryover election statement that is filed before July 1, 1986 must be filed with each Internal Revenue Service Center with which a corporation required to join in making the protective carryover election files its annual income tax return. A protective carryover election statement that is filed on or after January 1, 1987, must be filed with the District Director (Attention: Chief of Examination) for each internal revenue district in which a corporation required to join in making the protective carryover election would file its income tax return if §1.6091–2 (b) applied. A protective carryover election statement that is filed on or after July 1, 1986 and before January 1, 1987, may be filed in either of the places described in the preceding two sentences. For place to file in certain cases if the purchasing corporation is a foreign corporation, see §1.338–1T (k)(1).

* * * * *

(iii) Contents of protective carryover election statement—(A) General rule. * * * A protective carryover election statement that is filed on or after July 31, 1986 also must identify the purchaser(s) of T. * * *

* * * * *

Answer 2: * * *

(ii) Filing procedure. The supplemental statement is filed in the place(s) where a protective carryover election statement would be filed, under Answer 1 (i) of this paragraph (f)(6)(ii), on the date the supplemental statement is filed. * * *

* * * * *

(h) Determination of section 338(a)(1) deemed sale price. * * *

(2) Definitions. * * *

(iii) Allocable ADSP amount. * * * Except as provided in section 7701(g) (relating to fair market value in the case of nonrecourse indebtedness), and unless a transitional allocation election under §1.338(b)–4T is made, the ADSP is allocated among T assets for this purpose in accordance with the rules in §1.338(b)–

2T (without regard to §1.338 (b)–2T (c)(2)). If a transitional allocation election under §1.338(b)–4T is made, the ADSP is allocated among T assets for this purpose in accordance with the rules in §1.338(b)–4T(e). * * *

* * * * *

(3) Determination of ADSP.

Answer 2. * * *

(vi) Sample elective ADSP formula. * * * In examples (1) through (9) of this subdivision (vi) it is assumed that a transitional allocation election under §1.338(b)–4T is not made. * * *

* * * * *

Answer 3: * * *

Example: (1) * * * The fair market value of T1's asset is $30,000. * * *

(ii) * * * Since the ADSP for T ($189,422.71) does not exceed the sum of the fair market values of all of T's assets ($215,000), and those assets are all Class III assets, its entire ADSP is allocated to those assets in proportion to their fair market values. See §1.338(b)–2T(c)(1) (relating to fair market value limitation).

(iii) * * * Since the ADSP for T1 ($29,651) does not exceed the fair market value of T1's only asset ($30,000), its entire ADSP is allocated to that asset.

* * * * *

(j) Determination of basis of target assets after section 338 election. * * *

(2) Determination of adjusted grossed-up basis.

Answer 5: (i) Attachment to statement of section 338 election. The gain recognition election is made in the form of a gain recognition statement ("GRS") that is attached to a timely filed statement of section 338 election (Form 8023) for T. In order for the gain recognition election to be valid, the statment of section 338 election (with the GRS attached) must be filed within the time specified in §1.338–1T(c) in the Form 8023 filing place(s) designated in §1.338–1T(c) and (d). The gain recognition election is irrevocable. For certain additional filing requirements if a gain recognition election is made, see §1.338–1T(e)(2).

* * * * *

(iii) Transitional rules. Notwithstanding subdivision (i) of this Answer 5—

(A) If the statement of section 338 election with the GRS attachment is filed with a Service Center under §1.338–1T(c)(1), then the gain recognition election will not be valid unless copies of the GRS are also filed with each other Service Center with which each affected P group members (as defined in this Answer 5 (ii)(A)) files its annual income tax return.

(B) If a statement of section 338 election is filed on or before July 15, 1986, without the GRS attachment, the P group may make a valid gain recognition election by filing the GRS (with a copy of the previously filed statement of section 338 election attached) on or before that day at the place(s) specified in subdivision (i) of this Answer 5 and, if applicable, subdivision (A) of this subdivision (iii).

* * * * *

Par. 5. Section 1.338–5T is amended as follows:

1. Paragraph (c)(2)(v)(C) is revised to read as set forth below.

2. Paragraph (j)(8)(ii) is revised to read as set forth below.

(C) Transitional rule. If a regular exclusion election is not made in an express election filed on or before July 15, 1986, a regular exclusion election nonetheless may be made if, on or before July 15, 1986, a copy of the previously filed express election (generally Form 8023), with a copy of the regular exclusion statement attached, is filed in the Form 8023 filing place(s) where a statement of section 338 election would be filed, under §1.338–1T(c) and (d), on the date of the regular exclusion election is made.

Par. 6. Section 1.338(b)–2T is amended by adding a new paragraph (a)(3). The new provision reads as follows:

(3) Transitional allocation election. For elective rules relating to the election of adjusted grossed-up basis for a qualified stock purchase for which the acquisition date is on or before January 29, 1986, see §1.338(b)–4T.

* * * * *

Par. 7. A new §1.338(b)–4T is added immediately after §1.338(b)–3T to read as follows:

§1.338(b)–4T Transitional allocation election under section 338 (temporary).

(a) In general—(1) Scope. This section provides a transitional allocation election relating to the allocation of adjusted grossed-up basis under section 338(b)(5) and §1.338(b)–2T. For consequences of a transitional allocation election, see generally paragraph (e) of this section.

(2) Eligibility to make a transitional allocation election. A transitional allocation election may only be made for an original target (and applies to any affected target described in paragraph (e)(1) of this section) for which the acquisition date is—

(i) On or after September 1, 1982, and on or before January 29, 1986, or

(ii) After January 29, 1986, but pursuant to a contract of sale, or an offer to purchase, that is binding on the purchasing corporation on that date and at all times thereafter.

(3) Nomenclature and definitions. The nomenclature set out in §1.338–4T(b)(1) also applies to this section. The definitions in §1.338(b)–3T(b)(2) also apply to this section.

(b) Time and manner of making election—(1) In general. P makes a transitional allocation election for an original target by filing a transitional allocation election statement prescribed by paragraph (c)(1) of this section with the District Director (Attention: Chief of Examination) for the internal revenue district in which the purchasing corporation's income tax return would be filed if §1.6091-2(b) applied. If two or more corporations that are members of an affiliated group make a qualified stock purchase in the aggregate (see §1.338-1T(d)(3)), then a copy of the transitional allocation election statement prescribed by paragraph (c)(1) of this section must be filed with the District Director (Attention: Chief of Examination) in such internal revenue district for each purchasing corporation. The transitional allocation election statement must be filed on or before the later of (i) the due date, including extensions of time, for filing the first return of the original target as new target or (ii) November 3, 1986. The special rules in §1.338-1T(k)(1) and (2) apply to making the transitional allocation election for foreign corporations.

(2) Additional filing requirements. Pursuant to §1.338-1T(e)(2)(vi), a copy of the transitional allocation election statement also must be attached to the first return (or amended return) of the original target (and each affected target) as new target. Pursuant to §1.338-1T(e)(2)(vi), a supplemental transitional allocation election statement prescribed by paragraph (c)(3) of this section must be attached to the first return (or amended return) as new target of each affected target identified in that statement.

(c) Contents of transitional allocation election statement—(1) In general. The transitional allocation election statement must:

(i) Be identified prominently as a "Transitional Allocation Election Statement Under §1.338(b)-4T."

(ii) Contain the name, address, and employer identification number of the purchasing corporation(s) and the original target.

(iii) Indicate the date on which an express election was made for the original target.

(iv) State the date on which the first return (and, if applicable, the amended return) of the original target (and of each affected target) as a new target was filed. (If the first return of a target has not been filed, state the due date, including extensions of time, for filing such return or, if appropriate, indicate that new target is a foreign corporation that is not required to file a United States income tax return for its first taxable year as new target.)

(v) Have attached to it a photocopy of any extension, consent, or other document previously entered into or filed which extended the statute of limitations on assessment for the first taxable year of the original target (or any affected target) as new target.

(vi) With respect to the original target and with respect to each affected target, state that (A) "New target's adjusted grossed-up basis [exceeds by $[insert amount of the excess]] [does not exceed] the sum of the fair market values of its assets, including goodwill and going concern value, at the beginning of the day after the acquisition date" or (B) "It has not yet been determined whether new target's adjusted grossed-up basis exceeds the sum of the fair market values of its assets, including goodwill and going concern value, at the beginning of the day after the acquisition date and therefore P will file a supplemental transitional allocation election statement as required by §1.338(b)-4T(c)(3)."

(vii) With respect to the original target and with respect to each affected target (A) list (for each of asset classes I, II, III, and IV) (1) the aggregate fair market value of the assets in the class and (2) the aggregate amount of adjusted grossed-up basis allocated to the assets in the class or (B) state "The information required under §1.338(B)-4T(c)(2)(vii)(A) has not yet been determined and therefore P will file a supplemental transitional allocation election statement as required by §1.338(b)-4T(c)(3)."

(viii) Be signed (in the manner prescribed in §1.338-IT(d)(1)(vi)) by a person authorized to act on behalf of the purchasing corporation.

(2) Special rules—(i) Time of determination. The information required by paragraph (c)(1)(vi)(A) and (vii)(A) of this section must be determined no later than the date on which the first return (or amended return) of the particular new target as new target is filed.

(ii) References to more than one target. The statements required under paragraph (c)(1)(vi) and (vii) of this section may, in appropriate cases, be modified to apply to more than one target if the particular targets to which the statement applies are clearly and unambiguously identified.

(3) Supplemental statements—(i) In general. If the information required under paragraph (c)(1)(vi)(A) and (vii)(A) of this section for any target has not been determined as of the date the transitional allocation election statement is filed, P is required to file (at the place prescribed in paragraph (b) of this section) a supplemental transitional allocation election statement no later than the date the first return of that target as a new target is filed. The supplemental transitional allocation election statement must:

(A) Be identified prominently as a "Supplemental Transitional Allocation Election Statement Under §1.338(b)-4T for [insert name of target or targets for which the statement is being filed]."

(B) Contain the information required under paragraph (c)(1)(vi)(A) and (vii)(A) of this section.

(C) Have attached to it a copy of the transitional allocation election statement that was filed for the original target.

(D) State the dates on which all previously filed supplemental transitional allocation election statements were filed.

(E) Be signed (in the manner prescribed in §1.338-1T(d)(1)(vi)) by a person authorized to act on behalf of the purchasing corporation.

(ii) Failure to timely file a valid supplemental statement. If a supplemental transitional allocation election statement is required to be filed, then the transitional allocation election is not effective unless the purchasing corporation timely files a valid supplemental statement. A supplemental transitional allocation election statement that does not contain the information required under paragraph (c)(1)(vi)(A) and (vii)(A) of this section is invalid. The District Director or his delegate may, at any time in connection with the examination of any Federal income tax return that would be affected by a transitional allocation election, waive the requirement of filing a valid supplemental statement.

(d) Irrevocability. A transitional allocation election under this section, once made, is irrevocable.

(e) Certain consequences of transitional allocation election— (1) Consistency rule. A transitional allocation election for an original target shall apply to each affected target that would be eligible under paragraph (a)(2) of this section to make a transitional allocation election if it were an original target. Thus, if a transitional allocation election is made, then neither the original target nor any affected target may rely upon §1.338(b)-2T(b) for the purpose of allocating adjusted grossed-up basis. For rules relating to the exclusion of a transitional target affiliate, see §1.338-

5T(j) (relating to international aspects of section 338).

(2) Allocation of adjusted grossed-up basis. A corporation to which a transitional allocation election applies shall allocate adjusted grossed-up basis pursuant to the rules of Federal income tax law that apply to the purchase on the acquisition date of a combination of assets for a lump sum. The following table sets forth the subunits of §1.338(b)–2T and indicates whether each is applicable or inapplicable if a transitional allocation election is made.

Subunit of sec.. 1.338(b)–2T	Applicable	Inapplicable
(a)	X
(b)		X
(c)(1)		X
(c)(2)	X
(c)(3)		X
(d)		X

(3) Allocation of subsequent adjustments to adjusted grossed-up basis. If adjusted grossed-up basis is allocated under paragraph (e)(2) of this section and adjusted grossed-up basis is redetermined to take into account adjustment events that occur after the close of new target's first taxable year, the amount of the increase (or decrease), determined under §1.338(b)–3T(c)(3), shall be allocated among target's acquisition date assets pursuant to the method used to allocate adjusted grossed-up basis. The following table sets forth the subunits of §1.338(b)–3T and indicates whether each is applicable or inapplicable if a transitional allocation election is made.

(e)(2)	X
(f)		X

(j)	X[2]

[1] Paragraph (h) is applicable except to the extent it incorporates other provisions of §§1.338(b)–2T and 1.338(b)–3T that are inapplicable when a transitional allocation election is made.

[2] The examples in paragraph (j) apply only to the extent that they illustrate provisions of §1.338(b)–3T that are applicable with a transitional allocation election is made.

(4) Careful scrutiny of allocation. The transitional allocation election statement identifies taxpayers that allocate to any asset an amount of adjusted grossed-up basis that exceeds the asset's fair market value. The Internal Revenue Service will subject such allocations to careful scrutiny.

(5) Coordination with allocation of ADSP. If the elective formula under section 338(h)(11) is used to determine the aggregate deemed sale price for old target's assets, the allocable ADSP amount (as defined in §1.338–4T(h)(2)(iii) for each asset must be determined pursuant to the method used to allocate adjusted grossed-up basis among the assets of new target. Additional rules for determining the allocable ADSP amount if a transitional allocation election is made are contained in §1.338–4T(h) (2) and (3).

Par. 8. Section 1.338(h)(10)–1T is amended as follows:

1. Paragraph (f)(2)(ii) is revised to read as set forth below.

2. Example (2) in paragraph (g) is amended by—

a. Removing, from subdivision (iii), the words "paragraph (f)(2)(ii)" and by adding in their place the words "paragraph (f)(2)(ii)(A)."

b. Adding at the end a new subdivision (iv) to read as set forth below.

3. Example (7) in paragraph (g) is amended by—

a. Removing, from subdivision (ii)(B), the words "paragraph (f)(2)(ii)" and by adding in their place the words "paragraph (f)(2)(ii)(A)."

b. Adding at the end a new subdivision (ix) to read as set forth below.

(A) If the acquisition date is on or before July 1, 1986, or after that date but pursuant to a contract of sale that is binding on both the purchaser and the seller as of that date, the allocation to each asset shall be made in proportion to its relative fair market value.

(B) If the allocation under paragraph (f)(2)(ii)(A) of this section is not permitted, the allocation to each asset shall be made in accordance with the rules in §1.338(b)–2T (without regard to §1.338(b)–2T(c)(2)).

Example (2). * * *

(iv) This example illustrates allocation of MADSP pursuant to the method described in paragraph (f)(2)(ii)(A) of this section. Distribution from an eligible state deferred compensation plan; transfer to an individual retirement account. A single-sum cash distribution received or made available from an eligible state deferred compensation plan may not be rolled over on a tax-free basis into an individual retirement account.

Rev. Rul. 86-103

ISSUE

If a single-sum cash distribution is received or made available from an eligible state deferred compensation plan under section 457(b) of the Internal Revenue Code, may that distribution be rolled over on a tax-free basis into an individual retirement account in the situations described below.

FACTS

Situation 1

A, an unmarried taxpayer, was an employee of state S until December 31, 1984, at which time A was separated from service with S. During 1985, A worked as an employee of a private company and earned $20,000. Also, during 1985, A established an individual retirement account (IRA) with a bank and contributed $2,000 to the IRA for 1985. Finally, in 1985, A received a single-sum distribution representing the benefits to which A was entitled under S's eligible state deferred compensation plan. These benefits had not been made available to A under the plan before 1985. A immediately contributed the entire amount of the single-sum distribution to the IRA. A did not make any qualified voluntary employee contributions within the meaning of section 219(e)(2) of the Code during the year.

Situation 2

The facts are the same as in Situation 1, except that the single-sum distribution was not actually paid to A in 1985, but rather was made available to A in 1985 and at A's direction, was contributed in 1985 by state S to the IRA established by A.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 457(a) of the Code provides that, in the case of a participant in an eligible state deferred compensation plan, any amount of compensation deferred under the plan, and any income attributable to the amounts so deferred, will be includible in gross income only for the taxable year in which such compensation or other income is paid or otherwise made available to the participant or other beneficiary under the plan.

Section 451(a) of the Code provides that the amount of any item of gross income is included in gross income for the taxable year in which received by the taxpayer, unless under the method of accounting used in computing taxable income, such amount is to be poorly accounted for as of a different period.

Section 1.451-2(a) of the Income Tax Regulations provides, in part, that income, although not actually reduced to a taxpayer's possession, is constructively received in the taxable year during which it is credited to the taxpayer's account, set apart, or otherwise made available to the taxpayer so that the taxpayer may draw upon it at any time. However, income is not constructively received if the taxpayer's control of its receipt is subject to substantial limitations or restrictions.

Section 408(a) of the Code provides that the term "individual retirement account" means a trust created or organized in the United States for the exclusive benefit of an individual or the individual's beneficiaries, but only if the written governing instrument creating the trust meets requirements specified in that section.

Section 219(b) of the Code provides that the maximum allowable as a deduction for qualified retirement contributions to any individual for any taxable year shall not exceed the lesser of $2,000 or an amount equal to the compensation includible in the individual's gross income for such taxable year.

Section 219(e)(1) of the Code defines the term "qualified retirement contributions" to include any amount paid in cash for the taxable year by or on behalf of an individual for his benefit to an individual retirement plan. Section 7701(a)(37) defines "individual retirement plan" to include an individual retirement account described in section 408(a).

Under section 4973(a) of the Code, a tax is imposed on excess contributions to individual retirement accounts. The tax is imposed for each taxable year in an amount equal to six percent of the amount of the excess contributions (determined as of the close of the taxable year). The term "excess contributions" is defined, in part, in section 4973(b) as the excess (if any) of the amount contributed for the taxable year to an individual retirement account (other than a rollover contribution described in sections 402(a)(5), 402(a)(7), 403(a)(4), 403(b)(8), or 408(d) (3)) over the amount allowable as a deduction under section 219 for such contribution. However, a contribution to which section 408(d)(4) applies is not considered a contribution for purposes of section 4973(b).

Under section 408(d)(4) of the Code, excess contributions made during a taxable year may be distributed from an IRA tax-free if they are received on or before the due date (including extensions of time) for filing the individual's income tax return, if no deduction is allowed under section 219 as to the excess contributions, and if the distribution is accompanied by the amount of net income attributable to it. Such net income is includible in the individual's gross income for the taxable year in which the excess contribution is made.

In Situation 1, the single-sum distribution from S's eligible state deferred compensation plan was paid to A in 1985. That amount is includible in A's gross income for 1985 under section 457(a) of the Code, and does not qualify as a rollover amount under section 402(a)(5), 402(a)(7), 403(a)(4), 403(b)(8), or 408(d)(3). Accordingly, for purposes of section 4973(a), the total amount of contributions made to the IRA for 1985 exceeds the maximum amount allowable as a deduction under section 219 ($2,000) by the amount of the single-sum distribution.

In Situation 2, the analysis is identical to that for Situation 1 except that the single-sum distribution from S's plan was constructively received by A in 1985, because this amount, although not actually received, was made available in 1985 to A without any substantial limitations or restrictions. Section 451(a) of the Code and section 1.451-2(a) of the regulations. Therefore, the single-sum distribution is includible in A's gross income for 1985 under section 457(a) of the Code and does not qualify as a rollover amount under section 402(a)(5), 402(a)(7), 403(a)(4), 403(b)(8), or 408(d)(3).

HOLDING

In both Situation 1 and Situation 2, A must include in gross income for the year 1985 the amount of the single-sum distribution received or made available from S's eligible state deferred compensation plan. A is entitled to a maximum deduction of $2,000 for contributions to the IRA for 1985. In addition, A is liable for the tax imposed by section 4973(a) of the Code on the amount of the single-sum distribution to the extent that the requirements of section 408(d)(4) are not met.

Section 547.—Deduction for Deficiency Dividends

26 CFR 1.547-2: Requirements for deficiency dividends.

Personal holding companies; extension of time to distribute dividends. A personal holding company cannot receive an extension of time as described under section 1.9100-1 of the regulations for a failure to timely distribute a deficiency dividend as described under section 547 of the Code.

Rev. Rul. 86-104

ISSUE

Can a personal holding company be granted an extension of time pursuant to section 1.9100-1 of the Income Tax Regulations in order for a distribution of dividends to qualify as "deficiency dividends" under section 547 of the Internal Revenue Code?

FACTS

X is a corporation all of whose issued and outstanding stock is owned by one individual. Because its income consists of interest and dividends and more than 50 percent in value of its outstanding stock is owned by one individual, X is a personal holding company within the meaning of section 542 of the Code. During the taxable year X failed to pay any dividends to its shareholder and as a result had a large amount of undistributed personal holding company income. X and the Internal Revenue Service reached an agreement concerning X's liability for the personal holding company tax imposed by section 541. After receiving X's signed acceptance of the terms of the agreement, the district director sent a registered letter to X evidencing acceptance of the agreement by the Internal Revenue Service and setting forth the procedures for the distribution of "deficiency dividends" as defined in section 547(d)(1). However, X failed to make such a distribution within 90 days after the date of registration of the letter.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 541 of the Code provides that in addition to other taxes imposed by this chapter, there is imposed for each taxable year on the undistributed personal holding company income (as defined in section 545) of every personal holding company a personal holding company tax equal to 50 percent of the undistributed personal holding company income.

Section 547(a) of the Code provides that if a determination (as defined in section 547(c)) with respect to a taxpayer establishes liability for personal holding company tax imposed by section 541 (or by a corresponding provision of a prior income tax law) for any taxable year, a deduction shall be allowed to the taxpayer for the amount of deficiency dividends (as defined in section 547(d)) for the purpose of determining the personal holding company tax for such year, but not for the purpose of determining interest, additional amounts, or assessable penalties computed with respect to such personal holding company tax.

Section 547(c) of the Code provides that, for purposes of section 547, the term "determination" means: (1) a decision by the Tax Court or a judgment, decree, or other order by any court of competent jurisdiction, that has become final; (2) a closing agreement made under section 7121; or (3) under regulations prescribed by the Secretary, an agreement signed by the Secretary and by, or on behalf of, the taxpayer relating to the liability of the taxpayer for personal holding company tax.

Section 547(d)(1) of the Code provides that, for purposes of section 547, the term "deficiency dividends" means the amount of the dividends paid by the corporation on or after the date of the determination and before filing a claim under section 547(e), which would have been includible in the computation of the deduction for dividends paid under section 561 for the taxable year for which the liability for personal holding company tax exists, if distributed during such taxable year. No dividends shall be considered as deficiency dividends for purposes of section 547(a) unless distributed within 90 days after the determination.

Section 1.547-2(b)(1)(v) of the regulations provides that a determination under section 547(c)(3) of the Code may be made by an agreement signed by the district director or such other official to whom authority to sign the agreement is delegated, and by or on behalf of the taxpayer. The agreement shall set forth the total amount of the liability for personal holding company tax for the taxable year or years. An agreement under section 1.547-2(b)(1)(v) that is signed by the district director (or such other official to whom authority to sign the agreement is delegated) on or after July 15, 1963, shall be sent to the taxpayer at the taxpayer's last known address by either registered or certified mail. If registered mail is used for such purpose, the date of registration shall be treated as the date of determination, unless the dividend is paid by the corporation before the postmark date.

Under section 1.9100-1 of the regulations, the Commissioner has discretion, upon a showing of good cause by a taxpayer, to grant a reasonable extension of the time fixed by the regulations to make an election or other application for relief in respect of tax under subtitle A of the Code. The extension may not be granted if the time for making the election or application is expressly prescribed by law.

Rev. Proc. 79-63, 1979-2 C.B. 578, sets forth certain considerations that the Internal Revenue Service generally will use to determine whether, under the facts and circumstances of each situation, good cause for granting an extension of time fixed by the regulations to make an election or application has been shown and the other requirements of section 1.9100-1 of the regulations have been met. Section 3 of Rev. Proc. 79-63 provides that the scope of that revenue procedure is limited to requests for extensions of time fixed by the regulations for making on election and to applications for relief, in accordance with the specific language of section 1.9100-1. Thus the revenue procedure does not apply to requests for extensions of the time fixed by the Code for making an election or to applications for relief from statutory deadlines.

Section 547(d) of the Code sets a fixed period (90 days) within which the taxpayer must act following any of three types of determination, as defined in section 547(c). Section 1.547-2(b)(1) of the regulations merely clarifies when the determination occurs. Thus, it is the statute and not the regulations that fixes the time within which the dividend must be distributed if the personal holding company tax is to be avoided. The Commissioner has authority to clarify ambiguity in a statute by regulation (for example, the date on which a determination occurs and the 90-day period begins). However, the Commissioner does not have authority to extend a time period specified by statute unless the statute confers such authority. For an example of such authority, see section 338(g)(1).

HOLDING

The personal holding company cannot be granted an extension of time pursuant to section 1.9100–1 of the regulations in order for a distribution of dividends to qualify as deficiency dividends under section 547 of the Code.

Section 661.—Deduction for Estates and Trusts Accumulating Income or Distributing Corpus 26 CFR 1.661(a)–2: Deduction for distributions to beneficiaries.

Whether a distribution of assets equal to an amount specified in decedent's will is a distribution in satisfaction of a right to receive a distribution in a specific dollar amount. And whether the estate recognizes gain or loss on the distribution. See Rev. Rul. 86–105, below.

Section 662.—Inclusion of Amounts in Gross Income of Beneficiaries of Estates and Trusts Accumulating Income or Distributing Corpus

Whether a distribution of assets in an amount equal to an amount specified in decedent's will is included in the gross income of the distributee. See Rev. Rul. 86–105, below.

Section 663.—Special Rules Applicable to Sections 661 and 662

26 CFR 1.663(a)–1: Special rules applicable to sections 661 and 662; exclusions; gifts, bequests, etc. (Also Sections 661, 662; 1.661(a)–2.)

Estates; distributions of assets equal to stated fair market value. A bequest of unspecified assets with a fair market value specified in decedent's will is a bequest of a "specified sum of money" under section 663(a) of the Code. Furthermore, the bequest creates a right to receive a specific dollar amount the satisfaction of which results in the recognition of gain or loss to the estate.

Rev. Rul. 86–105

ISSUE

1. Whether a bequest of "assets, in cash or in kind or partly in each," with a fair market value at date of distribution equal to a specified amount is a bequest of a "specific sum of money" under section 663(a) of the Internal Revenue Code.

2. Whether such a bequest creates a right to receive a "specific dollar amount" described in section 1.661(a)–2(f)(1) of the regulations whose satisfaction by a distribution of property in kind will result in the realization of gain or loss by the estate.

FACTS

The decedent's will created a trust with the following provisions:

> I give assets, in cash or in kind or partly in each, the selection of which shall be in the absolute discretion of my executor, with a fair market value at the date of distribution equal to 2,000x dollars, to the trustee hereinafter named, to be held, administered and distributed as hereinafter provided.

On the date of distribution, the executor satisfied the bequest by transferring to the trust securities of X corporation that had been owned by the decedent and had a fair market value of 2,000x dollars and an adjusted basis of 2,500x dollars.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 661(a) of the Internal Revenue Code allows as a deduction (not in excess of the distributable net income of the estate) in computing the taxable income of an estate, the sum of (1) any amount of income for such taxable year required to be distributed currently; and (2) any other amounts properly paid or credited or required to be distributed for such taxable year.

Section 663(a) of the Code provides that there shall not be included as amounts falling within section 661(a) and 662(a) any amount that, under the terms of the governing instrument, is properly paid or credited as a bequest of a specific sum of money or of specific property and that is paid or credited all at once or in not more than three installments

Section 1.663(a)–1(b)(1) of the Income Tax Regulations provides that in order to qualify as a gift or bequest of a specific sum of money or of specific property under section 663(a), the amount of money or the identity of the specific property must be ascertainable under the terms of a testator's will as of the date of death.

In this case, the decedent made a bequest of assets of a specified monetary value to be conveyed by the executor in cash or in kind, or partly in each, as the executor might determine. Since the monetary value of the bequest is ascertainable under the terms of the will as of the date of the decedent's death (subject only to availability of assets in the estate to satisfy the bequest), the bequest is of a specific sum of money for purposes of section 663(a) of the Code, notwithstanding that it may be paid in property other than money. See Rev. Rul. 82–4, 1982–1 C.B. 99, and Rev. Rul. 66–207, 1966–2 C.B. 243. Consequently, the estate is not allowed a deduction under section 661(a) of the Code in computing the taxable income of the estate when it pays the bequest.

Section 1.661(a)–2(f)(1) of the regulations provides that gain or loss is realized by the estate by reason of a distribution of property in kind if the distribution is in satisfaction of a right to receive a distribution in a specific dollar amount or in specific property other than that distributed.

Section 643(d)(3) of the Code provides an estate with an election to recognize gain or loss in the case of distributions of property. If the estate does not elect to recognize gain or loss, the basis of the property received by the beneficiary is generally the same as the estate's basis immediately before the distribution. As reflected in the legislative history of the Tax Reform Act of 1984, however, this election does not apply in those cases where a distribution of property results in recognition of gain or loss to the estate without regard to the enactment of section 643(d).

Since the distribution of the securities by the executor to the trustee is in satisfaction of a right to receive a "specific dollar amount" of 2,000x dollars, the satisfaction causes the estate to realize gain or loss under section 1.661(a)–2(f)(1) of the regulations. The executor transferred to the trust assets in kind that have depreciated from 2,500x dollars in satisfaction of the trust's right to receive a distribution in a specific dollar amount of 2,000x dollars. Therefore, the estate will realize a loss of 500x dollars (2,000x - 2,500x dollars) on the distribution of the shares of stock.

Section 662(a) of the Code provides rules for including in the gross income of a beneficiary of an estate described in section 661 the amounts specified in section 661(a) that are paid, credited, or required to be distributed. As noted above, section 663(a) of the Code provides that any amount that, under the terms of the governing instrument, is properly paid or credited as a bequest of a specific sum of money is not included in section 662(a). Consequently, the beneficiary does not include any amount in gross income under section 662(a) of the Code upon receipt of the bequest.

HOLDING

1. A bequest of "assets, in cash or in kind or partly in each," with a fair market value at date of distribution equal to a specified amount is a bequest of a "specific sum of money" under section 663(a) of the Code.

2. The bequest of unspecified property with a specified value at the date of distribution creates a right to receive a "specific dollar amount" under section 1.661(a)–2(f)(1) of the regulations. Therefore, gain or loss is realized by the estate upon a distribution in kind.

TITLE 26—INTERNAL REVENUE.—
CHAPTER I, SUBCHAPTER A, PART
1—INCOME TAX; TAXABLE YEARS
BEGINNING AFTER DECEMBER 31,
1953

Below-market loans

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Temporary regulations.

SUMMARY: This document contains amendments to temporary regulations which were published August 20, 1985 in the Federal Register [1985–2 C.B. 343], relating to the Federal tax treatment of both the lender and the borrower in certain below market interest rate loan transactions. Changes to the applicable law were made by the Tax Reform Act of 1984. The regulations amend several of the exemptions set forth in the temporary regulations.

DATES: The regulations apply to below-market term loans made after June 6, 1984, and below-market demand loans outstanding after June 6, 1984, and are effective June 6, 1984.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: BACKGROUND

This document amends temporary Income Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 1) under section 7872 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

IN GENERAL

Section 7872 treats certain below-market loans as economically equivalent to loans bearing interest at the applicable Federal rate coupled with a payment by the lender to the borrower sufficient to fund the payment of interest by the borrower. The temporary regulations published August 20, 1985 in the Federal Register provide for the exemption of certain below-market loans from the rules of section 7872 on the grounds that the application of section 7872 would not have a significant effect on any Federal tax liability of the lender or the borrower. If, however, one of the exempted loans is structured as such for tax avoidance purposes, the Service may recharacterize the transaction according to its economic substance and apply section 7872 in accordance with its terms. The exemptions include:

(1) loans made prior to July 1, 1986, to the extent excepted from the application of section 482 for the 6-month (or longer) period referred to in §1.482–2(a)(3);

(2) for periods prior to July 1, 1986, all money securities, and property received by a futures commission merchant or by a clearing organization (i) to margin, guarantee or secure contracts for future delivery on or subject to the rules of a qualified board or exchange (as defined in section 1256(g)(7)) or (ii) to purchase, margin guarantee or secure options contracts traded on or subject to the rules of a qualified board or exchange, and all money accruing to account holders as the result of such futures and options contracts; and

(3) loans to a charitable organization (described in section 170(c)), but only if the aggregate outstanding amount of loans by the lender to all such organizations does not exceed $10,000 at any time during the taxable year.

EXEMPTION FOR LOANS EXCEPTED UNDER SECTION 482

Commentators suggested that the exemption for loans made prior to July 1, 1986, to the extent excepted from the application of section 482 for the 6-month (or longer) period referred to in §1.482–2(a)(3) be made permanent. The Service believes that the treatment of transactions which would fall within the application of both section 482 and section 7872 should be consistent. Therefore, to the extent that a loan subject to section 482 will not have interest imputed under §1.482–2(a)(3), it is exempt from section 7872.

EXEMPTION FOR MONEY, SECURITIES AND PROPERTY RECEIVED BY FUTURES COMMISSIONS MERCHANTS, ETC.

Commentators suggested that the exemption for money, securities and property deposited with a futures commission merchant or with a clearing organization be made permanent. The Service has concluded that the interest arrangements of such deposits do not have a significant effect on the Federal tax liability of the borrower or lender. Accordingly, this document removes the limitation that only money, securities and property received prior to July 1, 1986 are exempt from the application of section 7872. Additionally, the regulations extend the exemption to margin payments received by a stockbroker and to clearing funds deposits.

The continued exemption from the below-market loan rules for these types of deposits reflects current practice with respect to such deposits, under which the level of commissions charged to customers is not based on whether deposits are made in the form of money or interest-bearing securities. If current practice evolves in the direction of large interest-free cash deposits and lower commissions to attempt to obtain an indirect deduction for commission expenses, the Service will reconsider whether this exemption is warranted.

EXEMPTIONS FOR LOANS TO CHARITABLE ORGANIZATIONS

Commentators suggested that the exemption for loans to a charitable organization be modified to apply the de minimis limitation to loans to each such organization, rather than to all such organizations. The Service has concluded that such a modification is appropriate and that the interest arrangements of gift loans subject to such limits will not have a significant effect on the Federal tax liability of the borrower or lender. The Service has additionally concluded that if loans to a charitable organization are not greater than $250,000 the interest arrangements of such loans will not have a significant effect on the Federal tax liability of the borrower or lender.

INAPPLICABILITY OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 12291

The Treasury Department has determined that these temporary regulations are not subject to review under Executive Order 12291. Accordingly, a Regulatory Impact Analysis is not required.

REGULATORY FLEXIBILITY ACT

A general notice of proposed rulemaking is not required by 5 U.S.C. 553 for temporary regulations. Accordingly, these temporary regulations do not constitute regulations subject to the Regulatory Flexibility Act (5 U.S.C. Chapter 6.)

(ii) Received by a clearing organization from a member thereof as a required deposit to a clearing fund, guaranty fund, or similar fund maintained by the clearing organization to protect it against defaults by members.

There is need for immediate guidance with respect to the provisions contained in this Treasury decision. For this reason, it is found impracticable to issue this Treasury decision with notice and public procedure under section (b) of section 553 of Title 5 of the United States Code or subject to the effective date limitation of subsection (d) of that section.

Rev. Proc. 86–36

SECTION 1. PURPOSE

.01 Section 46(e)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code places certain limitations on the availability of the investment tax credit (ITC) to noncorporate lessors. A noncorporate lessor is not allowed an ITC for property that the lessor has not manufactured or produced unless, among other requirements, the lease for the property is for a term (taking into account options to renew) that is less than 50 percent of that property's "useful life." In the case of recovery property (within the meaning of section 168), the useful life is the present class life for the property (as defined in section 168(g)(2)). The Secretary of the Treasury, however, has not prescribed a present class life for all property that qualifies as recovery property. This revenue procedure provides guidance on the application of section 46(e)(3) to such property.

SEC. 2. BACKGROUND

.01 A noncorporate lessor of property may claim the ITC for the property only if it meets the requirements of section 46(e)(3) of the Code. Under this section, a noncorporate lessor that is not the manufacturer or producer of the property must lease the property for a term that is less than 50% of the property's useful life. Section 211(d) of the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981, 1981-2 C.B. 256, 287, added the last sentence of section 46(e)(3), which provides: "In the case of any recovery property (within the meaning of section 168), the useful life shall be the present class life of such property (as defined in section 168(g)(2))."

.02 Section 168(g)(2) of the Code defines "present class life" as the class life (if any) which would be applicable with respect to any property as of January 1, 1981, under section 167(m). A list of all asset guideline classes and their present class lives as of January 1, 1981, is provided by Rev. Proc. 83–35, 1983–1 C.B. 745. The Tax Reform Act of 1984, section 31(d), 1984–3(Vol. 1) C.B. 26, added the following sentence at the end of section 168(g)(2): "If any property (other than section 1250 class property) does not have a present class life within the meaning of the preceding sentence, the Secretary may prescribe a present class life for such property which reasonably reflects the anticipated useful life of such property to the industry or other group."

.03 Rev. Proc. 83–35 sets forth not only the asset guideline classes and present class lives as of January 1, 1981, but also asset guideline depreciation periods and ranges and annual asset guideline repair allowance percentages for the Class Life Asset Depreciation Range (CLADR) System established under section 167(m) of the Code. Rev. Proc. 83–35 provides that the present class life for property included in an asset guideline class is the asset guideline period (midpoint class life) established for the class as of January 1, 1981. Because the CLADR system is not available for recovery property, no additional asset guideline classes have been established. To date, present class lives have not been prescribed for property that is not included in any of the asset guideline classes described in Rev. Proc. 83–35.

SEC. 3. CRITERION FOR DETERMINING THE MAXIMUM LEASE TERM PERMISSIBLE UNDER SECTION 46(e)(3) OF THE CODE FOR RECOVERY PROPERTY THAT HAS NO PRESENT CLASS LIFE

.01 Solely for the purpose of determining the maximum term of a lease permissible under section 46(e)(3) of the Code, for recovery property for which the Secretary has not prescribed a present class life, the estimated useful life of the property, determined at the time the property is placed in service, should be used.

.02 The rules for determining the estimated useful life of property without a present class life for purposes of section 46(e)(3) of the Code shall be the same as the rules provided by section 1.167(a)–1(b) of the Income Tax Regulations for determining the estimated useful life of property for purposes of depreciation.

.03 If, subsequent to the publication of this revenue procedure, the Secretary prescribes a present class life for any recovery property, the estimated useful life may not be used for that property for the purpose of determining the maximum term of the lease under section 46(e)(3) of the Code. However, present class lives prescribed subsequent to the publication of this revenue procedure will not apply retroactively.

This revenue procedure applies to leases entered into after June 25, 1981, the effective date of the last sentence of section 46(e)(3).

Notice of Proposed Rulemaking

Basis of Target Corporation Assets

LR–191–82

DATES:

Proposed effective date—The regulations are proposed to apply generally to stock acquisitions made after August 31, 1982.

Date for comments and requests for a public hearing—Written comments and requests for a public hearing must be delivered or mailed by September 2, 1986.

ADDRESS: Send commends and requests for a public hearing to: Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Attention: CC:LR:T [LR–191–82], Washington, D.C. 20224.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:
BACKGROUND

Temporary regulations * * * [page 5, this Bulletin] add new temporary regulations §1.338(b)–4T to Part 1 of Title 26 of the Code of Federal Regulations ("CFR") and amend existing temporary regulations under section 338. The final regulations that are proposed to be based on the new and amended temporary regulations would be added to Part 1 of Title 26 of the CFR. Those final regulations would provide guidance on the allocation of basis among the assets of a target corporation the stock of which was acquired in a qualified stock purchase after August 31, 1982, and before January 30, 1986, for which an election is made under section 338 of the Internal Revenue Code. Section 338(b) was added by section 224 of the Tax Reform and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 ("TLFRA") (Pub. L. 97-248; 96 Stat. 485) and was amended by section 712(k) of the Tax Reform Act of 1984 (Pub. L. 98–369; 98 Stat. 948). For the text of the new and amended regulations, see T.D. 8092, * * * [page 5, this Bulletin]. The preamble to the temporary regulations explains the additions to the regulations.

REGULATORY FLEXIBILITY ACT AND EXECUTIVE ORDER 12291

Although this document is a notice of proposed rulemaking that solicits public comment, the Internal Revenue Service has concluded that the regulations proposed herein are interpretative and that the notice and public procedure requirements of 5 U.S.C. 553 do not apply. Accordingly, these proposed regulations do not constitute regulations subject to the Regulatory Flexibility Act (5 U.S.C. chapter 6). The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has determined that this proposed rule is not a major rule as defined in Executive Order 12291 and that a Regulatory Impact Analysis therefore is not required.

COMMENTS AND REQUESTS FOR A PUBLIC HEARING

Before these proposed regulations are adopted, consideration will be given to any written comments that are submitted (preferably eight copies) to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. All comments will be available for public inspection and copying. A public hearing will be held upon written request to the Commissioner by any person who has submitted written comments. If a public hearing is held, notice of the time and place will be published in the Federal Register. The collection of information requirements contained herein have been submitted to the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) for review under section 3504(h) of the Paperwork Reduction Act. Comments on the requirements should be sent to the Office of Information and Regulatory Affairs of OMB, Attention: Desk Officer for Internal Revenue Service, New Executive Office Building, Washington, D.C. 20503. The Internal Revenue Service requests persons submitting comments to OMB to also send copies of the comments to the Service.

Notice of Proposed Rulemaking

Installment Method Reporting by Dealers in Personal Property

LR–141–83

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Notice of proposed rulemaking.

SUMMARY: This document contains proposed regulations relating to installment method reporting by dealers in personal property. Changes to the applicable tax law were made by the Installment Sales Revision Act of 1980. These proposed regulations would affect all dealers in personal property that report income from sales on the installment method and would provide them with the guidance to comply with the law.

DATES: Written comments and requests for a public hearing must be delivered or mailed by September 26, 1986. The amendments are proposed to take effect on October 20, 1980, and would apply to taxable years ending on or after that date.

ADDRESS: Send comments and requests for a public hearing to: Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Attention: CC:LR:T (LR–141–83) Washington, D.C. 20224.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT: Paulette Chernyshev of the Legislation and Regulations Division. Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service, 1111 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20224 (Attention: CC:LR:T), (202-566-3288), not a toll-free call).

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: BACKGROUND

This document contains proposed amendments to the Income Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 1) to provide rules under section 453A of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 relating to installment method reporting by dealers in personal property. These amendments are proposed to reflect the addition of section 453A to the Code by the Installment Sales Revision Act of 1980 (94 Stat. 2247).

Prior to the enactment of the Installment Sales Revision Act of 1980, section 453 of the Code contained all of the rules relating to installment method reporting, including the rules applicable to dealers in personal property. Consequently, the regulations under old section 453 apply both to casual installment sales and installment sales by dealers in personal property. The amendments proposed in this document generally adopt the provisions of the old section 453 regulations that relate to installment method reporting by dealers in personal property.

Because the Installment Sales Revision Act amended the rules provided in old section 453(c), which related to dealers that changed from the accrual method to the installment method, the proposed amendments do not adopt the portion of the regulations relating to old section 453(c). Regulations on this subject will be proposed in a different project (LR-146-81).

TWO-PAYMENT RULE

The Senate Finance Committee Report suggested that Treasury regulations might eliminate the two-payment rule for dealers. In December 1980, Senator Long (then the chairman of the Senate Finance Committee) clarified the Report:

> It will be noted that prior law limited the use of the installment method to dealers who sell 'on the installment plan.' The same limitation is contained in new section 453A, and there was no intention to eliminate this statutory requirement. The point of the quoted sentence from the committee report was that in reviewing the regulations as to what constitutes an 'installment plan,' it is anticipated that the Treasury Department will consider the question of whether there are circumstances in which reliance on the two-payment rule is excessively formalistic. On the other hand, however, there is no intention that dealer transactions which do not meet the ordinary understanding of sales on the 'installment plan' are to qualify for the installment method. 126 CONG. REC. S16536 (daily ed. Dec. 13, 1980) (remarks of Sen. Long).

The Treasury Department has concluded that the two-payment rule serves to distinguish installment plan sales from ordinary 30-day account sales. Accordingly, no change has been made to the two-payment requirement for sales on the installment plan by dealers in personal property.

SPECIAL ANALYSES

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has determined that this proposed rule is not a major rule as defined in Executive Order 12291. Accordingly, a Regulatory Impact Analysis is not required. Although this document is a notice of proposed rulemaking that solicits public comment, the Internal Revenue Service has concluded that the notice and public procedure requirements of 5 U.S.C. 553 do not apply because the rules proposed herein are interpretative. Accordingly, these proposed regulations do not constitute regulations subject to the Regulatory Flexibility Act (5 U.S.C. chapter 6).

COMMENTS AND REQUESTS FOR A PUBLIC HEARING

Before adopting these proposed regulations, consideration will be given to any written comments that are submitted (preferably eight copies) to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. All comments will be available for public inspection and copying. A public hearing will be held upon written request to the Commissioner by any person who has submitted written comments. If a public hearing is held, notice of the time and place will be published in the FEDERAL REGISTER.

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal author of these proposed regulations is Phoebe A. Mix of the Legislation and Regulations Division of the Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, personnel from other offices of the Internal Revenue Service and Treasury participated in developing the regulations on matters of substance and style.

Proposed amendments to the regulations

The proposed amendments to 26 CFR Part 1 are as follows:

INCOME TAX REGULATIONS (26 CFR Part 1)

Paragraph 1. The authority for Part 1 is amended by adding the following citation:

Authority: 26 U.S.C. 7805. * * * Section 1.453A-1 and §1.453A-2 also issued under 26 U.S.C. 453A.

Par. 2. Section 1.453-1 is redesignated as §1.453A-1 and revised to read as follows:

§1.453A-1 Installment method of reporting income by dealers in personal property.

In general Section 453A permits dealers in personal property, that is, persons who regularly sell or otherwise dispose of personal property on the installment plan, to elect to return the income from the sale or other disposition thereof on the installment method. To the extent provided in paragraph (d) of §1.453A-2, sales under a revolving credit type plan will be treated as sales on the installment plan and the income from the sales so treated may be returned on the installment method. A dealer who makes sales of personal property under both a revolving credit plan and a traditional installment plan may elect to report only sales under the traditional installment plan on the installment method; or he may elect to report only sales under the revolving credit plan on the installment method; or he may elect to report both sales under the revolving credit plan and the traditional installment plan on the installment method. A traditional installment plan usually has the following characteristics:

(a) The execution of a separate installment contract for each sale of personal property, and

(b) The retention by the dealer of some type of security interest in such property.

Par. 3. Section 1.453-2 is redesignated as §1.453A-2 and revised to read as follows:

§1.453A-2 Special rules applicable to dealers in personal property.

(a) In general. A person who regularly sells personal property on the installment plan may adopt (but is not required to do so) one of the following four ways of protecting his interest in case of default by the purchaser;

(1) By an agreement that title is to remain in the vendor until the purchaser has completely performed his part of the transaction;

(2) By a form of contract in which title is conveyed to the purchaser immediately, but subject to a lien for the unpaid portion of the selling price;

(3) By a present transfer of title to the purchaser, who at the same time executes a reconveyance in the form of a chattel mortgage to the vendor; or

(4) By conveyance to a trustee pending performance of the contract and subject to its provisions;

(b) Definition of sale on the installment plan. The term "sale on the installment plan" means—

(1) A sale of personal property by the taxpayer under any plan for the sale or other disposition of personal property, which plan, by its terms and conditions, contemplates that each sale under the plan will be paid for in two or more payments, or

(2) A sale of personal property by the taxpayer under any plan for the sale or other disposition of personal property—

(1) Which plan, by its terms and conditions, contemplates that such sale will be paid for in two or more payments, and

(ii) Which sale is in fact paid for in two or more payments.

Normally, a sale under a traditional installment plan (as described in §1.453A-1 meets the requirements of subparagraph (1) of this paragraph. See paragraph (d) of this section for the application of the requirements of subparagraph (2) of this paragraph to sales under revolving credit plans.

(c) Installment income of dealers in personal property—(1) In general. The income from sales on the installment plan of a dealer, that is, a person regularly engaged in the sale of personal property on the installment plan, may be ascertained by treating as income that proportion of the total payments received in the taxable year from sales on the installment plan (such payments being allocated to the year against the sales of which they apply) which the gross profit realized or to be realized on the total sales on the installment plan made during each year bears to the total contract price of all such sales made during that respective year. However, if the dealer demonstrates to the satisfaction of the district director that income from sales on the installment plan is clearly reflected, the income from such sales may be ascertained by treating as income that proportion of the total payments received in the taxable year from sales on the installment plan (such payments being allocated to the year against the sales of which they apply) which either (i) the gross profit realized or to be realized on the total credit sales made during each year bears to the total contract price of all credit sales during that respective year, or (ii) the gross profit realized or to be realized on all sales made during each year bears to the total contract price of all sales made during that respective year. See, however, paragraph (d)(6)(vi) of this section for rules permitting, under certain circumstances, all sales under a revolving credit plan to be considered as having been made in the taxable year. A dealer who desires to compute income by the installment method shall maintain accounting records in such a manner as to enable an accurate computation to be made by such method in accordance with the provisions of this secton, section 446, and §1.446-1.

(2) Gross profit and total contract price. For purposes of subparagraph (1) of this paragraph, in computing the gross profit realized or to be realized on the total sales on the installment plan, there shall be included in the total selling price and, thus, in the total contract price of all such sales.

(i) The amount of carrying charges or interest which is determined at the time of each sale and is added to the established cash selling price of such property and is treated as part of the selling price for customer billing purposes, and

(ii) In the case of sales made in taxable years beginning on or after January 1, 1960, the amount of carrying charges or interest determined with respect to such sales which are added contemporaneously with the sale on the books of account of the seller but are treated as periodic service charges for customer billing purposes. Any charge in the amount of the carrying charges or interest in a year subsequent to the sale will not affect the computation of the gross profit for the year of sale but will be taken into account at the time the carrying charges or interest are adjusted. However, this subparagraph does not apply to sales of personal property under a revolving credit plan described in paragraph (d)(1) of this section. The application of this subparagraph to carrying charges or interest described in subdivision (ii) of this subparagraph may be illustrated by the following example:

Example: X Corporation makes sales on the traditional installment plan. The customer's order specifies that the total price consists of a cash price plus a "time price differential" of 1½ percent per month on the outstanding balance in his account and he is billed in this manner. On its books and for purposes of reporting to stockholders, X Corporation consistently makes the following entries each month when it records its sales. A debit entry is made to accounts receivable (for the total price) and balancing credit entries are made to sales (for the established selling price) and to a reserve account for collection expense (for the amount of the time price differential) In computing the gross profit realized or to be realized on the total sales on the installment plan, the total selling price and, thus, the total contract price for purposes of this paragraph would with respect to sales made in taxable years beginning on or after January 1, 1960, include the time price differential.

(3) Carrying charges not included in total contract price. In the case of sales by dealers in personal property made during taxable years beginning after December 31, 1963, the income from which is returned on the installment method, if the carrying charges or interest with respect to such sales is not included in the total contract price, payments received with respect to such sales shall be treated as applying first against such carrying charges or interest. For application of this rule to revolving credit sales, see paragraph (d)(6)(v) of this section.

(d) Revolving credit plans. (1) To the extent provided in this paragraph, sales under a revolving credit plan will be treated as sales on the installment plan. The term "revolving credit plan" includes cycle budget accounts, flexible budget accounts, continuous budget accounts, and other similar plans or arrangements for the sale of personal property under which the customer agrees to pay each billing-month (as defined in subparagraph (6)(iii) of this paragraph) as part of the outstanding balance of his account. Sales under a revolving credit plan do not constitute sales on the installment plan merely by reason of the fact that the total debt at the end of a billing-month is paid in installments. The terms and conditions of a revolving credit plan do not contemplate that each sale under the plan will be paid for in two or more payments and thus do not meet the requirements of paragraph (b)(1) of this section. In addition, since under a revolving credit plan payments are not generally applied to liquidate any particular sale, and since the terms and conditions of such plan contemplate that account balances may be paid in full or in installments, it is generally impossible to determine that a particular sale under a revolving credit plan is to be or is in fact paid for in installments so as to meet the requirments of paragraph (b)(2) of this section. However, subparagraphs (2) and

(3) of this paragraph provide rules under which a certain percentage of charges under a revolving credit plan will be treated as sales on the installment plan. For purposes of arriving at this percentage, these rules, in general, treat as sales on the installment plan those sales under a revolving credit plan (1) which are of the type which the terms and conditions of the plan contemplate will be paid for in two or more installments and (2) which are charged to accounts on which subsequent payments indicate that such sales are being paid for in two or more installments.

(2)(i) The percentage of charges under a revolving credit plan which will be treated as sales on the installment plan shall be computed by making an actual segregation of charges in a probability sample of the revolving credit accounts and by applying the rules contained in subparagraph (3) of this paragraph to determine what percentage of charges in the sample is to be treated as sales on the installment plan. (See subparagraph (5) of this paragraph for rules to be used of some of the sales under a revolving credit plan are nonpersonal property sales (as defined in subparagraph (6)(iv) of this paragraph).) Such segregation shall be made of charges which make up the balances in the sample accounts as of the end of each customer's last billing-month ending within the taxable year. (See subparagraph (6)9v) of this paragraph of rules to be used in determining which charges make up the balance of an account.) However, in making such segregation, any account to which a sale is charged during the taxable year on which no payment is credited after the billing-month within which the sale is made (hereinafter called the "billing-month" of sale") and on or before the end of the first billing-month ending in the taxpayer's next taxable year shall be disregarded and not taken into account in the determination of what percentage of charges in the sample is to be treated as sales on the installment plan. In order to obtain a probability sample, the accounts shall be selected in accordance with generally accepted probability sampling techniques. The appropriateness of the sampling technique and the accuracy and reliability of the results obtaned must, if requested, be demonstrated to the satisfaction of the district director. If the district director is not satisfied that the taxpayer's sample is appropriate or that the results obtained are accurate and reliable, the taxpayer shall recompute his sample percentage or make appropriate adjustments to his original computations in a manner satisfactory to the district director. The taxpayer shall maintain records in sufficient detail to show the method of computing and applying the sample.

(ii) For taxable years ending before January 31, 1964, a taxpayer who has reported for income tax purposes all or a portion of sales under a revolving credit plan as sales on the installment method may apply the percentage obtained for the first taxable year ending on or after such date in determining the percentage of charges under a revolving credit plan for such prior taxable year (or years) which will be treated as sales on the installment plan. However, in computing the percentage to be applied in determining the percentage of charges under a revolving credit plan which will be treated as sales on the installment plan for such prior taxable year or years), the rule stated in paragraph (c)(3) of this section shall not apply. See subparagraph (6)(v) of this paragraph for rules relating to the application of payments to finance charges for such prior taxable years.

(3) For the purpose of determining the percentage described in subparagraph (2) of this paragraph, a charge under a revolving credit plan will be treated as a sale on the installment plan only if such charge is a sale (as defined in subparagraph (6)(i) of this paragraph) and meets the requirments contained in subdivisions (i) and (ii) of this subparagraph.

(i) The sale must be of the type which the terms and conditions of the plan contemplate will be paid for in two or more installments. If the aggregate of sales charged during a billing-month to an account under a revolving credit plan exceeds the required monthly payment, then all sales during such billing-month shall be considered to be of the type which the terms and conditions of such plan contemplate will be paid for in two or more installments. The required monthly payment shall be the amount of the payment which the terms and conditions of the revolving credit contract require the customer to make with respect to a billing-month. If the amount of such payment is not fixed at the date the contract is entered into, but is dependent upon the balance of the account, then such amount shall be the amount that the customer is required to pay (but not including any past-due payments) as shown on the statement either (a) for the last billing-month ending within the taxpayer's taxable year or (b) for the billing-month of sale, whichever method the taxpayer adopts for all his accounts. A taxpayer shall not change such method of determining the required monthly payment based upon the balance of the account without obtaining the consent of the district director. In any case where the required monthly payment is not set in accordance with a consistent method used during the entire taxable year, the district director may determine the required monthly payment in accordance with the method used during the major portion of such taxable year if he determines that the use of such method is necessary in order to reflect properly the income from sales under a revolving credit plan. The requirements stated in this subdivision may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). Under the terms of a revolving credit plan the required monthly payment to be made by customer A is $20. During the billing-month ending in December, sales aggregating $80 are charged to customer A's account, and during the next billing-month, ending in January, sales aggregating $19.95 and finance charges of $.60 are charged to A's account. Since the aggregate of sales charged to customer A's account during the billing-month ending in December ($80) exceeds the required monthly payment ($20), the terms and conditions of the plan contemplate that the sales charged during such billing-month are of the type which will be paid for in two or more installments. Sice the aggregate of sales charged to customer A's account during the billing-month ending in January ($19.95) does not exceed the required monthly payment, the sales making up the aggregate of sales in such billing-month are not of the type which the terms and conditions of the plan contemplate will be paid for in two or more installments.

Example (2). The terms of a revolving credit plan require a payment of 20 percent of the balance of the customer's account as of the end of the billing-month for which the statement is rendered. A customer makes purchases aggregating $25 in his next to the last billing-month ending within the taxpayer's taxable year, and the balance at the end of that month is $150. At the end of the customer's last billing-month ending within the taxpayer's taxable year, the balance of the account has decreased to $110. If the taxpayer determines the required monthly payment by reference to the payment required on the statement for the last billing-month ending within the taxable year and applies such method consistently to all accounts, then the sales making up the $25 aggregate of sales are of the type which the terms and conditions of the plan contemplate will be paid for in two or more installments. Although such aggregate was less than the $30 payment (20% . $150) required on the statement rendered for the billing-month of sale, it was more than the $22 (20% . $110) that the customer was required to pay on the statement rendered for his last billing-month ending within the taxable year and thus meets the requirements of this subdivision. If, however, the taxpayer determines the required monthly payment by reference to the payment required on the statement for the billing-month of sale, then the sales making up the aggregate of sales during such billing-month do not meet the requirements of this subdivision because such aggregate was less than the $30 payment required on the statement rendered for such month.

(ii) The sale must be charged to an account on which the first payment after the billing-month of sale indicates that the sale is being paid in installments. The first payment after the billing-month of sale indicates that the sale is being paid in installments if, and only if, such payment is an amount which is less than the balance of the account as of the close of the billing-month of sale. For purposes of this subdivision, such balance shall be reduced by any return or allowance credited to the account after the close of the billing-month of sale and before the close of the billing-month within which the first payment after the billing-month of sale is credited to the account, unless the taxpayer demonstrates that the return or allowance was attributable to a charge made in a month subsequent to the billing-month of sale. The requirements stated in this subdivision may be illustrated by the following examples, in which it is assumed that the taxpayer's annual accounting period ends on January 31.

Month ending	Aggregate sales in month	Payments	Balance
December 20	$150	0	$150
January 20	75	$30	195
February 20	0	195	0

All sales made in the billing month ending December 20 meet the requirements of this subdivision because the first payment on the account after such billing-month ($30) was less than the balance of the account as of the close of such billing-month ($150); and none of the sales made in the billing month ending January 20 meets the requirements of this subdivision because the balance of the account as of the end of such billing-month was liquidated in one payment. By application of the rules of subparagraph (6)(v) of this paragraph, the balance in the account as of the last billing-month ending in the taxable year ($195) consists of $120 of the $150 of sales made in the billing month ending December 20 and all of the $75 of sales made in the billing month ending January 20. Therefore, $120 of the account balance meets the requirements of this subdivision and $75 does not.

Example (2). Customer B's revolving credit account shows the following sales and payments:

Month ending	Aggregate sales in month	Payments	Balance
December 20	$50	0	$50
January 20	100	0	150
February 20	0	$50	100

None of the sales made in the billing-month ending December 20 meets the requirements of this subdivision because the first payment credited to the account after such billing-month ($50) is not less than the balance of the account as of the close of such month ($50). All of the sales made in the billing month ending January 20 meet the requirements of this subdivision because the first payment after such billing month ($50) is less than the balance of the account as of the close of such month ($150).

Example (3). Customer C's revolving credit account shows the following purchases and credits:

Month ending	Item	Charges	Credits	Balance
Jan 20	Coal	$55
	Dress	40
	Shirt	5
				$100
Feb 20	Return

None of the sales made in the billing-month ending December 20 meets the requirements of this subdivision because the first payment credited to the account after such billing-month ($95) was equal to the balance of the account as of the end of such billing-month, $95. For this purpose, the balance of $100 is reduced by the $5 return which was credited to the account after the close of the billing-month of sale and before the close of the billing-month within which the first payment after the billing-month of sale is credited.

(4) The provisions of subparagraphs (2) and (3) of this paragraph may be illustrated by the following examples in which it is assumed that the taxpayer is a dealer in personal property whose annual accounting period ends on January 31.

Example (1). Customer A's revolving credit ledger account shows the following:

Month ending	Aggregate sales in month[1]	Returns and allowances	Payments	Finance charges	Balance
Jan 20	$15.00	0	0	0	$15.00
Feb 20	0	0	0	$0.15	15.15

[1] Including sales of personal property and nonpersonal property sales.

For purposes of the segregation provided for in subparagraph (2)(i) of this paragraph, customer A's account will be disregarded and not taken into account in the determination of what percentage of charges in the sample is to be treated as sales on the installment plan because no payment was credited to that account after the billing-month of sale and on or before February 20.

Example (2). This example is applicable with respect to sales made during taxable years beginning before January 1, 1964. Under the terms of Corporation X's revolving credit plan, payments are required in accordance with the following schedule:

Unpaid balance	Required monthly payment
$100-$199.99	40
$200-$299.99	60

Customer B's revolving credit ledger account for the period beginning on September 21, 1963, and ending February 20, 1964, shows the following:

Month ending—	Aggregate sales in month[1]	Returns and allowances	Payments	Finance charges	Balance
Oct 20	$55.00	0	0	0	$55.00
Nov 20	45.00	0	$20.00	$0.35	80.35
Dec 20	20.00	0	20.00	60	80.95
Jan 20	26.00	$5.00	20.00	61	82.56
Feb 20	0	10.00	72.56	0	0

[1] Including sales of personal property and nonpersonal property sales.

The three $20 payments and the $5 return or allowance made in the billing-months ending in the taxable year are applied. Under the rules in subparagraph (6)(v), to liquidate the earliest outstanding charges, first to the $55 aggregate of sales in the billing-month ending October 20 and next to $10 of the aggregate of sales made in the billing-month ending November 20. Thus, the balance of the account as of the close of the billing-month ending Janaury 20, $82.56, is made up as follows:

Remainder of sales in billing-month ending Nov. 20 ($45 $10)	$35.00
Finance charge for billing-month ending Nov. 20	35
Sales for billing-month ending Dec. 20	20.00
Finance charge for billing-month ending Dec. 20	0.50
Sales for billing month ending Jan. 20	26.00
Finance charge for billing-month ending Jan. 20	61
Total	82.56

The sales of $35 remaining from the aggregate of sales for the billing-month ending November 20 meet the requirements of subparagraph (3)(i) of this paragraph because the aggregate of sales charged during such billing-month ($45) exceeds the required monthly payment ($20), and such sales meet the requirements of subparagraph (3)(ii) of this paragraph because the first payment after the billing-month of sale ($20) is an amount less than the balance of the account as of the close of such month ($80.35). Therefore, $35 of sales will be treated as sales on the installment plan. The $20 aggregate of sales charged during the billing month ending December 20 does not meet the requirements of subparagraph (3)(i) of this paragraph because it is in an amount which does not exceed the required monthly payment ($20) (The finance charge of $0.60 added in the billing-month does not enter into the determination of the aggregate of sales for the month because the term "sales" (as defined in subparagraph (6)(i) of this paragraph) does not include finance charges). The $26 aggregate of sales for the billing-month ending January 20 does not meet the requirements of subparagraph (3)(ii) of this paragraph because the first payment after such billing month ($72.56) was equal to the balance of the account as of the close of such billing-month ($72.56) was equal to the balance of the account as of the close of such billing-month ($72.56). For this purpose, the balance of $82.56 is reduced by the $10 return or allowance which was credited after the billing-month of sale and before February 20. Thus, of the $82.56 balance of B's account as of the close of the last billing-month ending within the taxpayer's taxable year $35 will be treated as sales on the installment plan for purposes of determining the percentage provided for in subparagraph (2) of this paragraph.

Example (3). This example is applicable with respect to sales made during taxable years beginning after December 31, 1963. Assume the facts in example (2), except that Customer B's revolving credit ledger account is for the period beginning on September 21, 1964 and ending February 20, 1965. Since payments received are first used to liquidate any outstanding finance charges under the rule in subparagraph (6)(v); the $20 payment in December liquidated the $0.35 finance charge accrued at the end of the November billing-month and the $20 payment in January liquidated the $0.60 finance charge accrued at the end of the December billing month. The balance of the three $20 payments ($59.05) and the $5 return or allowance are applied (under the rules in subparagraph (6)(v)) to liquidate the earliest outstanding sales, first to the $55 aggregate of sales in the billing-month ending October 20 and next to $9.05 of the aggregate of sales made in the billing-month ending November 20. Thus, the balance of the account as of the close of the billing-month ending January 20, $82.56, is made up as follows.

Remainder of sales in billing-month ending Nov. 20 ($45 $9.05)	$35.95
Sales for billing month ending Dec. 20	20.00
Sales for billing month ending Jan. 20	26.00
Finance charge for billing month ending Jan 20	61

The sales of $35.95 remaining from the aggregate of sales for the billing-month ending November 20 meet the requirements of subparagraph (3)(i) of this paragraph because the aggregate of sales charged during such billing-month ($45) exceeds the required monthly payment ($20) and such sales meet the requirements of subparagraph (3)(ii) of this paragraph because the first payment after the billing-month of sale ($20) is an amount less than the balance of the account as of the close of such month ($80.35). Therefore, $35.95 of sales will be treated as sales on the installment plan. The $20 aggregate of sales charged during the billing-month ending December 20 does not meet the requirements of subparagraph (3)(i) of this paragraph because it is in an amount which does not exceed the required monthly payment ($20). The $26 aggregate of sales for the billing-month ending January 20 does not meet the requirements of subparagraph (3)(ii) of this paragraph because the first payment after such billing-month ($72.56) was equal to the balance of the account as of the close of such billing-month ($72.56). For this purpose, the balance of $82.56 is reduced by the $10 return or allowance which was credited after the billing-month of sale and before February 20. Thus, of the $82.56 balance of B's account as of the close of the last billing month ending within the taxpayer's taxable year $35.95 will be treated as sales on the installment plan for purposes of determining the percentage provided for in subparagraph (2) of this paragraph.

(5) Sales under a revolving credit plan which are nonpersonal property sales (as defined in subparagraph (6)(iv) of this paragraph) do not constitute sales on the installment plan. Therefore, the charges under a revolving credit plan must be reduced by the nonpersonal property sales, if any, under such plan, before application of the sample percentage as provided for in subparagraph (2)(i) of this paragraph. The taxpayer may treat as the nonpersonal property sales under the plan for the taxable year an amount which bears the same ratio to the total sales under the revolving credit plan made in the taxable year as the total nonpersonal property sales made in such year bears to the total sales made in such year.

(6) For purposes of this paragraph—

(i) The term "sales" includes sales of services, such as a charge for watch repair, as well as sales of property, but does not include finance or service charges.

(ii) The term "charges" includes sales of services and property as well as finance or service charges.

(iii) A billing-month is that period of time for which a periodic statement of charges and credits is rendered to a customer.

(iv) The term "nonpersonal property sales" means all sales which are not sales of personal property made by the taxpayer. Thus, sales of a department leased by the taxpayer to another are nonpersonal property sales. Likewise, charges for services rendered by the taxpayer are nonpersonal property sales unless such services are incidental to and rendered contemporaneously with the sale of personal property, in which case such charges shall be considered as constituting part of the selling price of such property.

(v) Except as otherwise provided in this subdivision, each payment received from a customer under a revolving credit plan before the close of the last billing-month ending in the taxable year shall be applied to liquidate the earliest outstanding charges under such plan, notwithstanding any rule of law or contract provision to the contrary. For purposes of determining which charges remain in the balance of an account at the end of the last billing-month ending in the taxable year, the taxpayer may apply returns and allowances which are credited before the close of the last billing-month ending in the taxable year either (a) to liquidate or reduce the charge for the specific item so returned or for which an allowance is permitted, or (b) to liquidate or reduce the earliest outstanding charges. The method so selected for applying returns and allowances shall be followed on a consistent basis from year to year unless the district director consents to a change. Additionally, finance or service charges which are computed on the basis of the balance of the account at the end of the previous billing-month (usually reduced by payments during the current billing-month) are accrued at the end of the current billing-month and are therefore considered for purposes of determining the earliest outstanding charges, as charged to the accunt after any sales made during the current billing month. However, for purposes of determining which charges remain in the balance of an account at the end of the last billing-month ending in a taxable year which began after December 31, 1963, payments received during such year shall be applied during such year shall be applied first against any finance or service charges which were outstanding at the time such payment was received. The preceding sentence shall not apply with respect to a computation made for purposes of applying the rule described in subparagraph (2)(ii) of this paragraph.

(vi) The taxpayer shall allocate those sales under a revolving credit plan which are treated as sales on the installment plan to the proper year of sale in order to apply the appropriate gross profit percentage as provided for in paragraph (c) of this section. This allocation shall be made on the basis of the percentages of charges treated as sales on the installment plan which are attributable to each taxable year as determined in the sample of accounts described in subparagraph (2) of this paragraph. However, if the taxpayer demonstrates to the satisfaction of the district director that income from sales on the installment plan is clearly reflected, all sales may be considered as being made in the taxable year for purposes of applying the gross profit percentage.

(7) The provisions of this paragraph may be illustrated by the following example:

Example: Corporation X is a dealer in personal property and has elected to report on the installment method those sales under its revolving credit plan which may be treated as sales on the installment plan. Corporation X's taxable year ends on January 31, and the total balance of all its revolving credit accounts as of January 31, 1964, is $2,000,000. The total sales made in the taxable year are $10,000,000 of which $500,000 are nonpersonal property sales. The gross profit percentage realized or to be realized on all sales made in the taxable year is 40 percent. The amount of the gross profit contained in the year-end balance of $2,000,000 which may be deferred to succeeding years is computed as follows:

(i) In order to reduce the charges appearing in the year-end balance of revolving credit accounts receivable by the nonpersonal property sales contained therein, corporation X determines the amount of such nonpersonal property sales under the method permitted in subparagraph (5) of this paragraph. Corporation X first determines the ratio which total nonpersonal property sales made during the year ($500,000) bears to total sales made during the year ($10,000,000), and then applies the percentage (5 percent) thus obtained to the year-end balance of revolving credit accounts receivable ($2,000,000). The nonpersonal property sales thus determined ($100,000) is subtracted from such year-end balance to obtain the charges under the revolving credit plan appearing in the year-end balance ($1,900,000) to which the sample percentage is to be applied.

(ii) In accordance with generally accepted sampling techniques the taxpayer selects a probability sample of all revolving credit accounts having balances for billing-months ending in January 1964. The technique employed results in a random selection of accounts with total balances of $100,000.

(iii) Analysis of these sample accounts discloses that of the $100,000 of balances, $10,000 of balances are in accounts on which no payment was credited after a billing month of sale and on or before the end of the first billing-month ending in the taxable year beginning February 1, 1964. These balances are, therefore, disregarded and not taken into account in the determination of what percentage of sales in the sample is to be treated as sales on the installment plan. Of the remaining $90,000 of balances, the taxpayer determines, by analyzing the ledger cards in the sample, that $63,000 of balances are composed of sales which meet the requirements of subparagraph (3)(i) and (ii) of this paragraph and are thus treated as sales on the installment plan. The remaining $27,000 of balances either did not meet the requirements of subparagraph (3)(i) or (ii) of this paragraph or were not sales as defined in subparagraph (6)(i) of this paragraph). The percentage of charges in the sample treated as sales on the installment plan is, therefore, 70 percent ($63,000–$90,000).

(iv) The charges in the year-end balance which are to be treated as sales on the installment plan. $1,330,000 are computed by multiplying the charges determined in subdivision (i) of this subparagraph ($1,900,000) by the percentage obtained in subdivision (iii) of this subparagraph (70 percent).

(v) The deferred gross profit attributable to sales under the revolving credit plan for the taxable year. $532,000 is determined by multiplying the amount determined in subdivision (iv) of this subparagraph $1,330,000 by the gross profit percentage 40 percent. (Corporation X will be able to demonstrate to the satisfaction of the district director that (a) since the gross profit percentage for all sales does not vary materially from the gross profit percentage for all sales made under the revolving credit plan, (b) since only an insubstantial amount of sales included in year-end account balances was made prior to the taxable year, and (c) since the prior year's gross profit percentage does not vary materially from the gross profit percentage for the taxable year, income from sales on the installment plan will be clearly reflected by applying the current year's gross profit percentage for all sales under the revolving credit plan treated as sales on the installment plan.)

This notice of proposed rulemaking is issued under the authority contained in section 7805 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (68A Stat. 917; 26 U.S.C. 7805).

Deletions from Cumulative List of Organizations Contributions to Which Are Deductible Under Section 170 of the Code

Announcement 86–95

The names of organizations that no longer qualify as organizations described in section 170(c)(2) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 are listed below.

Generally, the Service will not disallow deductions for contributions made to a listed organization on or before the date of annoucement in the Internal Revenue Bulletin that an organization no longer qualifies. However, the Service is not precluded from disallowing a deduction for any contributions made after an organization ceases to qualify under section 170(c)(2) if the organization has not timely filed a suit for declaratory judgment under section 7428 and if the contributor (1) had knowledge of the revocation of the ruling or determination letter, (2) was aware that such revocation was imminent, or (3) was in part responsible for or was aware of the activities or omissions of the organization that brought about this revocation.

If on the other hand a suit for declaratory judgment has been timely filed, contributions from individuals and organizations described in section 170(c)(2) that are otherwise allowable will continue to be deductible. Protection under section 7428(c) would begin on September 8, 1986, (the date of publication of this announcement) and would end on the date the court first determines that the organization is not described in section 170(c)(2) as more particularly set forth in section 7428(c)(1). For individual contributors, the maximum deduction protected is $1,000, with a husband and wife treated as one contributor. This benefit is not extended to any individual who was responsible, in whole or in part, for the acts or omissions of the organization that were the basis for revocation.

Announcement of the Disbarment, Suspension, or Consent to Voluntary Suspension of Attorneys, Certified Public Accountants, Enrolled Agents and Enrolled Actuaries from Practice Before the Internal Revenue Service

Under 31 Code of Federal Regulations, Part 10, an attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary, in order to avoid the institution or conclusion of a proceeding for his disbarment or suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service, may offer his consent to suspension from such practice. The Director of Practice, in his discretion, may suspend an attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary in accordance with the consent offered.

Attorneys, certified public accountants, enrolled agents, and enrolled actuaries are prohibited in any Internal Revenue Service matter from directly or indirectly employing, accepting assistance from, being employed by or sharing fees with, any practitioner disbarred or under suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service.

To enable attorneys, certified public accountants, enrolled agents and enrolled actuaries to identify practictioners under consent suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service, the Director of Practice will announce in Internal Revenue Bulletin the names and addresses of practitioners who have been suspended from such practice, their designation as attorneys, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary, and the date or period of suspension. This announcement will appear in the weekly Bulletin at the earliest practicable date after such action and will continue to appear in the weekly Bulletin for five successive weeks or for as many weeks as is practicable for each attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary so suspended and will later be consolidated and published in the Cumulative bulletin.

The following individuals have been placed under consent suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service:

Name	Address	Designation	Term of Suspension
Robert D. Digby	North Little Rock, AR	Certified Public Accountant	Four Months from July 29, 1986
Jeffrey E. Ellis	Rockland, ME	Certified Public Accountant	Indefinte from July 2, 1986
Charles L. Honey	Prescott, AR	Attorney	One Year from July 2, 1986
Bernhardt Karp	Hudson, NY	Attorney & Certified Public Accountant	Indefinite from July 29, 1986
George N. Meros	Springfield, MO	Attorney	Indefinite from July 25, 1986
William G. Waldrop	Adamsville, AL	Certified Public Accountant	Indefinite from July 17, 1986

Under 20 Code of Federal Regulations, Part 901, an enrolled actuary, in order to avoid the initiation or conclusion of a suspension or termination proceeding, may offer his/her consent to suspension of enrollment. The Executive Director, Joint Board for the Enrollment of Actuaries, may suspend enrollment in accordance with the consent offered. An enrolled actuary whose enrollment is suspended is prohibited from performing actuarial services under the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA) during the period of suspension.

To enable employees of the Internal Revenue Service and others to identify enrolled actuaries under suspension, the Executive Director will announce in the Internal Revenue Bulletin the names and addresses of enrolled actuaries who have been suspended. This announcement will appear in the weekly Bulletin at the earliest practicable date following suspension and will continue to appear in the weekly Bulletin for at least three successive weeks for each enrolled actuary so suspended and will later be consolidated and published in the Cumulative Bulletin.

Name of Enrolled Actuary	Address	Term of Suspension
David P. Rosenberg	Philadelphia, PA	Indefinite effective August 13, 1986

Definition of Terms

Revenue rulings and revenue procedures (hereinafter referred to as "rulings") that have an effect on previous rulings use the following defined terms to describe the effect:

Amplified describes a situation where no change is being made in a prior published position, but the prior position is being extended to apply to a variation of the fact situation set forth therein. Thus, if an earlier ruling held that a principle applied to A, and the new ruling holds that the same principle also applies to B, the earlier ruling is amplified. (Compare with modified, below).

Clarified is used in those instances where the language in a prior ruling is being made clear because the language has caused, or may cause, some confusion. It is not used where a position in a prior ruling is being changed.

Distinguished describes a situation where a ruling mentions a previously published ruling and points out an essential difference between them.

Modified is used where the substance of a previously published position is being changed. Thus, if a prior ruling held that a principle applied to A but not to B, and the new ruling holds that it applies to both A and B, the prior ruling is modified because it corrects a published position. (Compare with amplified and clarified, above).

Obsoleted describes a previously published ruling that is not considered determinative with respect to future transactions. This term is most commonly used in a ruling that lists previously published rulings that are obsoleted because of changes in law or regulations. A ruling may also be obsoleted because the substance has been included in regulations subsequently adopted.

Revoked describes situations where the position in the previously published ruling is not correct and the correct position is being stated in the new ruling.

Superseded describes a situation where the new ruling does nothing more than restate the substance and situation of a previously published ruling (or rulings). Thus, the term is used to republish under the 1954 Code and regulations the same position published under the 1939 Code and regulations. The term is also used when it is desired to republish in a single ruling a series of situations, names, etc., that were previously published over a period of time in separate rulings. If the new ruling does more than restate the substance of a prior ruling, a combination of terms is used. For example, modified and superseded describes a situation where the substance of a previously published ruling is being changed in part and is continued without change in part and it is desired to restate the valid portion of the previously published ruling in a new ruling that is self contained. In this case the previously published ruling is first modified and then, as modified, is superseded.

Supplemented is used in situations in which a list, such as a list of the names of countries, is published in a ruling and that list is expanded by adding further names in subsequent rulings. After the original ruling has been supplemented several times, a new ruling may be published that includes the list in the original ruling and the additions, and supersedes all prior rulings in the series.

Suspended is used in rare situations to show that the previous published rulings will not be applied pending some future action such as the issuance of new or amended regulations, the outcome of cases in litigation, or the outcome of a Service study.

T22.23:

Mission of the Service

The purpose of the Internal Revenue Service is to collect the proper amount of tax revenues at the least cost to the public, and in a manner that warrants the highest degree of public confidence in our integrity, efficiency and fairness. To achieve that purpose, we will:

—Encourage and achieve the highest possible degree of voluntary compliance in accordance with the tax law and regulations;

—Advise the public of their rights and responsibilities;

—Determine the extent of compliance and the causes of noncompliance;

—Do all things needed for the proper administration and enforcement of the tax laws;

—Continually search for and implement new, more efficient and effective ways of accomplishing our Mission.

Statement of Principles of Internal Revenue Tax Administration

The function of the Internal Revenue Service is to administer the Internal Revenue Code. Tax policy for raising revenue is determined by Congress.

With this in mind, it is the duty of the Service to carry out that policy by correctly applying the laws enacted by Congress; to determine the reasonable meaning of various Code provisions in light of the Congressional purpose in enacting them; and to perform this work in a fair and impartial manner, with neither a government nor a taxpayer point of view.

At the heart of administration is interpretation of the Code. It is the responsibility of each person in the Service, charged with the duty of interpreting the law, to try to find the true meaning of the statutory provision and not to adopt a strained construction in the belief that he or she is "protecting the revenue." The revenue is properly protected only when we ascertain and apply the true meaning of the statute.

The Service also has the responsibility of applying and administering the law in a reasonable, practical manner. Issues should only be raised by examining officers when they have merit, never arbitrarily or for trading purposes. At the same time, the examining officer should never hesitate to raise a meritorious issue. It is also important that care be exercised not to raise an issue or to ask a court to adopt a position inconsistent with an established Service position.

Administration should be both reasonable and vigorous. It should be conducted with as little delay as possible and with great courtesy and considerateness. It should never try to overreach, and should be reasonable within the bounds of law and sound administration. It should, however, be vigorous in requiring compliance with law and it should be relentless in its attack on unreal tax devices and fraud.

Introduction

The Internal Revenue Bulletin is the authoritative instrument of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for announcing official rulings and procedures of the Internal Revenue Service and for publishing Treasury Decisions, Executive Orders, Tax Conventions, legislation, court decisions, and other items of general interest. It is published weekly and may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. Bulletin contents of a permanent nature are consolidated semiannually into Cumulative Bulletins, which are sold on a single-copy basis.

It is the policy of the Service to publish in the Bulletin all substantive rulings necessary to promote a uniform application of the tax laws, including all rulings that supersede, revoke, modify, or amend any of those previously published in the Bulletin. All published rulings apply retroactively unless otherwise indicated. Procedures relating solely to matters of internal management are not published; however, statements of internal practices and procedures that affect the rights and duties of taxpayers are published.

Revenue rulings represent the conclusions of the Service on the application of the law to the pivotal facts stated in the revenue ruling. In those based on positions taken in rulings to taxpayers or technical advice to Service field offices, identifying details and information of a confidential nature are deleted to prevent unwarranted invasions of privacy and to comply with statutory requirements.

Rulings and procedures reported in the Bulletin do not have the force and effect of Treasury Department Regulations, but they may be used as precedents. Unpublished rulings will not be relied on, used, or cited as precedents by Service personnel in the disposition of other cases. In applying published rulings and procedures, the effect of subsequent legislation, regulations, court decisions, rulings, and procedures must be considered, and Service personnel and others concerned are cautioned against reaching the same conclusions in other cases unless the facts and circumstances are substantially the same.

The Bulletin is divided into four parts as follows:

Part I.—1954 Code.

This part includes rulings and decisions based on provisions of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

Part II.—Treaties and Tax Legislation.

This part is divided into two subparts as follows: Subpart A, Tax Conventions, and Subpart B, Legislation and Related Committee Reports.

Part III.—Administrative, Procedural, and Miscellaneous.

To the extent practicable, pertinent cross references to these subjects are contained in the other Parts and Subparts.

Part IV.—Items of General Interest.

With the exception of the disbarment and suspension list included in this part, none of these announcements is consolidated in the Cumulative Bulletins.

The first Bulletin for each month includes an index for the matters published during the preceding month. These monthly indexes are cumulated on a quarterly and semiannual basis, and are published in the first Bulletin of the succeeding quarterly and semi-annual period, respectively.

The Bulletin Index-Digest System, a research and reference service supplementing the Bulletin, may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. It consists of four Services: Service No. 1, Income Tax; Service No. 2, Estate and Gift Taxes; Service No. 3, Employment Taxes; Service No. 4, Excise Taxes. Each Service consists of a basic volume and a cumulative supplement that provide (1) finding lists of items published in the Bulletin, (2) digests of revenue rulings, revenue procedures, and other published items, and (3) indexes of Public Laws, Treasury Decisions, and Tax Conventions.

The contents of this publication are not copyrighted and may be reprinted freely. A citation of the Internal Revenue Bulletin as the source would be appropriate.

Part I. Rulings and Decisions Under the Internal Revenue Code of 1954

Section 163.—Interest

26 CFR 1.163–1: Interest deduction in general.

Interest; loan from "Clifford" trust to grantor. Interest payments on a loan from a "Clifford" trust to its grantor are not deductible under section 163 of the Code when the loan is not a genuine debt.

Rev. Rul. 86–106

ISSUE

Are any of the payments made pursuant to a purported loan agreement between the grantor of a "Clifford" trust and its trustee deductible as interest under section 163(a) of the Internal Revenue Code in the circumstances described below?

FACTS

On April 1, 1984, A created an irrevocable trust for A's minor children. The trust agreement provides that A's children are entitled to the income of the trust, which was to be distributed at least annually in equal shares. At the end of 10 years and one month, or upon the death of the last surviving beneficiary, whichever occurs first, the corpus is to be returned to A. Such a trust is frequently referred to as a "Clifford" trust.

At the time the trust was created, A contributed $50,000 in cash. At that time A and the trustee orally agreed that the entire corpus could be borrowed by A within 30 days. On April 15, 1984, the trustee transferred the $50,000 in cash to A in return for A's note and a mortgage on A's home. The note provides for adequate interest and adequate security within the meaning of section 675(3) of the Internal Revenue Code. The principal amount is due at the end of 5 years. The trustee is not a related or subordinate party with respect to the grantor within the meaning of section 672(c) of the Code.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 163(a) of the Code states that a deduction shall be allowed for all interest paid or accrued within the taxable year on indebtedness. The term "interest" has been defined as compensation for the use or forbearance of money. Deputy v. duPont, 308 U.S. 488 (1940), 1940–1 C.B. 118. For interest to be deductible, the payments must arise from genuine indebtedness, that is, indebtedness in substance and not merely in form. Knetsch v. United States, 364 U.S. 361 (1960), 1961–1 C.B. 34; Perrett v. Commissioner, 74 T.C. 111 (1980).

Section 673(a) of the Code provides that the grantor of a trust will be treated as the owner of any portion of such trust in which the grantor has a reversionary interest in the corpus or the income therefrom if, as of its inception, such interest may reasonably be expected to become possessory within 10 years of its transfer to the trust.

Section 675(3) of the Code provides that the grantor will be treated as the owner of any portion of a trust in respect of which the grantor has not completely repaid the loan and any interest thereon before the beginning of the taxable year. Section 675(3) does not apply, however, if the loan to the grantor provides for an adequate rate of interest and adequate security and is made by a trustee who is not the grantor and who is not related or subordinate to the grantor.

In Perrett, the Tax Court reviewed a transaction similar to the one involving A. The taxpayer and his business partner each loaned money at 3 percent to separate trusts established for the benefit of their respective children. The money was then borrowed from the trusts by their partnership at 6 percent. The court concluded that the interposition of the trusts in the series of loans served no purpose other than to allow the taxpayer and his partner to make contributions to their children's trusts which they would attempt to deduct as interest. The court found that the transactions in substance were not loans. Therefore, no interest deductions were allowed for payments made by the partnership to the trusts.

An analogous arrangement was considered in Rev. Rul. 82–94, 1982–1 C.B. 31. In that ruling parents loaned money directly to a child on an interest free basis. Several days later the child loaned the money to the parents. The ruling concludes that the purported interest payable to the child is not deductible as interest. Although no trust was involved, the principles espoused in the ruling apply here. The circular flow of money lacks economic reality.

In this instance, just as in Perrett and Rev. Rul. 82–94, the parties have failed to create a genuine debtor-creditor relationship for federal tax purposes. The trust was merely a conduit for A to lend money to himself because of the prearrangement with the trustee to have the corpus returned in the form of a loan. The trust and loan serve no purpose except to create a circular flow of money designed to create a tax deduction for a gift to A's child in the amount of the purported interest. This transaction is not a loan in substance. Perrett v. Commissioner, 74 T.C. at 134. Under the facts in the present situation, the note is a gratuitous promise to make a series of gifts in the future. See Guaranty Trust. Co. v Commissioner, 98 F.2d 62 (2d Cir. 1938). Because a genuine debtor-creditor relationship was not created, A may not deduct the annual payments to the trust even though the terms of the purported loan satisfied the requirements of section 675(3), and even though the identity of the trustee satisfied the requirements of section 672(c) of the Code.

Accordingly, no interest deduction is allowable for the $7,500 annual payments to the trust. Any subsequent renewals of the loan are, in the absence of clear and convincing evidence to the contrary, presumed to be have been prearranged, and are therefore subject to the above analysis.

HOLDING

Under the facts set forth above, the settlor's payments to the trust under the purported loan agreement do not constitute interest paid on indebtedness for purposes of section 163(a) of the Code, because there is no genuine indebtedness.

TITLE 26—INTERNAL REVENUE.—CHAPTER I, SUBCHAPTER A, SUBCHAPTER H, PART 1—INCOME TAX; TAXABLE YEARS BEGINNING AFTER DECEMBER 31, 1953; PART 602—OMB CONTROL NUMBERS UNDER THE PAPERWORK REDUCTION ACT

Product Liability Losses and Accumulations for Product Liability Losses

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Final regulations.

SUMMARY: This document provides final regulations relating to product liability losses and accumulations for the payment of reasonably anticipated product liability losses. Changes to the applicable tax law were made by the Revenue Act of 1978. The regulations would provide the public with guidance needed to comply with the applicable parts of that act.

DATE: The amendments made by section 371 of the Revenue Act of 1978 generally are effective for taxable years beginning after September 30, 1979.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT: B. Faye Easley of the Legislation and Regulations Division, Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service, 1111 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20224 (Attention: CC:LR:T) (202-566-3935).

BACKGROUND

On March 25, 1983, the FEDERAL REGISTER published proposed amendments to the Income Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 1) under sections 172 and 537 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (48 FR 12557) [1983-1 C.B. 970]. A few comments were received regarding this proposal. A public hearing was neither requested nor held. After consideration of all comments regarding the proposed amendments, those amendments are adopted as revised by this Treasury decision.

PUBLIC COMMENTS

Proposed §1.172-13(b)(2)(iv) provided that amounts paid for insurance against product liability risks are not paid on account of product liability. Two commentators suggested that this provision be deleted in the final regulations. Alternatively, one commentator suggested that even if commercial product liability insurance premiums are not to be generally considered paid on account of product liability for purposes of section 172, so-called "retrospective premiums" should be. After consideration of these comments, the final regulations adopt §1.172-13(b)(2)(iv) as proposed. However, the final regulations clarify the definition of "product liability" by including certain amounts paid within that definition even if such amounts are paid to an insurance company. The final regulations state that an amount is considered paid on account of product liability (even if such amount is paid to an insurance company) if the amount otherwise qualifies as "product liability" and if the amount (1) is paid on account of specific claims against the taxpayer (or on account of expenses incurred in connection with the investigation or settlement of or opposition to such claims), subsequent to the events giving rise to the claims and pursuant to a contract entered into before those events, (2) is not refundable, and (3) is not applicable to other claims, other expenses or to subsequent coverage.

Another commentator suggested that the final regulations be clarified with respect to the interaction of the election under section 172(b)(3)(C) (relating to election to relinquish the entire carryback period) and the election under section 172(j)(3) (relating to election to forgo 10-year product liability loss carryback period). The final regulations are clarified by providing in §1.172-13(c)(4) that the election pursuant to section 172(b)(3)(C) does not preclude a product liability loss from being carried back 10 years.

One commentator suggested that the manner in which a taxpayer must elect to forgo the 10-year carryback period was unknown prior to the publication of the proposed regulations and that therefore those rules should only apply to elections made after the publication of the proposed regulations. In response to this comment, the final regulations provide that the statement to be filed with the Service must contain the information specified in §1.172-13(c)(3) only in the case of statements filed with the Service after April 25, 1983.

The proposed regulations stated that the term "product liability loss" includes, inter alia, expenses incurred in connection with the settlement of claims on account of alleged product liability. Additionally, the proposed regulations excluded from the definition of "product liability" liabilities arising under warranty theories relating to repair or replacement of the property that are essentially contract liabilities. One commentator suggested that the final regulations specifically include in the term "product liability loss" settlement expenses related to replacement products that are provided other than under the terms of a warranty. Since such expenses already are within the scope of this term, the final regulations are adopted without this change.

Section 537(b)(4) states that amounts accumulated for the payment of reasonably anticipated product liability losses are treated as accumulated for the reasonably anticipated needs of the business. The proposed regulations stated generally that whether an accumulation is reasonable in amount shall be determined in light of all the facts and circumstances of the taxpayer making such accumulation. The proposed regulations identified some factors that should be considered in determining the reasonableness of the accumulation. The final regulations provide that another factor to be considered in determining whether an accumulation is reasonable in amount is the fact that the taxpayer in accounting for its potential future liability took into account the reasonably estimated present value of the potential future liability.

REGULATORY FLEXIBILITY ACT

Although a notice of proposed rulemaking that solicited public comment was issued, the Internal Revenue Service concluded when the notice was issued that the regulations are interpretative and that the notice and public procedure requirements of 5 U.S.C. 553 did not apply. Accordingly, the final regulations do not constitute regulations subject to the Regulatory Flexibility Act (5 U.S.C. Chapter 6).

NONAPPLICABILITY OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 12291

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has determined that this final rule is not a major rule as defined in Executive Order 12291 and that a regulatory impact analysis therefore is not required.

PAPERWORK REDUCTION ACT

The collection of information requirements contained in this regulation have been submitted to the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) in accordance with the Paperwork Reduction Act of 1980. These requirements have been approved by OMB. (Assigned control number 1545-0863).

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal author of these regulations was George T. Magnatta of the Legislation and Regulations Division of the Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, personnel from other offices of the Internal Revenue Service and Treasury Department participated in developing the regulations, both on matters of substance and style.

Adoption of amendments to the regulations

Accordingly, Part 1 and Part 602 of 26 CFR are amended as follows:

INCOME TAX REGULATIONS
PART 1

Paragraph 1. The authority for Part 1 continues to read in part:

Authority: 26 U.S.C. 7805. * * *

Par. 2. Section 1.172–4 is amended by removing "(a)(1)(viii), and (a)(1)(ix)" in paragraph (a)(1)(ii) and adding in its place "(a)(1)(viii), (ix), and (x)", and by adding a new paragraph (a)(1)(x). The added provision reads as follows:

§1.172–4 Net operating loss carrybacks and net operating loss carryovers.

(a) General provisions—(1) Years to which loss may be carried. * * *

(x) Product liability losses. A product liability loss (as defined in section 172(j) and §1.172–13(b)(1)) sustained in a taxable year beginning after September 30, 1979, by any taxpayer shall be carried back to the 10 preceding taxable years, unless the taxpayer elects (in accordance with the rules set forth in section 172(j)(3) and §1.172–13(c)) not to have this provision apply. Any unused portion of the net operating loss remaining after this 10-year carryback period shall be carried forward under the general provisions of section 172(b)(1)(B) and its status as a product liability loss shall be disregarded.

Par. 3. A new §1.172–13 is added after §1.172–12, to read as follows:

§1.172–13 Product liability losses.

(a) Entitlement to 10-year carryback—(1) In general. Unless an election is made pursuant to paragraph (c) of this section, in the case of a taxpayer which has a product liability loss (as defined in section 172(j) and paragraph (b)(1) of this section) for a taxable year beginning after September 30, 1979 (hereinafter "loss year"), the product liability loss shall be a net operating loss carryback to each of the 10 taxable years preceding the loss year.

(2) Years to which loss may be carried. A product liability loss shall first be carried to the earliest of the taxable years to which such loss is allowable as a carryback and shall then be carried to the next earliest of such taxable years, etc.

(3) Example. The application of this paragraph may be illustrated as follows:

Example. Taxpayer A incurs a net operating loss for taxable year 1980 of $80,000, of which $60,000 is a product liability loss. A's taxable income for each of the 10 years immediately preceding taxable year 1980 was $5,000. The product liability loss of $60,000 is first carried back to the 10th through the 4th preceding taxable years ($5,000 per year), thus offsetting $35,000 of the loss. The remaining $25,000 of product liability loss is added to the remaining portion of the total net operating loss for taxable year 1980 which was not a product liability loss ($20,000), and the total is then carried back to the 3rd through 1st years preceding taxable year 1980, which offsets $15,000 of this loss. The remaining loss ($30,000) is carried forward pursuant to section 172(b)(1) and the regulations thereunder without regard to whether all or any portion thereof originated as a product liability loss.

(b) Definitions—(1) Product liability loss. The term "product liability loss" means, for any taxable year, the lesser of—

(i) The net operating loss for the current taxable year (not including the portion of such net operating loss attributable to foreign expropriation losses, as defined in §1.172–11), or

(ii) The total of the amounts allowable as deductions under sections 162 and 165 directly attributable to—

(A) Product liability (as defined in paragraph (b)(2) of this section), and

(B) Expenses (including settlement payments) incurred in connection with the investigation or settlement of or opposition to claims against the taxpayer on account of alleged product liability. Indirect corporate expense, or overhead, is not to be allocated to product liability claims so as to become a product liability loss.

(2) Product liability. (i) The term "product liability" means the liability of a taxpayer for damages resulting from physical injury or emotional harm to individuals, or damage to or loss of the use of property, on account of any defect in any product which is manufactured, leased, or sold by the taxpayer. The preceding sentence applies only to the extent that the injury, harm, or damage occurs after the taxpayer has completed or terminated operations with respect to the product, including, but not limited to the manufacture, installation, delivery, or testing of the product, and has relinquished possession of such product.

(ii) The term "product liability" does not include liabilities arising under warranty theories relating to repair or replacement of the property that are essentially contract liabilities. For example, the costs incurred by a taxpayer in repairing or replacing defective products under the terms of a warranty, express or implied, are not product liability losses. On the other hand, the taxpayer's liability for damage done to other property or for harm done to persons that is attributable to a defective product may be product liability losses regardless of whether the claim sounds in tort or contract. Further, liability incurred as a result of services performed by a taxpayer is not product liability. For purposes of the preceding sentence, where both a product and services are integral parts of a transaction, product liability does not arise until all operations with respect to the product are completed and the taxpayer has relinquished possession of it. On the other hand, any liability that arises after completion of the initial delivery, installation, servicing, testing, etc., is considered "product liability" even if such liability arises during the subsequent servicing of the product pursuant to a service agreement or otherwise.

(iii) Liability for injury, harm, or damage due to a defective product as described in this subparagraph shall be "product liability" notwithstanding that the liability is not considered product liability under the law of the State in which such liability arose.

(iv) Amounts paid for insurance against product liability risks are not paid on account of product liability.

(v) Notwithstanding subparagraph (iv), an amount is paid on account of product liability (even if such amount is paid to an insurance company) if the amount satisfies the provisions of paragraph (b)(2)(i) through (iii) of this section and the amount—

(A) Is paid on account of specific claims against the taxpayer (or on account of expenses incurred in connection with the investigation or settlement of or opposition to such claims), subsequent to the events giving rise to the claims and pursuant to a contract entered into before those events,

(B) Is not refundable, and

(C) Is not applicable to other claims, other expenses or to subsequent coverage.

(3) Examples. Paragraph (b)(2) of this section is illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). X, a manufacturer of heating equipment, sells a boiler to A, a homeowner. Subsequent to the sale and installation of the boiler, the boiler explodes due to a defect causing physical injury to A. A sues X for damages for the injuries sustained in the explosion and is awarded $250,000, which X pays. The payment was made on account of product liability.

Example (2). Assume the same facts as in example (1) and that A also sues under the contract with X to recover for the coat of the boiler and recovers $1,000, the boiler's replacement cost. The $1,000 payment is not a payment on account of product liability. Similarly, if X agrees to repair the destroyed boiler, any amount expended by X for such repair is not payment made on account of product liability.

Example (3). Y, a professional medical association is sued by B, a patient, in an action based on the malpractice of one of its doctors. B recovers $25,000. Because the suit was based on the services of B, the payment is not made on account of product liability.

Example (4). R, a retailer of communications equipment, sells a telecommunication device to C. R also contracts with C to service the equipment for 3 years. While R is installing the equipment the unit catches on fire due to faulty wiring within the unit and destroys C's office. Because R had not relinquished possession of the equipment when the fire started, any amount paid to C by R for the damage to C's property on account of the defective product is not payment on account of product liability.

Example (5). Assume the same facts as in example (4) except that the fire and resulting property damages occurred after R had installed the equipment and relinquished possession of it. Any amount paid for the property damages sustained on account of the defective product is payment on account of product liability.

Example (6). Assume the same facts as in example (4) except that the equipment catches on fire during the subsequent servicing of the unit. Because C is in possession of the unit during the servicing, any amount paid for the property damage sustained on account of the defective product would be payment on account of product liability.

Example (7). X, a manufacturer of computers, sells a computer to A. X also has its employees periodically service the computer for A from time to time after it is placed in service. After the initial delivery, installation, servicing, and testing of the computer is completed, the computer catches on fire while X's employee is servicing the equipment. This fire causes property damage to A's office and physical injury to A. Any amount paid for the property or physical damage sustained on account of the defective product is payment on account of product liability.

(c) Election—(1) In general. The 10-year carryback provision of this section applies, except as provided in this paragraph, to any taxpayer who, for a taxable year beginning after September 30, 1979, incurs a product liability loss. Any taxpayer entitled to a 10-year carryback under paragraph (a) of this section in any loss year may elect (at the time and in the manner provided in paragraph (c)(2) of this section) to have the carryback period with respect to the product liability loss determined without regard to the carryback rules provided by paragraph (a) of this section. If the taxpayer so elects, the product liability loss shall not be carried back to the 10th through the 4th taxable years preceding the loss year. In such case, the product liability loss shall be carried back or carried over as provided by section 172(b) (except subparagraph (1)(I) thereof) and the regulations thereunder.

(2) Time and manner of making election. An election by any taxpayer entitled to the 10-year carryback for the product liability loss to have the carryback with respect to such loss determined without regard to the 10-year carryback provision of paragraph (a) of this section must be made by attaching to the taxpayer's tax return (filed within the time prescribed by law, including extensions of time) for the taxable year in which such product liability loss is sustained, a statement containing the information required by paragraph (c)(3) of this section. Such election, once made for any taxable year, shall be irrevocable after the due date (including extensions of time) of the taxpayer's tax return for that taxable year.

(3) Information required. In the case of a statement filed after April 25, 1983, the statement referred to in paragraph (c)(2) of this section shall contain the following information:

(i) The name, address, and taxpayer identifying number of the taxpayer; and

(ii) A statement that the taxpayer elects under section 172(j)(3) not to have section 172(b)(1)(I) apply.

(4) Relationship with section 172(b)(3)(C) election. If a taxpayer sustains during the taxable year both a net operating loss not attributable to product liability and a product liability loss (as defined in section 172(j)(1) and paragraph (b)(1) of this section), an election pursuant to section 172 (b)(3)(C) (relating to election to relinquish the entire carryback period) does not preclude the product liability loss from being carried back 10 years under section 172(b)(1)(I) and paragraph (a)(1) of this section.

Par. 4. Section 1.537–1 is amended by revising the first two sentences of paragraph (a) and by adding a new paragraph (f) after paragraph (e). These amended and added provisions read as follows:

§1.537–1 Reasonable needs of the business.

(a) In general. The term "reasonable needs of the business" includes (1) the reasonably anticipated needs of the business (including product liability loss reserves, as defined in paragraph (f) of this section), (2) the section 303 redemption needs of the business, as defined in paragraph (c) of this section, and (3) the excess business holdings redemption needs of the business as described in paragraph (d) of this section. See paragraph (e) of this section for additional rules relating to the section 303 redemption needs and the excess business holdings redemption needs of the business. * * *

(f) Product liability loss reserves. (1) The term "product liability loss reserve" means, with respect to taxable years beginning after September 30, 1979, reasonable amounts accumulated for the payment of reasonably anticipated product liability losses, as defined in section 172(j) and §1.172–13(b)(1).

(2) For purposes of this paragraph, whether an accumulation for anticipated product liability losses is reasonable in amount and whether such anticipated product liability losses are likely to occur shall be determined in light of all facts and circumstances of the taxpayer making such accumulation. Some of the factors to be considered in determining the reasonableness of the accumulation include the taxpayer's previous product liability experience, the extent of the taxpayer's coverage by commercial product liability insurance, the income tax consequences of the taxpayer's ability to deduct product liability losses and related expenses, and the taxpayer's potential future liability to defective products in light of the taxpayer's plans to expand the production of products currently being manufactured, provided such plans are specific, definite and feasible. Additionally, a factor to be considered in determining whether the accumulation is reasonable in amount is whether the taxpayer, in accounting for its potential future liability, took into account the reasonably estimated present value of the potential future liability.

(3) Only those accumulations made with respect to products that have been manufactured, leased, or sold shall be considered as accumulations made under this paragraph. Thus, for example, accumulations with respect to a product which has not progressed beyond the development stage are not reasonable accumulations under this paragraph.

Par 5. Section 1.537–2 is amended by removing "or" at the end of paragraph (b)(4); by removing the period at the end of paragraph (b)(5) and adding "; or" in its place, and by adding a new paragraph (b)(6) after paragraph (b)(5). The amended provision reads as follows:

§1.537–2 Grounds for accumulation of earnings and profits.

(b) Reasonable accumulation of earnings and profits. *** * ***

(6) To provide for the payment of reasonably anticipated product liability losses, as defined in section 172(j), §1.172–13(b)(1), and §1.537–1(f).

Section 280F.—Limitation on Investment Tax Credit and Depreciation for Luxury Automobiles

26 CFR 1.280F–2T: Limitations on recovery deductions and the investment tax credit for certain passenger automobiles (temporary).

Investment credit; limitation; luxury automobiles; price inflation adjustment. The automobile price inflation adjustment for passenger automobiles placed in service after December 31, 1984, and before April 3, 1985, and for passenger automobiles acquired by taxpayers pursuant to binding contracts in effect on April 1, 1985, and at all times thereafter, and placed in service after April 2, 1985, and before August 1, 1985, is 2.6 percent. For those vehicles, the amount of credit determined under section 46(a) may not exceed $1,000, the recovery deduction for the first taxable year in the recovery period may not exceed $4,100, and the recovery deductions for any succeeding year in the recovery period may not exceed $6,200.

Rev. Rul. 86–107

ISSUE

What is the automobile price inflation adjustment for 1985 that is provided by section 280F(d)(7) of the Internal Revenue Code for passenger automobiles placed in service after December 31, 1984, and before April 3, 1985?

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 280F(a) of the Code, added by section 179(a) of the Tax Reform Act of 1984, 1984–3 (Vol. 1) C.B. 1, 221, limits, for any passenger automobiles, both the amount of the investment tax credit determined under section 46(a) and the amount of the recovery deduction for any tax year. Section 280F(d)(7) provides for a price inflation adjustment for automobiles placed in service after June 18, 1984. For calendar year 1984, the adjustment is zero.

Section 4 of the repeal of contemporaneous recordkeeping requirements, Pub. L. No. 99–44, 1985–2 C.B. 350 (the 1985 Act), reduced the limits in section 280F(a) and amended section 280F(d)(7) by making the inflation adjustment applicable only to cars placed in service after 1988. Section 6(e) of the 1985 Act provides, however, that the postponement provided in section 4 applies only to passenger automobiles placed in service after April 2, 1985. Moreover, the amendments made by section 4 do not apply to passenger automobiles acquired pursuant to a binding contract in effect on April 1, 1985, and at all times thereafter if such automobiles are placed in service before August 1, 1985. Therefore, the unreduced limitations imposed by section 280F(a) and the automobile price inflation adjustment provided by section 280F(d)(7) prior to its amendment by the 1985 Act apply to passenger automobiles placed in service after December 31, 1984, and before April 3, 1985, and to passenger automobiles acquired pursuant to a binding contract in effect on April 1, 1985, and all times thereafter and placed in service before August 1, 1985.

Prior to amendment by the 1985 Act, section 280F(d)(7) of the Code required that for each calendar year after 1984, an adjustment be made to the dollar limitations imposed by section 280F(a). Each calendar year, the dollar limitations were to be increased by an automobile price inflation adjustment and rounded to the nearest multiple of $100. The automobile price inflation adjustment was defined as the percentage (if any) by which the CPI automobile component for October of the preceding calendar year exceeds the CPI automobile component for October 1983.

The term "CPI automobile component" is defined in section 280F(d)(7)(B)(ii) of the Code as the "automobile component" of the Consumer Price Index for all Urban Consumers published by the Department of Labor (the CPI). The new car component of the CPI was 209.6 for October 1984 and 204.3 for October 1983. The October 1984 index exceeded the October 1983 index by 5.3. The Internal Revenue Service has therefore determined that the automobile price inflation adjustment under 280F(d)(7) was 2.6 percent. This adjustment is applicable to all passenger automobiles that were placed in service after December 31, 1984, and before April 3, 1985, and to passenger automobiles acquired by taxpayers pursuant to binding contracts in effect on April 1, 1985, and at all times thereafter, and placed in service after April 2, 1985, and before August 1, 1985. The dollar limitations in section 280F(a) (before its amendment by the 1985 Act) must therefore be increased by a factor of .026, and the resulting amount must be rounded to the nearest multiple of $100. Thus, the $6000 limitation in section 280F(a)(2)(A)(ii) becomes $6200. (Also, the $1000 limitation in section 280F(a)(1) remains $1000, and the $4000 limitation in section 280F(a)(2)(A)(i) becomes $4100.)

HOLDING

The automobile price inflation adjustment for passenger automobiles placed in service after December 31, 1984, and before April 3, 1985, and for passenger automobiles acquired by taxpayers pursuant to binding contracts in effect on April 1, 1985, and at all times thereafter, and placed in service after April 2, 1985, and before August 1, 1985, is 2.6 percent. For those vehicles, the recovery deductions for any taxable year in the recovery period after the first taxable year in the recovery period may not exceed $6200. (Also, the amount of credit determined under section 46(a) may not exceed $1000 and the recovery deductions for the first taxable year in the recovery period may not exceed $4100.

SUPREME COURT OF THE
UNITED STATES
No. 85-554

United States v.
Hughes Properties, Inc.
U.S.

On Writ of Certiorari to the United States
Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit

June 3, 1986

Syllabus

Respondent, in its gambling casino in Reno, Nev., operated a number of "progressive" slot machines. In addition to paying fixed amounts when certain symbol combinations appear on their reels, these machines have a "progressive" jackpot that is won only when a different specified combination appears. The amount of the jackpot increases as money is gambled on the machine until the jackpot is won. A Nevada Gaming Commission regulation prohibits reducing the indicated payoff without paying the jackpot. Utilizing the accrual method of accounting, respondent's practice was, at the end of each fiscal year, to enter the total of the progressive jackpot amounts as an accrued liability on its books, and from that total to subtract the corresponding figure for the preceding year to produce the current tax year's increase in accrued liability. On its federal income tax returns for certain fiscal years, respondent claimed this net figure as a deduction under §162(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, as an ordinary and necessary business expense incurred during the taxable year. The Commissioner of Internal Revenue (Commissioner) disallowed the deductions on the ground that, under Treasury Regulations, an expense may not be deducted until "all the events have occurred which determine the fact of liability and the amount thereof can be determined with reasonable accuracy," and that, until a patron actually won a progressive jackpot, respondent's liability to pay the jackpot was contingent and therefore was not a deductible expense. Accordingly, the Commissioner determined deficiencies in respondent's income taxes for the years in question. Respondent paid the deficiencies, and when its claims for refunds were denied, brought suit in the Claims Court. The court granted respondent's motion for summary judgment, holding that respondent's liability to pay the progressive jackpots was fixed by the Nevada regulation. The Court of Appeals affirmed.

Held: Respondent was entitled to claim the deductions in question. Pp. 5–13.

(a) The "all events" test prescribed by the Treasury Regulations requires that before an expense can be regarded as "incurred" for federal income tax purposes, a liability must be fixed and absolute. Pp. 6–7.

(b) Here, the effect of the Nevada regulation was to fix respondent's liability. Identification of the winning players is irrelevant to respondent, since the obligation to pay exists and whether it turns out that the winner is one patron or another makes no difference as to liability. The event creating liability was the last play of each progressive slot machine before the end of the fiscal year, since that play fixed the jackpot amount irrevocably. That event occurred during the taxable year. Brown v. Helvering, 291 U.S. 193, distinguished. Pp. 8–9.

(c) Granting that the Commissioner has broad discretion to determine whether a taxpayer's accounting methods clearly reflect income, that financial accounting does not control for tax purposes, and that the mere desirability of matching expenses with income will not necessarily sustain a taxpayer's deduction, the disallowance of respondent's deductions was not justified. As noted, the jackpot liabilities were fixed, and only the exact times of payment and the winners' identity remained uncertain. Pp. 9–10.

(d) Nothing in the record indicates that respondent used its progressive slot machines for tax-avoidance purposes. Pp. 10–12.

(e) The potential that a casino operator might go out of business, or surrender or lose its license, or go into bankruptcy, with the result that the progressive jackpot would never be paid, does not prevent accrual of the expense. P. 12.

(f) One of the expenses that necessarily attends the production of income from a progressive slot machine is the commitment of a particular portion of the income generated to an irrevocable jackpot. Cf. United States v. Anderson, 269 U.S. 422. Respondent's true income from its progressive slot machines is only that portion of the money gambled that it is entitled to keep. Pp. 12–13.

JUSTICE BLACKMUN delivered the opinion of the Court.

This case concerns the deductibility for federal income tax purposes, by a casino operator utilizing the accrual method of accounting, of amounts guaranteed for payment on "progressive" slot machines but not yet won by playing patrons.

There is no dispute as to the relevant facts; many of them are stipulated. Respondent Hughes Properties, Inc., is a Nevada corporation. It owns Harolds Club, a gambling casino, in Reno, Nev. It keeps its books and files its federal income tax returns under the accrual method of accounting. During the tax years in question (the fiscal years that ended June 30 in 1973 to 1977, inclusive), respondent owned and operated slot machines at its casino. Among these were a number of what are called "progressive" machines. A progressive machine, like a regular one, pays fixed amounts when certain symbol combinations appear on its reels. But a progressive machine has an additional "progressive" jackpot, which is won only when a different specified combination appears. The casino sets this jackpot initially at a minimal amount. The figure increases, according to a ratio determined by the casino, as money is gambled on the machine. The amount of the jackpot at any given time is registered on a "payoff indicator" on the face of the machine. That amount continues to increase as patrons play the machine until the jackpot is won or until a maximum, also determined by the casino, is reached.

The odds of winning a progressive jackpot obviously are a function of the number of reels on the machine, the number of positions on each reel, and the number of winning symbols. The odds are determined by the casino, provided only that there exists a possibility that the winning combination of symbols can appear.[1]

The Nevada Gaming Commission closely regulates the casino industry in the State, including the operation of progressive slot machines. In September 1972, the Commission promulgated §5.110 of the Nevada Gaming Regulations. See App. 55. This section requires a gaming establishment to record at least once a day the jackpot amount registered on each progressive machine. §5.110.5. Furthermore.

> "[n]o payoff indicator shall be turned back to a lesser amount, unless the amount by which the indicator has been turned back is actually paid to a winning player or unless the change in the indicator reading is necessitated through a machine malfunction, in which case an explanation must be entered on the daily report as required in subsection 5." §5.110.2.

The Regulation is strictly enforced. Nevada, by statute, authorizes the Commission to impose severe administrative sanctions, including license revocation, upon any casino that wrongfully refuses to pay a winning customer a guaranteed jackpot. See Nev. Rev. Stat. §463.310 (1986).

It is respondent's practice to remove the money deposited by customers in its progressive machines at least twice every week and also on the last day of each month. The Commission does not regulate respondent's use of the funds thus collected, but, since 1977, it has required that a casino maintain a cash reserve sufficient to provide payment of the guaranteed amounts on all its progressive machines available to the public. Nev. Gaming Regs. §5.110(3); App. 56.

At the conclusion of each fiscal year, that is, at midnight on June 30, respondent entered the total of the progressive jackpot amounts shown on the payoff indicators as an accrued liability on its books. From that total, it subtracted the corresponding figure for the preceding year to produce the current tax year's increase in accrued liability. On its federal income tax return for each of its fiscal years 1973, 1974, 1975, and 1977, respondent asserted this net figure as a deduction under §162(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, as amended, 26 U.S.C. §162(a), as an ordinary and necessary expense "paid or incurred during the taxable year in carrying on any trade or business."[2] There is no dispute as to the amounts so determined or that a progressive jackpot qualifies for deduction as a proper expense of running a gambling business. See Tr. of Oral Arg. 7.

On audit, the Commissioner of Internal Revenue disallowed the deduction. He did so on the ground that, under Treas. Reg. §1.461–1(a)(2), 26 CFR §1.461–1(a)(2) (1985), an expense may not be deducted until "all the events have occurred which determine the fact of the liability and the amount thereof can be determined with reasonable accuracy." In his view, respondent's obligation to pay a particular progressive jackpot matures only upon a winning patron's pull of the handle in the future. According to the Commissioner, until that event occurs, respondent's liability to pay the jackpot is contingent and therefore gives rise to no deductible expense. Indeed, until then, there is no one who can make a claim for payment. See Tr. of Oral Arg. 11. Accordingly, the Commissioner determined deficiencies in respondent's income taxes for the years in question in the total amount of $433,441.88, attributable solely to the denial of these progressive jackpot deductions. Respondent paid the asserted deficiencies and filed timely claims for refund. When the claims were denied, respondent brought this suit for refunds in the Claims Court.

Each side moved for summary judgment. App. 15, 52. Respondent contended that the year-end amounts shown on the payoff indicators of the progressive slot machines were deductible, claiming that there was a reasonable expectation that payment would be made at some future date, that the casino's liability was fixed and irrevocable under Nevada law, that the accrual of those amounts conformed with generally accepted accounting principles, and that deductibility effected a timely and realistic matching of revenue and expenses.

The Claims Court denied the Government's motion for summary judgment but granted respondent's motion. 5 Cl. Ct. 641 (1984). It concluded that, under the Nevada Commission's rule, respondent's liability to pay the amounts on the progressive jackpot indicators became "unconditionally fixed," id., at 645, at "midnight of the last day of the fiscal year," id., at 647. The final event was "the last play (successful or not) of the machine before the close of the fiscal year, that is, the last change in the jackpot amount before the amount is recorded for accounting purposes." id., at 645. A contrary result would mismatch respondent's income and expenses. The court acknowledged that, if respondent were to go out of business, it would not owe the jackpot amount to any particular person. Id., at 646. Nevertheless, the jackpot indicator amount "would still continue to be an incurred liability fixed by state law, for which [respondent] would continue to be responsible" (emphasis in original). Id., at 645.

The Claims Court further acknowledged that its ruling was in conflict with the decision of the Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit in Nightingale v. United States, 684 F.2d 611 (1982), having to do with another Nevada casino, but it declined to follow that precedent and specifically disavowed its reasoning. 5 Cl. Ct., at 644–647.

The Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit affirmed the judgment "on the basis of the United States Claims Court opinion." 760 F.2d 1292, 1293 (1985). It ruled that, under the accrual method of accounting, an expense is deductible in the tax year in which all the events have occurred that determine the fact of liability and the amount thereof can be determined with reasonable accuracy, and that liability exists "if there is an obligation to perform an act and the cost of performance can be measured in money." Ibid. The liability here was not contingent upon the time of payment or the identity of the jackpot winner. Rather, it was fixed by the Commission's regulation. The "contrary conclusion" of the Ninth Circuit in Nightingale was noted. Ibid.

Because of the clear conflict between the two Circuits, we granted certiorari. 474 U.S.——(1985).

[1] A 1976 study of the 24 4-reel progressive machines then in operation at respondent's casino revealed that the average period between payoffs was approximately 4½ months, although one machine had been in operation for 13 months and another for 35 months without a payoff as of September 1, 1976. The payoff frequency of the other 22 machines ranged from a high of 14.3 months to a low of 1.9 months.

[2] No deduction was asserted for fiscal 1976 because the aggregate accrued liability at the end of fiscal 1976 was less than that at the end of fiscal 1975.

II

Section 162(a) of the Internal Revenue Code allows a deduction for "all the ordinary and necessary expenses paid or incurred during the taxable year in carrying on any trade or business." Section 446(a) provides that taxable income "shall be computed under the method of accounting on the basis of which the taxpayer regularly computes his income in keeping his books." Under the "cash receipts and disbursements method," specifically recognized by §446(c)(1), a taxpayer is entitled to deduct business expenses only in the year in which they are paid. Treas. Reg. §§1.446–1(c)(1)(i) and 1.461–1(a)(1). The Code also permits a taxpayer to compute taxable income by the employment of "an accrual method." §446(c)(2). An accrual-method taxpayer is entitled to deduct an expense in the year in which it is "incurred," §162(a), regardless of when it is actually paid.

For a number of years, the standard for determining when an expense is to be regarded as "incurred" for federal income tax purposes has been the "all events" test prescribed by the Regulations. See Treas. Reg. §1.446–1(c)(1)(ii) (accruals in general); §1.451–1(a) (accrual of income); and §1.461–1(a)(2) (accrual of deductions). This test appears to have had its origin in a single phrase that appears in this Court's opinion in United States v. Anderson, 269 U.S. 422, 441 (1926) ("it is also true that in advance of the assessment of a tax, all the events may occur which fix the amount of the tax and determine the liability of the taxpayer to pay it"). Since then, the Court has described the "all events" test "established" in Anderson, as "the 'touchstone' for determining the year in which an item of deduction accrues," and as "a fundamental principle of tax accounting." United States v. Consolidated Edison Co., 366 U.S. 380, 385 (1961) (citing cases).

Under the Regulations, the "all events" test has two elements, each of which must be satisfied before accrual of an expense is proper. First, all the events must have occurred which establish the fact of the liability. Second, the amount must be capable of being determined "with reasonable accuracy." Treas. Reg. §1.446–1(c)(1)(ii). This case concerns only the first element, since the parties agree that the second is fully satisfied.

III

The Court's cases have emphasized that "a liability does not accrue as long as it remains contingent." Brown v. Helvering, 291 U.S. 193, 200 (1934); accord, Dixie Pine Co. v. Commissioner, 320 U.S. 516, 519 (1944). Thus, to satisfy the all-events test, a liability must be "final and definite in amount," Security Flour Mills Co. v. Commissioner, 321 U.S. 281, 287 (1944), must be "fixed and absolute," Brown v. Helvering, 291 U.S. at 201, and must be "unconditional," Lucas v. North Texas Lumber Co., 281 U.S. 11, 13 (1930). And one may say that "the tax law requires that a deduction be deferred until 'all the events' have occurred that will make it fixed and certain." Thor Power Tool Co. v. Commissioner, 439 U.S. 522, 543 (1979).

A

The Government argues that respondent's liability for the progressive jackpots was not "fixed and certain," and was not "unconditional" or "absolute," by the end of the fiscal year, for there existed no person who could assert any claim to those funds. It takes the position, quoting Nightingale v. United States, 684 F.2d, at 614, that the indispensable event "is the winning of the progressive jackpot by some fortunate gambler." It says that, because respondent's progressive jackpots had not been won at the close of the fiscal year, respondent had not yet incurred liability. Nevada law places no restriction on the odds set by the casino, as long as a possibility exists that the winning combination can appear. Thus, according to the Government, by setting very high odds respondent can defer indefinitely into the future the time when it actually will have to pay off the jackpot. The Government argues that if a casino were to close its doors and go out of business, it would not owe the jackpots to anyone. Similarly, if it were to sell its business, or cease its gaming operations, or go into bankruptcy, or if patrons were to stop playing its slot machines, it would have no obligation.

We agree with the Claims Court and with the Federal Circuit and disagree with the Government for the following reasons:

1. The effect of the Nevada Gaming Commission's regulations was to fix respondent's liability. Section 5.110.2 forbade reducing the indicated payoff without paying the jackpot, except to correct a malfunction or to prevent exceeding the limit imposed. App. 55. Respondent's liability, that is, its obligation to pay the indicated amount, was not contingent. That an extremely remote and speculative possibility existed that the jackpot might never be won,[3] did not change the fact that, as a matter of state law, respondent had a fixed liability for the jackpot which it could not escape. The effect of Nevada's law was equivalent to the situation where state law requires the amounts of the jackpot indicators to be set aside in escrow pending the ascertainment of the identity of the winners. The Government concedes that, in the latter case, the liability has accrued, Tr. of Oral Arg. 20–21, even though the same possibility would still exist that the winning pull would never occur.

2. The Government misstates the need for identification of the winning player. That is, or should be, a matter of no relevance for the casino operator. The obligation is there, and whether it turns out that the winner is one patron or another makes no conceivable difference as to basic liability.

3. The Government's heavy reliance on Brown v. Helvering, 291 U.S. 193 (1934), in our view, is misplaced. That case concerned an agent's commissions on sales of insurance policies, and the agent's obligation to return a proportionate part of the commission in case a policy was canceled. The agent sought to deduct from gross income an amount added during the year to his reserve for repayment of commissions. This Court agreed with the Commissioner's disallowance of the claimed deduction because the actual event that would create the liability—the cancellation of a particular policy in a later year—"[did] not occur during the taxable year," id., at 200, but rather occurred only in the later year in which the policy was in fact canceled. Here, however, the event creating liability, as the Claims Court recognized, was the last play of the machine before the end of the fiscal year, since that play fixed the jackpot amount irrevocably. 5 Cl. Ct., at 645. That event occurred during the taxable year.

4. The Government's argument that the fact that respondent treats unpaid jackpots as liabilities for financial accounting purposes does not justify treating them as liabilities for tax purposes is unpersua-

[3] An affidavit of the president of respondent's Harolds Club Division, submitted in the Claims Court in support of respondent's motion for summary judgment, states that all the progressive machine jackpots unpaid as of June 30, 1977, "were subsequently won and paid to customers." App. 62.

sive. Proper financial accounting and acceptable tax accounting, to be sure, are not the same. Justice Brandeis announced this fact well over 50 years ago; "The prudent business man often sets up reserves to cover contingent liabilities. But they are not allowable as deductions." Lucas v. American Code Co., 280 U.S. 445, 452 (1930). See also Brown v. Helvering, 291 U.S., at 201–202, and Lucas v. Structural Steel Co., 281 U.S. 264, 269 (1930). The Court has long recognized "the vastly different objectives that financial and tax accounting have." Thor Power Tool Co. v. Commissioner, 439 U.S. at 542. The goal of financial accounting is to provide useful and pertinent information to management, shareholders, and creditors. On the other hand, the major responsibility of the Internal Revenue Service is to protect the public fisc. Ibid. Therefore, although §446(c)(2) permits a taxpayer to use an accrual method for tax purposes if he uses that method to keep his books, §446(b) specifically provides that if the taxpayer's method of accounting "does not clearly reflect income," the Commissioner may impose a method that "does clearly reflect income." Thus, the "Commissioner has broad powers in determining whether accounting methods used by a taxpayer clearly reflect income." Commissioner v. Hansen, 360 U.S. 446, 467 (1959). See also Thor Power Tool Co. v. Commissioner, 439 U.S., at 532; American Automobile Assn. v. United States, 367 U.S. 687, 697–698 (1961). The Regulations carry this down specifically to "the accounting treatment of any item." Treas. Reg. §1.446–1(a)(1).

Granting all this—that the Commissioner has broad discretion, that financial accounting does not control for tax purposes, and that the mere desirability of matching expenses with income will not necessarily sustain a taxpayer's deduction, see American Automobile Assn. v. United States, 367 U.S., at 690; Thor Power Tool Co. v. Commissioner, 439 U.S., at 541—the Commissioner's disallowance of respondent's deductions was not justified in this case. As stated above, these jackpot liabilities were definitely fixed. A part of the machine's intake was to be paid out, that amount was known, and only the exact time of payment and the identity of the winner remained for the future. But the accrual method itself makes irrelevant the timing factor that controls when a taxpayer uses the cash receipts and disbursements method.[4]

5. The Government suggests that respondent's ability to control the timing of payouts shows both the contingent nature of the claimed deductions and a potential for tax avoidance. It speaks of the time value of money, of respondent's ability to earn additional income upon the jackpot amounts it retains until a winner comes along, of respondent's "virtually unrestricted discretion in setting odds," Brief for United States 31, and of its ability to transfer amounts from one machine to another with the accompanying capacity to defer indefinitely into the future the time at which it must make payment to its customers. All this, the Government says, unquestionably contains the "potential for tax avoidance." See Thor Power Tool Co. v. Commissioner, 439 U.S., at 538. And the Government suggests that a casino operator could put extra machines on the floor on the last day of the tax year with whatever initial jackpots it specifies and with whatever odds it likes, and then, on the taxpayer's theory, could take a current deduction for the full amount even though payment of the jackpots might not occur for many years, citing Nightingale, 684 F. 2d, at 615.

None of the components that make up this parade of horribles, of course, took place here. Nothing in this record even intimates that respondent used its progressive machines for tax-avoidance purposes. Its income from these machines was less than 1% of its gross revenue during the tax years in question. See App. 35–36. Respondent's revenue from progressive slot machines depends on inducing gamblers to play the machines, and, if it sets unreasonably high odds, customers will refuse to play and will gamble elsewhere. Thus, respondent's economic self-interest will keep it from setting odds likely to defer payoffs too far into the future.[5] Nor, with Nevada's strictly imposed controls, was any abuse of the kind hypothesized by the Government likely to happen. In any event, the Commissioner's ability, under §446(b) of the Code, 26 U.S.C. §446(b), to correct any such abuse is the complete practical answer to the Government's concern. If a casino manipulates its use of progressive slot machines to avoid taxes, the Commissioner has the power to find that its accounting does not accurately reflect its income and to require it to use a more appropriate accounting method. Finally, since the casino of course must pay taxes on the income it earns from the use of as-yet-unwon jackpots, the Government vastly overestimates the time value of respondent's deductions.

6. There is always a possibility, of course, that a casino may go out of business, or surrender or lose its license, or go into bankruptcy, with the result that the amounts shown on the jackpot indicators would never be won by playing patrons. But this potential nonpayment of an incurred liability exists for every business that uses an accrual method, and it does not prevent accrual. See, e.g., Wien Consolidated Airlines, Inc. v. Commissioner, 528 F. 2d 735 (CA9 1976). "The existence of an absolute liability is necessary; absolute certainty that it will be discharged by payment is not." Helvering v. Russian Finance & Constr. Corp., 77 F. 2d 324, 327 (CA2 1935). And if any of the events hypothesized by the Government should occur, the deducted amounts would qualify as recaptured income subject to tax. Treas. Reg. §1.461–1(a)(2).

7. Finally, the result in United States v. Anderson, 269 U.S. 422 (1926), a case to which the Government makes repeated reference, is itself instructive. The issue there was the propriety of the accrual of a federal munitions tax prior to its actual assessment. The assessment was required before the tax became due. The Government's position, in contrast to its position in the present case, was that the tax liability accrued before assessment. The Court held that the absence of the assessment did not prevent accrual of the tax. It recognized that the taxpayer's "true income for the year . . . could not have been determined without deducting . . . the . . . expenses attributable to the production of that income during the year." Id., at 440. One of the expenses that necessarily attended the production of munitions income was the commitment of a particular portion of the revenue generated to a "reserve for munitions taxes." Ibid. Similarly, one of the expenses that necessarily attends the production of income from a progressive slot machine is the commitment of a particular portion of the revenue generated to an irrevocable jackpot. Respondent's true income from its progressive slot machines is only that portion of the money gambled which it is entitled to keep.

[4] The fact that Congress once briefly adopted statutory provisions that specifically would have permitted a taxpayer to deduct anticipated expenses by a reserve mechanism is hardly significant. See §§462(a) and (d)(1)(B) of the 1954 Code as originally adopted, 68A Stat. 158–159, repealed retroactively by the Act of June 15, 1955, ch. 143, §§1 and 3, 69 Stat. 134, 135. But see Deficit Reduction Act of 1984, §91(a), 98 Stat. 598.

[5] Respondent also is unlikely to set extremely high initial jackpots on its machines, since that practice would increase the casino's risk. The initial progressive jackpot amount is the casino's money. If a patron gets the winning combination soon after the machine goes into service, the casino will not have time to recoup the initial jackpot from money gambled by the public. Thus, casinos will tend to set rather low initial jackpots, relying on a percentage of the funds gambled by previous players to contribute the bulk of the progressive jackpot.

The judgment of the Court of Appeals is affirmed.

It is so ordered.

Rev. Rul. 86-108

ISSUE

Are services performed by resident and nonresident aliens on an oil rig attached to the outer Continental Shelf of the United States "employment" under section 3121(b) of the Internal Revenue Code for Federal Insurance Contributions Act (FICA) purposes?

FACTS

A foreign corporation employs individuals to operate an oil rig which is temporarily attached to the outer Continental Shelf of the United States. These individuals are resident aliens and nonresident aliens of the United States, within the meanings of Code sections 7701(b)(1)(A) and (B) of the case, respectively.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 3121(b) of the Code provides that for FICA purposes the term "employment" includes (with certain exceptions) any service performed (1) within the United States by an employee for an employer regardless of the citizenship or residence of either party or (2) outside the United States by a citizen or resident of the United States as an employee for a United States employer.

Section 3121(e)(2) of the Code provides that when used in a geographical sense the term "United States" includes the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Guam, and American Samoa.

Section 31.3121(e)-1(b) of the Employment Tax Regulations provides that when used in a geographical sense the term "United States" means the several states, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Guam, and American Samoa.

Section 7701(a)(9) of the Code provides that under the Code, where not otherwise distinctly expressed or manifestly incompatible with the intent thereof, the term "United States" when used in a geographical sense includes only the states and the District of Columbia.

Section 3(1) of the Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act (the Act), 43 U.S.C. section 1332(1) (1982), provides that it is declared to be the policy of the United States that the subsoil and seabed of the outer Continental Shelf appertain to the United States and are subject to its jurisdiction, control, and power of disposition. Section 4(a)(1) of the Act, 43 U.S.C. section 1333(a)(1), as amended, provides that the Constitution and laws and civil and political jurisdiction of the United States are extended to the subsoil and seabed of the outer Continental Shelf and to all artificial islands and all installations and other devices permanently or temporarily attached to the seabed which may be erected thereon for the purpose of exploring for, developing, or producing resources therefrom, or any such installation or other device (other than a ship or vessel) for the purpose of transporting such resources, to the same extent as if the outer Continental Shelf were an area of exclusive federal jurisdiction located within a state.

Rev. Rul. 81-257, 1981-2 C.B. 214, and Rev. Rul. 77-197, 1977-1 C.B. 344, hold that in view of the foregoing provisions of the Act, drilling rigs attached to the seabed of the outer Continental Shelf are within the United States for purposes of the air transportation tax imposed by section 4261 of the Code. Rev. Rul. 56-505, 1956-2 C.B. 891, holds that under these same provisions of the Act, submerged lands known as the Continental Shelf are part of the United States for purposes of the tax imposed by section 4371 on foreign insurance policies.

The above revenue rulings are based on the determination that because the Act treats the outer Continental Shelf as an area of exclusive federal jurisdiction located within a state for all purposes of fedreal law, the term "United States" in section 7701(a)(9) of the Code includes the outer Continental Shelf and oil rigs operating on it. For the same reason, the term "United States" in section 3121(e)(2) of the Code and section 31.3121(e)-1(b) of the regulations includes the outer Continental Shelf and oil rigs attached to it. Thus, services performed on such oil rigs are performed within the United States for purposes of the definition of employment in section 3121(b).

HOLDING

Services performed by resident and nonresident aliens of the United States for a foreign employer on an oil rig attached to the outer Continental Shelf of the United States are "employment" under section 3121(b) of the Code for FICA purposes.

ISSUE

(1) How must the former employer of a deceased employee report payments of the employee's accrued wages and vacation pay that are made to the estate of the employee or to a person who acquired the right to receive the payments?

(2) How must such an employer report payments of death benefits made to the employee's estate or to a person who acquired the right to receive the payments solely because of the death of the employee?

FACTS

Before A's death on April 25, 1984, A was employed by X, a corporation, and was paid on a monthly basis. From January 1 to April 1, 1984, A received $12,000 in wages. When A died, X owed A $3,000 in wages and $2,000 in accrued vacation pay, all of which X paid to A's estate. During 1984 X also paid $8,000 in death benefits to A's estate. The death benefits were paid under a plan that qualified under section 403 of the Internal Revenue Code and that had been established by X for all of its employees. The benefits were not amounts for which A possessed a nonforfeitable right while living, but were paid solely by reason of A's death.

Under section 6051(a) of the Code, every person required to deduct and withhold from an employee a tax under section 3101, relating to the Federal Insurance Contributions Act (FICA), or section 3402, relating to income tax, must furnish to each such employee a written statement showing certain information with respect to the remuneration paid by that person to the employee during the calendar year. The statement must be furnished on or before January 31 of the succeeding year, or, if the employment is terminated before the close of the calendar year, within 30 days after the date of receipt of a written request from the employee if the 30-day period ends before January 31.

Section 691(a)(1) of the Code provides as a general rule that the amount of all items of gross income in respect of a decedent that are not properly includible in the taxable period in which the decedent died or a prior period (including the amount of all items of gross income in respect of a prior decedent, if the right to receive the amount was acquired by reason of the death of the prior decedent) must be included in the gross income for the taxable year when received, of: (A) the estate of the decedent, if the right to receive the amount is acquired by the decedent's estate from the decedent; (B) the person who by reason of the death of the decedent acquires the right to receive the amount, if the right to receive the amount is not acquired by the decedent's estate from the decedent; or (C) the person who acquires from the decedent the right to receive the amount by bequest, devise, or inheritance, if the amount is received after a distribution by the decedent's estate of such right.

Section 691(a)(3) of the Code provides that income in respect of a decedent is considered to have the same character in the hands of the recipient that it would have had in the hands of the decedent had the decedent received such amount while alive.

Under section 3121(a) of the Code, the term "wages" for purposes of the FICA means, with certain exceptions, all remuneration for employment, including the cash value of all remuneration (including benefits) paid in any medium other than cash. Section 3401(a), relating to the withholding of income tax, contains a similar definition.

Section 1.6041–2(a)(1) of the Income Tax Regulations provides that wages, as defined in section 3401 of the Code, paid to an employee are to be reported on Form W–2.

Rev. Rul. 55–229, 1955–1 C.B. 75, concerns a lump sum payment representing accrued annual leave that was earned by a federal government employee and that is payable upon separation from the government. The ruling holds that this payment represents compensation for services rendered. The death of the employee and the receipt of the payment by a beneficiary of the employee does not change the nature and identity of the payment. Thus, under the provisions of section 691(a) of the Code, the payment is includible in the gross income of the beneficiary or estate.

Rev. Rul. 64–150, 1964–1 (Part 1) C.B. 448, states that under the general rule provided in section 691(a)(1) of the Code, the entire amount of salary earned by an employee, but unpaid at death, is income in respect of a decedent and is includible in the gross income of the recipient for the taxable year in which it is received. The amount includible as income in respect of a decedent is not reduced by any FICA withholding or other reduction required to be made from the entire salary earned. Under Rev. Rul. 64–150 an employer is required under section 6041(a) to report on Form 1099, accompanied by Form 1096, the total amount of salary, if $600 or more, unreduced by the amount of any deductions, even though only the net amount is actually paid to the deceased employee's estate or beneficiary.

Rev. Rul. 71–456, 1971–2 C.B. 354, concerns death benefits, and amounts representing regular compensation earned immediately preceding death but unpaid at the time of death, paid to beneficiaries and to the estates of deceased employees. The ruling holds that wages for purposes of the collection of income tax at source do not include these amounts but that wages for purposes of the FICA tax include amounts representing regular compensation that was earned immediately preceding death but was unpaid at the time of death and that are paid by an employer to a survivor of a former employee.

Subsequent to publication of Rev. Rul. 71–456, paragraph (14) was added to section 3121(a) of the Code, effective in the case of any payment made after December 1972. Section 3121(a)(14) excepts from the definition of wages, for FICA purposes only, payments by an employer to a survivor or the estate of a former employee made after the calendar year in which the employee died. Payments to a survivor before the close of the calendar year in which the employee died are subject to FICA.

In the present situation, X made payments to A's estate before the close of the calendar year and, thus, the payments are subject to FICA tax. To ensure that A receives proper social security credit, the $5,000 in wages and accrued vacation pay earned by A prior to death but paid to A's estate after A's death should be included with the $12,000 paid before A's death in Box 13, social security wages, of A's final Form W-2. However, only $12,000 is taxable to A and should appear in Box 10, Wages, tips, other compensation.

The $5,000 in accrued wages and vacation pay that were paid to A's estate are taxable to the estate. Under Rev. Rul. 64–150, all amounts earned but unpaid at an employee's death received by an estate or beneficiary of a deceased employee should be reported on Forms 1099 and 1096. Thus, the $5,000 paid to A's estate should be reported on Form 1099 MISC, Statement for Recipients of Miscellaneous Income, as non-employee compensation.

Under section 101(b) of the Code, gross income does not include amounts received, not to exceed $5,000 (whether in a single sum or otherwise), by the beneficiaries of the estate of an employee, if the amounts are paid by or on behalf of an employer and are paid by reason of the death of the employee.

Section 3121(a)(13) of the Code excepts from the definition of wages for FICA purposes any payment or series of payments by an employer to an employee, or any dependent of the employee, that is paid (A) upon or after the termination of the employee's employment relationship because of death or retirement for disability, and (B) under a plan established by the employer that makes provisions for employees generally or a class or classes of employees. This provision does not apply to any payment or series of payments that would have been made if the employment relationship had not been so terminated. The definition of wages under section 3401 for purposes of income tax withholding does not contain an exemption that is similar to the exception in section 3121(a)(13).

Section 1.6041-2(b)(1) of the regulations provides that amounts (i) which are distributed or made available to a beneficiary, and to which section 402 of the Code (relating to employee trusts) or section 403 (relating to employer annuity plans) applies, or (ii) which are described in section 72(m)(3)(B) (relating to life insurance contracts) must be reported on Forms 1099, Statement for Recipients, and 1096, Annual Summary and Transmittal of U.S. Information Returns, to the extent that such payments are includible in the gross income of the beneficiary if the amounts so includible aggregate $600 or more in any calendar year.

Thus, unlike the amounts discussed in Issue 1, the death benefits are not wages for purposes of the FICA tax. Death benefits paid from a qualified plan are amounts paid solely by reason of the employee's death for which the employee did not possess a nonforfeitable right while living. They are reported on Form 1099R, Statement for Recipients of Total Distributions from Profit-Sharing, Retirement Plans, Individual Retirement Arrangements, Etc. The entire $8,000 in death benefits from a qualified plan paid by X to A's estate should appear on Form 1099R, even though the recipient beneficiaries may exclude up to $5,000 from income as death benefits under section 101(b) of the Code.

HOLDING

Issue 1: Accrued wages and vacation pay of a deceased employee paid to an estate, or other person who has acquired the right to receive the payments, are reported on Form 1099-MISC. These payments are not considered wages for purposes of the collection of income tax at source and thus they do not appear in Box 10, Wages, tips, other compensation, of A's final Form W-2. They are not considered wages for FICA purposes unless paid to the survivor or estate before the close of the calendar year in which the employee died. If they are paid before that date, the total amount of the payments appears in Box 13, Social security wages, of A's final Form W-2, even though it does not appear in Box 10.

Issue 2: The entire amount of death benefits from a qualified plan paid to an estate, or other person who has acquired the right to receive the payments solely because of the death of the employee, should be reported on Form 1099R even though up to $5,000 may be exempt from income tax as death benefits under section 101(b) of the Code. The death benefits of $8,000 paid to A's estate are reported on Form 1099R issued to A's estate.

Death benefit payments from a nonqualified plan are also reported on Form 1099R.

Installment Method Reporting by Dealers in Personal Property; Changes from Accrual to Installment Method Reporting

LR-146-81

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Notice of proposed rulemaking.

SUMMARY: This document provides proposed regulations relating to installment method reporting by dealers in personal property. Changes to the applicable tax law were made by the Installment Sales Revision Act of 1980 [Pub. L. 96–471, 1980–2 C.B. 489]. These proposed regulations would affect all dealers in personal property who wish to report installment obligations on the installment method and would provide them with the guidance necessary to comply with the law.

DATES: Written comments and requests for a public hearing must be delivered by September 26, 1986. The amendments are proposed to be effective for taxable years ending after October 19, 1980.

ADDRESS: Send comments and requests for a public hearing to: Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Attention: CC:LR:T (LR–146–81) Washington, D.C. 20224.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: BACKGROUND

This document contains proposed amendments to the Income Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 1) under section 453A of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 relating to changes from the accrual method to the installment method of accounting by dealers in personal property. For taxable years ending before October 20, 1980, the rules relating to such changes were contained in section 453(c) of the Code. Section 2 of the Installment Sales Revision Act of 1980 (Pub. L. 96–471, 94 Stat. 2251) amended section 453(c) (as amended, section 453(c) provides the definition of the installment method) and replaced the rules in old section 453(c) with those in section 453A.

Under old section 453(c), a dealer in personal property, upon changing from the accrual to the installment method of reporting, was required to include in income amounts received on account of installment obligations accrued in a previous year. Old section 453(c) provided an adjustment in tax for a dealer reporting previously taxed amounts on the installment method. The adjustment was equal to the lesser of the portion of the tax paid in the prior taxable year which was attributable to the gain on the installment payment received in the current taxable year or the portion of the tax for the current year which was attributable to the installment payment. For each of these years, the tax attributable to the gain on the installment payment was equal to the gain multiplied by the effective rate of tax (i.e., the total tax as a percentage of gross income) for the year. Thus, gain was included in gross income twice and each time was taxed at the marginal rate of tax, but the adjustment on account of the double inclusion was computed at an effective rate of tax that was generally lower than either of the marginal rates at which the gain was taxed. These rules were not included in section 453A. In addition, the Installment Sales Revision Act repealed section 481(d). Before its repeal, section 481(d) provided that section 481 (relating to adjustments required by changes in method of accounting) did not apply to changes to which old section 453(c) applied.

In place of the adjustment provided in old section 453(c), Congress intended that the cut-off method be applied in accounting for changes by dealers from the accrual method to the installment method of reporting. Under the cut-off method provided in the proposed regulations, payments received by a dealer in the taxable year for which the dealer elected the installment method of reporting (or in subsequent years) in respect of an installment obligation which arose in a taxable year prior to the election year are not taken into account under the installment method. Such payments are accounted for only under the method of accounting in use in the prior year.

Additionally, because old section 453(c) was repealed, the proposed regulations provide that taxpayers may no longer revoke elections to use the installment method in the manner provided by old section 453(c)(4). A dealer may not change from the installment method to any other method of accounting without the consent of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

SPECIAL ANALYSES

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has determined that this proposed rule is not a major rule as defined in Executive Order 12291. Accordingly, a Regulatory Impact Analysis is not required.

Accordingly, a regulatory flexibility analyses is not required under the Regulatory Flexibility Act (5 U.S.C. chapter 6).

COMMENTS AND REQUESTS FOR A PUBLIC HEARING

Before adopting these proposed regulations, consideration will be given to any written comments that are submitted (preferably eight copies) to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. All comments will be available for public inspection and copying. A public hearing will be held upon written request to the Commissioner by any person who has submitted written comments. If a public hearing is held, notice of the time and place will be published in the FEDERAL REGISTER.

The collection of information requirements contained in this notice of proposed rulemaking have been submitted to the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) for review under section 3504 (h) of the Paperwork Reduction Act. Comments on these requirements should be sent to the Office of Information and Regulatory Affairs of OMB, Attention: Desk Officer for Internal Revenue Service, New Executive Office Building, Washington, D.C. 20503. The Internal Revenue Service requests that persons submitting comments on these requirements to OMB also send copies of those comments to the Service.

Proposed amendments to the regulations

The proposed amendments to 26 CFR Parts 1 and 602 are as follows:

INCOME TAX REGULATIONS
(26 CFR PART 1)

Paragraph 1. The authority for Part 1 is amended by adding the following citation:

Authority: 26 U.S.C. 7805. * * * Section 1.453A–3 also issued under 26 U.S.C. 453A.

Par. 2. Sections 1.453–7 and 1.453–8 are removed.

Par. 3. New §1.453A–3 is added at the appropriate place to read as follows:

§1.453A–3 Requirements for adoption of or change to installment method by dealers in personal property.

(a) In general. A dealer in personal property (within the meaning of §1.453A–1) may adopt or change to the installment method for a type or types of sales on the installment plan (within the meaning of §1.453A–2) in the manner prescribed in this section. This section does not apply to sales other than sales on the installment plan by dealers in personal property.

(b) Time and manner of electing installment method reporting—(1) Time for election. An election to adopt or change to the installment method for a type or types of sales must be made on an income tax return for the taxable year of the election, filed on or before the time specified (including extensions thereof) for filing such returns.

(2) Adoption of installment method. A taxpayer who adopts the installment method for the first taxable year in which sales are made on an installment plan of any kind must indicate in the income tax return for that taxable year that the installment method of accounting is being adopted and specify the type or types of sales included within the election. If a taxpayer in the year of the initial election made only one type of sale on the installment plan, but during a subsequent taxable year makes another type of sale on the installment plan and adopts the installment method for that other type of sale, the taxpayer must indicate in the income tax return for the subsequent year that an election is being made to adopt the installment method of accounting for the additional type of sale.

(3) Change to installment method. A taxpayer who changes to the installment method for a particular type or types of sales on the installment plan in accordance with this section must, for each type of sale on the installment plan for which the installment method is to be used, attach a separate statement to the income tax return for the taxable year with respect to which the change is made. Each statement must show the method of accounting used in computing taxable income before the change and the type of sale on the installment plan for which the installment method is being elected.

(4) Deemed elections. A dealer in personal property (including a person who is a dealer as a result of the recharacterization of transactions as sales) is deemed to have elected the installment method if the dealer treats a sale on the installment plan as a transaction other than a sale and fails to report the full amount of gain in the year of the sale. For example, if a transaction treated by a dealer as a lease is recharacterized by the Internal Revenue Service as a sale on the installment plan, the dealer will be deemed to have elected the installment method assuming the dealer failed to report the full amount of gain in the year of the transaction.

(c) Consent. A dealer in personal property may adopt or change to the installment method for sales on the installment plan without the consent of the Commissioner. However, a dealer may not change from the installment method to the accrual method of accounting or to any other method of accounting without the consent of the Commissioner.

(d) Cut-off method for amounts previously accrued. An election to change to the installment method for a type of sale applies only with respect to sales made on or after the first day of the taxable year of change. Thus, payments received in the taxable year of the change, or in subsequent years, in respect of an installment obligation which arose in a taxable year prior to the taxable year of change are not taken into account on the installment method, but rather must be accounted for under the taxpayer's method of accounting in use in the prior year.

(e) Effective date. This section applies to sales by dealers in personal property in taxable years ending after October 19, 1980. For rules relating to sales by dealers in personal property in taxable years ending before October 20, 1980, see 26 CFR 1.453–7 and 1.453–8 (rev. as of April 1, 1985).

OMB CONTROL NUMBERS UNDER THE PAPERWORK REDUCTION ACT
(26 CFR PART 602)

Par. 5. Section 602.101(c) is amended by inserting in the appropriate place in the table "§1.453A–3 . . . [ ]".

This notice of proposed rulemaking is issued under the authority contained in section 7805 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (68A Stat. 917; 26 U.S.C. 7805).

If an organization listed above submits information that warrants the renewal of its classification as a public charity or as a private operating foundation, the Internal Revenue Service will issue a ruling or determination letter with the revised classification as to foundation status. Grantors and contributors may thereafter rely upon such ruling or determination letter as provided in section 1.509(a)-7 of the Income Tax Regulations. It is not the practice of the Service to announce such revised classification of foundation status in the Internal Revenue Bulletin.

The following organization, which has been treated as a private operating foundation described in section 4942(j)(3) of the Code, has now been classified as an organization that is not a private operating foundation. Grantors and contributors may no longer rely upon rulings or determinations that this organization is a private operating foundation. The organization is:

Pacific Research Foundation, La Jolla, CA

Announcement of the Disbarment, Suspension, or Consent to Voluntary Suspension of Attorneys, Certified Public Accountants, Enrolled Agents and Enrolled Actuaries from Practice Before the Internal Revenue Service

Under 31 Code of Federal Regulations, Part 10, an attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary, in order to avoid the institution or conclusion of a proceeding for his disbarment or suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service, may offer his consent to suspension from such practice. The Director of Practice, in his discretion, may suspend an attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary in accordance with the consent offered.

Attorneys, certified public accountants, enrolled agents, and enrolled actuaries are prohibited in any Internal Revenue Service matter from directly or indirectly employing, accepting assistance from, being employed by or sharing fees with, any practitioner disbarred or under suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service.

To enable attorneys, certified public accountants, enrolled agents and enrolled actuaries to identify practictioners under consent suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service, the Director of Practice will announce in Internal Revenue Bulletin the names and addresses of practitioners who have been suspended from such practice, their designation as attorneys, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary, and the date or period of suspension. This announcement will appear in the weekly Bulletin at the earliest practicable date after such action and will continue to appear in the weekly Bulletin for five successive weeks or for as many weeks as is practicable for each attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary so suspended and will later be consolidated and published in the Cumulative bulletin.

The following individuals have been placed under consent suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service:

Name	Address	Designation	Term of Suspension
Robert D. Digby	North Little Rock, AR	Certified Public Accountant	Four Months from July 29, 1986
Jeffrey E. Ellis	Rockland, ME	Certified Public Accountant	Indefinte from July 2, 1986
Charles L. Honey	Prescott, AR	Attorney	One Year from July 2, 1986
Bernhardt Karp	Hudson, NY	Attorney & Certified Public Accountant	Indefinite from July 29, 1986
George N. Meros	Springfield, MO	Attorney	Indefinite from July 25, 1986
William G. Waldrop	Adamsville, AL	Certified Public Accountant	Indefinite from July 17, 1986

Under 20 Code of Federal Regulations, Part 901, an enrolled actuary, in order to avoid the initiation or conclusion of a suspension or termination proceeding, may offer his/her consent to suspension of enrollment. The Executive Director, Joint Board for the Enrollment of Actuaries, may suspend enrollment in accordance with the consent offered. An enrolled actuary whose enrollment is suspended is prohibited from performing actuarial services under the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA) during the period of suspension.

To enable employees of the Internal Revenue Service and others to identify enrolled actuaries under suspension, the Executive Director will announce in the Internal Revenue Bulletin the names and addresses of enrolled actuaries who have been suspended. This announcement will appear in the weekly Bulletin at the earliest practicable date following suspension and will continue to appear in the weekly Bulletin for at least three successive weeks for each enrolled actuary so suspended and will later be consolidated and published in the Cumulative Bulletin.

Name of Enrolled Actuary	Address	Term of Suspension
David P. Rosenberg	Philadelphia, PA	Indefinite effective August 13, 1986

Definition of Terms

Revenue rulings and revenue procedures (hereinafter referred to as "rulings") that have an effect on previous rulings use the following defined terms to describe the effect:

Amplified describes a situation where no change is being made in a prior published position, but the prior position is being extended to apply to a variation of the fact situation set forth therein. Thus, if an earlier ruling held that a principle applied to A, and the new ruling holds that the same principle also applies to B, the earlier ruling is amplified. (Compare with modified, below).

Clarified is used in those instances where the language in a prior ruling is being made clear because the language has caused, or may cause, some confusion. It is not used where a position in a prior ruling is being changed.

Distinguished describes a situation where a ruling mentions a previously published ruling and points out an essential difference between them.

Modified is used where the substance of a previously published position is being changed. Thus, if a prior ruling held that a principle applied to A but not to B, and the new ruling holds that it applies to both A and B, the prior ruling is modified because it corrects a published position. (Compare with amplified and clarified, above).

Obsoleted describes a previously published ruling that is not considered determinative with respect to future transactions. This term is most commonly used in a ruling that lists previously published rulings that are obsoleted because of changes in law or regulations. A ruling may also be obsoleted because the substance has been included in regulations subsequently adopted.

Revoked describes situations where the position in the previously published ruling is not correct and the correct position is being stated in the new ruling.

Superseded describes a situation where the new ruling does nothing more than restate the substance and situation of a previously published ruling (or rulings). Thus, the term is used to republish under the 1954 Code and regulations the same position published under the 1939 Code and regulations. The term is also used when it is desired to republish in a single ruling a series of situations, names, etc., that were previously published over a period of time in separate rulings. If the new ruling does more than restate the substance of a prior ruling, a combination of terms is used. For example, modified and superseded describes a situation where the substance of a previously published ruling is being changed in part and is continued without change in part and it is desired to restate the valid portion of the previously published ruling in a new ruling that is self contained. In this case the previously published ruling is first modified and then, as modified, is superseded.

Supplemented is used in situations in which a list, such as a list of the names of countries, is published in a ruling and that list is expanded by adding further names in subsequent rulings. After the original ruling has been supplemented several times, a new ruling may be published that includes the list in the original ruling and the additions, and supersedes all prior rulings in the series.

Suspended is used in rare situations to show that the previous published rulings will not be applied pending some future action such as the issuance of new or amended regulations, the outcome of cases in litigation, or the outcome of a Service study.

Department of the Treasury
Internal Revenue Service

T22.23:

Mission of the Service

The purpose of the Internal Revenue Service is to collect the proper amount of tax revenues at the least cost to the public, and in a manner that warrants the highest degree of public confidence in our integrity, efficiency and fairness. To achieve that purpose, we will:

—Encourage and achieve the highest possible degree of voluntary compliance in accordance with the tax law and regulations;

—Advise the public of their rights and responsibilities;

—Determine the extent of compliance and the causes of noncompliance;

—Do all things needed for the proper administration and enforcement of the tax laws;

—Continually search for and implement new, more efficient and effective ways of accomplishing our Mission.

Statement of Principles of Internal Revenue Tax Administration

The function of the Internal Revenue Service is to administer the Internal Revenue Code. Tax policy for raising revenue is determined by Congress.

With this in mind, it is the duty of the Service to carry out that policy by correctly applying the laws enacted by Congress; to determine the reasonable meaning of various Code provisions in light of the Congressional purpose in enacting them; and to perform this work in a fair and impartial manner, with neither a government nor a taxpayer point of view.

At the heart of administration is interpretation of the Code. It is the responsibility of each person in the Service, charged with the duty of interpreting the law, to try to find the true meaning of the statutory provision and not to adopt a strained construction in the belief that he or she is "protecting the revenue." The revenue is properly protected only when we ascertain and apply the true meaning of the statute.

The Service also has the responsibility of applying and administering the law in a reasonable, practical manner. Issues should only be raised by examining officers when they have merit, never arbitrarily or for trading purposes. At the same time, the examining officer should never hesitate to raise a meritorious issue. It is also important that care be exercised not to raise an issue or to ask a court to adopt a position inconsistent with an established Service position.

Administration should be both reasonable and vigorous. It should be conducted with as little delay as possible and with great courtesy and considerateness. It should never try to overreach, and should be reasonable within the bounds of law and sound administration. It should, however, be vigorous in requiring compliance with law and it should be relentless in its attack on unreal tax devices and fraud.

Introduction

The Internal Revenue Bulletin is the authoritative instrument of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for announcing official rulings and procedures of the Internal Revenue Service and for publishing Treasury Decisions, Executive Orders, Tax Conventions, legislation, court decisions, and other items of general interest. It is published weekly and may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. Bulletin contents of a permanent nature are consolidated semiannually into Cumulative Bulletins, which are sold on a single-copy basis.

It is the policy of the Service to publish in the Bulletin all substantive rulings necessary to promote a uniform application of the tax laws, including all rulings that supersede, revoke, modify, or amend any of those previously published in the Bulletin. All published rulings apply retroactively unless otherwise indicated. Procedures relating solely to matters of internal management are not published; however, statements of internal practices and procedures that affect the rights and duties of taxpayers are published.

Revenue rulings represent the conclusions of the Service on the application of the law to the pivotal facts stated in the revenue ruling. In those based on positions taken in rulings to taxpayers or technical advice to Service field offices, identifying details and information of a confidential nature are deleted to prevent unwarranted invasions of privacy and to comply with statutory requirements.

Rulings and procedures reported in the Bulletin do not have the force and effect of Treasury Department Regulations, but they may be used as precedents. Unpublished rulings will not be relied on, used, or cited as precedents by Service personnel in the disposition of other cases. In applying published rulings and procedures, the effect of subsequent legislation, regulations, court decisions, rulings, and procedures must be considered, and Service personnel and others concerned are cautioned against reaching the same conclusions in other cases unless the facts and circumstances are substantially the same.

The Bulletin is divided into four parts as follows:

Part I.—1954 Code.

This part includes rulings and decisions based on provisions of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

Part II.—Treaties and Tax Legislation.

This part is divided into two subparts as follows: Subpart A, Tax Conventions, and Subpart B, Legislation and Related Committee Reports.

Part III.—Administrative, Procedural, and Miscellaneous.

To the extent practicable, pertinent cross references to these subjects are contained in the other Parts and Subparts.

Part IV.—Items of General Interest.

With the exception of the disbarment and suspension list included in this part, none of these announcements is consolidated in the Cumulative Bulletins.

The first Bulletin for each month includes an index for the matters published during the preceding month. These monthly indexes are cumulated on a quarterly and semiannual basis, and are published in the first Bulletin of the succeeding quarterly and semi-annual period, respectively.

The Bulletin Index-Digest System, a research and reference service supplementing the Bulletin, may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. It consists of four Services: Service No. 1, Income Tax; Service No. 2, Estate and Gift Taxes; Service No. 3, Employment Taxes; Service No. 4, Excise Taxes. Each Service consists of a basic volume and a cumulative supplement that provide (1) finding lists of items published in the Bulletin, (2) digests of revenue rulings, revenue procedures, and other published items, and (3) indexes of Public Laws, Treasury Decisions, and Tax Conventions.

The contents of this publication are not copyrighted and may be reprinted freely. A citation of the Internal Revenue Bulletin as the source would be appropriate.

For sale by the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402. Prices: Domestic—$1.75 a single copy, $82.00 a year subscription. Foreign—$2.19 a single copy, $102.50 a year for subscription.

Part I. Rulings and Decisions Under the Internal Revenue Code of 1954

Section 1362.—Election; Revocation; Termination

S corporations; election; inadvertent termination; ineligible shareholder. A small business corporation whose election was terminated because stock for a limited period of time was inadvertently transferred to an ineligible trust will be treated as continuing to be an S corporation under section 1362(f) of the Code for the period specified by the Service during which the stock was held by the ineligible trust.

Rev. Rul. 86–110

ISSUE

If a corporation's election to be an S corporation is automatically terminated because the corporation inadvertently had one or more ineligible shareholders for a limited period of time before discovery and correction, is the corporation treated as continuing to be an S corporation under section 1362(f) of the Internal Revenue Code during the period when it had one or more ineligible shareholders?

FACTS

X corporation is an electing small business corporation. A, the majority shareholder of X, on advice of counsel, transferred shares of X stock to two irrevocable trusts for the benefit of A's minor children. Neither trust was an eligible shareholder under section 1361(c)(2) or section 1361(d)(3) of the Code because neither trust was treated by sections 671 through 679 as entirely owned by an individual that is a citizen or resident of the United States and because each trust had more than one income beneficiary. Thus, under section 1362(d)(2), the transfer of stock to the trusts resulted in an automatic termination of the S corporation election.

It was not A's desire or expectation to terminate the election when the transfer of the stock was made to the trusts. A acted on the advice of counsel that such transfers would not jeopardize the Subchapter S election, and A would not have made the transfers but for this advice. X and its shareholders continued to file returns and report income in a manner consistent with their belief that the election was still in effect.

Within a reasonable period of time after discovery of the termination, A took steps to correct the problem so that X once more qualified as a small business corporation. In addition X, and each shareholder of X, agreed to make any adjustments required by the Service with respect to such period as the Service might specify.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 1361(a) of the Code provides that the term "S corporation" means, with respect to any tax year, a small business corporation for which an election under section 1362(a) is in effect.

Section 1361(b)(1) of the Code defines a "small business corporation" as a domestic corporation that is not an ineligible corporation and does not (A) have more than 35 shareholders, (B) have as a shareholder, a person (other than an estate and other than a trust described in section 1361(c)(2)) that is not an individual, (C) have a nonresident alien as a shareholder, and (D) have more than one class of stock.

Section 1361(c)(2) of the Code provides that four types of domestic trusts may be shareholders of an S corporation: a trust that is treated as owned by an individual who is a citizen or resident of the United States; a trust that was treated as owned by an individual who was a citizen or resident of the United States immediately before the death of the deemed owner and that continues in existence after such death, but only for the 60-day period (or 2-year period if the entire corpus of the trust is includible in the gross estate of the deemed owner) beginning on the day of the deemed owner's death; a trust with respect to stock transferred to it pursuant to the terms of a will, but only for the 60-day period beginning on the day on which such stock is transferred to it; and a trust created primarily to exercise the voting power of stock transferred to it.

Section 1361(d) of the Code provides that a qualified subchapter S trust can be treated as a trust described in section 1361(c)(2) if a beneficiary of the trust makes an election for such treatment. A qualified subchapter S trust is a trust the terms of which require that (i) during the life of the current income beneficiary, there shall be only one income beneficiary of the trust; (ii) any corpus distributed during the life of the current income beneficiary may be distributed only to such beneficiary; (iii) the income interest of the current income beneficiary in the trust shall terminate on the life of the current income beneficiary, the trust shall distribute all of its assets to such beneficiary. In addition, all the income of the trust must be distributed (or required to be distributed) currently to one individual who is a citizen or resident of the United States.

Section 1362(d)(2) of the Code provides that an election under section 1362(a) will be terminated whenever (at any time on or after the first day of the first taxable year for which the corporation is an S corporation) the corporation ceases to be a small business corporation.

Section 1362(f) of the Code provides that if (1) an election by any corporation is terminated under section 1362(d)(2) or (3) of the Code, (2) the Secretary determines that the termination was inadvertent, (3) no later than a reasonable period of time after discovery of the terminating event, steps are taken so that the corporation is once more a small business corporation, and (4) the corporation, and each person who was a shareholder during the period specified under section 1362(f), agree to make such adjustments (consistent with the treatment of the corporation as an S corporation) as may be required by the Secretary with respect to that period, then, notwithstanding the terminating event, such corporation will be treated as continuing to be an S corporation during the period specified by the Secretary.

S. Rep. No. 97–640, 97th Cong., 2d Sess. 12 (1982), 1982–2 C.B. 718, 723, discusses section 1362(f) of the Code. It states in part:

> If the Internal Revenue Service determines that a corporation's subchapter S election is inadvertently terminated, the Service can waive the effect of the terminating event for any period if the corporation timely corrects the event and if the corporation and the shareholders agree to be treated as if the election has been in effect for such period.

Under the facts presented, since A transferred stock to trusts that are ineligible shareholders under section 1361(b)(1) of the Code, X ceased to be a small business corporation, thereby terminating its S corporation election. However, the termination was inadvertent. A acted on advice of counsel and would not have made the transfers but for this advice. Further, A took the necessary steps to correct the problem within a reasonable time after discovery of the termination and X and its shareholders agreed to make such adjustments as may be required by the Secretary.

Section 3509.—Determination of Employer's Liability for Certain Employment Taxes

FICA tax liability. An employee is liable for unwithheld FICA taxes after the employer's liability for the taxes has been determined under section 3509 of the Code.

Rev. Rul. 86–111

ISSUE

If an employer fails to deduct and withhold Federal Insurance Contributions Act (FICA) taxes with respect to an employee and if the employer's liability for the employee's share of FICA taxes is determined under section 3509 of the Internal Revenue Code, is the employee's liability for the unwithheld FICA taxes reduced by the employer's payment?

FACTS

In 1983 an employer, ER, failed to deduct and withhold employment taxes (including income tax withholding) from the wages of a worker because the employer erroneously treated the worker as an independent contractor for purposes of federal employment taxes (including income tax withholding). The employer did not intentionally disregard the requirement to deduct and withhold the employment taxes. In 1984, the Internal Revenue Service reclassified the worker an an employee and determined, under section 3509 of the Code, the amount of ER's liability for unwithheld 1983 federal employment taxes. Pursuant to section 3509, ER was assessed, and ER paid, 20 percent of the unwithheld FICA tax. The relief provisions of section 530 of the Revenue Act of 1978, 1978–3 (Vol. 1) C.B. xi, 119–20, which were extended indefinitely by the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982, section 269(c), 1982–2 C.B. 462, 536, do not apply.

The worker filed a Form 1040, U.S. Individual Income Tax Return, and a Schedule SE, Computation of Social Security self-Employment Tax, for 1983. After ER paid the assessment, the worker filed a Form 1040X, Amended U.S. Individual Income Tax Return, claiming a refund of the self-employment tax paid.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 3101 of the Code imposes a tax on wages received by an employee with respect to employment (employee's share of FICA tax). Section 3102 requires that the tax imposed by section 3101 be collected by the employer of the taxpayer by deducting the amount of the tax from the wages paid. Every employer required to deduct the tax is liable for its payment.

Section 31.3102–1(c) of the Employment Tax Regulations provides that the employer is liable for the employee tax with respect to all wages paid by the employer to each employee whether or not it is collected from the employee. The regulation further provides that, until the employee tax is collected from the employee, the employee also is liable for the employee tax with respect to all wages received.

Section 3509 of the Code provides, in part, that if an employer, with respect to any employee, fails to deduct and withhold from wages the employee's share of FICA tax because the employer, without intentionally disregarding the requirement to deduct and withhold that tax, treated the employee as a nonemployee for purposes of that tax, the amount of the employer's liability for the employee's share of FICA tax shall be determined as if the taxes imposed under FICA were 20 percent of the amount determined under section 3101. (The amount is 40 percent if the employer failed to file information returns unless such failure was due to reasonable cause.)

Section 3509(d)(1) of the Code provides, in part, that if the amount of any liability for tax is determined under section 3509, then (A) the employee's liability for tax shall not be affected by the assessment or collection of the tax so determined, (B) the employer shall not be entitled to recover from the employee any tax so determined, and (C) section 6521 shall not apply. Under certain circumstances, section 6521 permits self-employment taxes paid to offset liability for the employee's share of FICA tax.

Section 3509(d)(1)(C) of the Code makes section 6521 inapplicable if the amount of any liability for tax is determined under section 3509. Thus, if the amount of the employer's liability for the employee's share of FICA is determined under section 3509, then section 6521 cannot effect a reduction in that employer liability. The only tax liability determined under section 3509, however, is the employer's. Moreover, section 3509(d)(1)(A) states that the employee's liability is not to be affected by the assessment and collection of the tax determined under section 3509. Accordingly, application of section 3509 to the employer's tax liability for the employee's share of FICA does not preclude the employee from enjoying the benefit of section 6521, if that section is otherwise available.

Section 3101 of the Code imposes FICA tax on an employee. Section 3102 requires an employer to collect the tax imposed by section 3101, and also makes the tax a liability of the employer. Thus, both the employee and the employer are liable for the employee's share of FICA taxes, although the intent is that the employer will collect it from the employee and remit it to the Government. Regardless of whether it is the employer or the Government who collects it from the employee, the employee is ultimately liable for the tax imposed by section 3101. Section 31.3102–1(c) of the regulations.

If section 3509 of the Code applies to an employer, the employer's liability for the employee's share of FICA tax equals a stated percentage of the amount determined under section 3101. However, the employee's liability is not affected by the collection from the employer of the tax liability determined under section 3509. Section 3509(d)(1)(A). Therefore, the employee remains fully liable for the tax imposed by section 3101.

HOLDING

If the employer's liability for the employee's share of FICA tax is determined under section 3509 of the Code, the employee is liable for the entire amount of the unwithheld FICA tax unreduced by any amount paid by the employer.

Section 4051—Imposition of Tax on Heavy Trucks and Trailers Sold at Retail 26 CFR 145.4051-1: Imposition of tax on heavy trucks and trailers sold at retail.

Manufacturers; trucks; gross vehicle weight; use of readily attachable components. For purposes of determination of gross weight under section 4051(a) of the Code, the term "readily attachable components" is defined as springs, brakes, rims and tires. Rev. Ruls. 85–196 and 86–43 clarified.

Rev. Rul. 86–113

Rev. Rul. 85–196, 1985–2 C.B. 205, as modified by Rev. Rul. 86–43, 1986–13 I.R.B. 36, concerns the determination of gross vehicle weight for purposes of the retailers excise tax on trucks that is imposed by section 4051(a) of the Internal Revenue Code. Rev. Rul. 85–196 provides that, for purposes of computing the gross vehicle weight of a vehicle pursuant to section 145.4051–1(e)(3) of the Temporary Excise Tax Regulations, the seller may not take into account any readily attachable components of the vehicle and gross vehicle weight must be determined solely on the basis of the strength of the chassis frame and the axle capacity and placement. Rev. Rul. 86–43 modified Rev. Rul. 85–196 to change its effective date from April 1, 1986, to October 1, 1986. In so doing, Rev. Rul. 86–43 held that, during the six-month postponement period, sellers at retail could not, by replacing a readily attachable component, lower the gross vehicle weight rating assigned to a vehicle by its manufacturer.

Under the now-repealed manufacturers excise tax on trucks imposed by former section 4061(a)(1) of the Code, the term "readily attachable components" was specifically defined in section 48.4061(a)–1(f)(3)(v) of the Manufacturer and Retailers Excise Tax Regulations as being springs, brakes, rims, and tires.

For purposes of determinations of gross vehicle weight under section 4051(a) of the Code, the term "readily attachable components" is similarly defined as springs, brakes, rims, and tires.

EFFECT ON OTHER REVENUE RULINGS

Rev. Rul. 85–196 and Rev. Rul. 86–43 are clarified.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: BACKGROUND

On March 25, 1986, the FEDERAL REGISTER published final regulations relating to section 6011 (e) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (51 FR 10348) [T.D. 8081, 1986–17 I.R.B. 17]. The regulations were adopted to reflect the addition to the Code of section 6011 (e) by section 319 of the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 (Pub. L. 97–248, 96 Stat. 610) and its amendment by section 109 of the Interest and Dividend Tax Compliance Act of 1983 (Pub. L. 98–67, 97 Stat. 383).

Under those regulations, any person that is required to use certain forms, including Form W–2 (Wage and Tax Statement) or W–2P (Statement for Recipients of Annuities, Pensions, Retired Pay, or IRA Payments), for the purpose of making a return must provide the information required by such form on magnetic media, unless (a) the person is a low-volume filer with respect to the return or (b) the person is granted a waiver with respect to the return by the Internal Revenue Service. Failure to file a return on magnetic media when required to do so by the regulations is treated as a failure to file the return and may subject the person to the corresponding penalty.

Returns required on Form W–2 or W–2P for calendar year 1986 may generally be filed on the prescribed paper form if fewer than 500 returns were required to be filed on that form for the preceding calendar year. Returns required on such forms for calendar years after 1986 may generally be filed on the prescribed paper form if fewer than 250 returns were required to be filed on that form for the preceding calendar year. The regulations also provide that a person required to file a return on magnetic media may receive a waiver from such requirement in appropriate circumstances upon a showing of hardship.

In addition, under the regulations, persons subject to the magnetic media requirement are required to obtain prior consent to the use of the magnetic medium on which the information is to be submitted. The regulations provide that applications for consent to the use of a magnetic medium and requests for waiver generally must be filed at least 90 days before the filing of the first return for which the consent or waiver is requested. In the case of returns on Forms W–2 and W–2P filed in 1987 and 1988, however, the application for consent or request for waiver is due no later than June 30 of the preceding year. The regulations contained in this document extend the due date for applications for consent and requests for waivers to July 31, 1986, for Forms W–2 and W–2P to be filed in 1987.

EXECUTIVE ORDER 12291, REGULATORY FLEXIBILITY ACT AND PAPERWORK REDUCTION ACT

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has determined that this rule is not a major rule as defined in Executive Order 12291 and that a Regulatory Impact Analysis therefore is not required. A general notice of proposed rulemaking is not required by 5 U.S.C. 553 for final regulations subject to 5 U.S.C. 553(b)(B). Accordingly, the final regulations do not constitute regulations subject to the Regulatory Flexibility Act (5 U.S.C. chapter 6).

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal author of these regulations is C. Scott McLeod of the Legislation and Regulations Division of the Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, personnel from other offices of the Internal Revenue Service and Treasury Department participated in developing the regulations on matters of both substance and style.

LIST OF SUBJECTS IN 26 CFR 301

Adoption of amendments to the regulations

Accordingly, 26 CFR Part 301 is amended as follows:

PROCEDURE AND ADMINISTRATION REGULATIONS

(26 CFR Part 301)

Paragraph 1. The authority citation for section 301.6601–2 continues to read as follows:

Authority: 26 U.S.C. 7805. * * * Section 301.6601–2 also issued under 26 U.S.C. 6011(e).

Par. 2. Section 301.6011–2 is amended as follows:

1. Paragraph(b)(2)(i) is amended by removing "June 30, 1986" and by adding in its place "July 31, 1986."

2. Paragraph(c)(4)(i)(A) is amended by removing "June 30, 1986" and by adding in its place "July 31, 1986."

This Treasury decision merely extends the due date for certain requests for waiver or approval of a magnetic medium. For this reason, it is found unnecessary to issue this Treasury decision with notice and public procedure under subsection (b) of section 553 of title 5 of the United States Code or subject to the effective date limitation of subsection (d) of that section.

JAMES I. OWENS,
Acting Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

Approved AUGUST 11, 1986.

J. ROGER MENTZ,
Assistant Secretary of the Treasury.

Section 6401.—Amounts Treated as Overpayments

Ct. D. 2034

OF THE
UNITED STATES
No. 84–1686

Sorenson v. Secretary of the Treasury et al.
[U.S.]
On Writ of Certiorari to the United States
Court of Appeals
For the Ninth Circuit

[January 15, 1986]

Syllabus

The Internal Revenue Code (IRC) allows an individual responsible for the support of a child living with him a credit against income taxes due equal to a certain percentage of so much of earned income as does not exceed a specified amount. If the credit exceeds tax liability, the excess is considered "an overpayment" of tax under IRC §6401(b). Section 6402(a) provides for a refund of "any overpayment" to the person who made it. Section 6402(c) requires the amount of "any overpayment" to be reduced by the amount of any past-due child-support payments assigned to a State. Section 464 of the Social Security Act (SSA) directs the Secretary of the Treasury to "intercept" tax refunds payable to persons who have failed to meet child-support obligations that have been assigned to a State. When petitioner's husband fell behind in support payments for a child of a previous marriage who was in the custody of his former wife, the latter, upon applying for welfare benefits from the State of Washington, assigned to the State, as required by the Aid to Families with Dependent Children program, her right to collect the unpaid child-support payments. Petitioner and her husband filed a joint federal income tax return for 1981 in which all income was attributable to petitioner's wages and unemployment compensation benefits and in which they anticipated a refund based in part on an earned-income credit. The Internal Revenue Service, however, notified them that a certain amount of the anticipated refund was being retained, under the authority of the tax-intercept law, and would be paid over to the State of Washington. Petitioner then filed a class action in Federal District Court, seeking a declaration that §464 of the SSA did not reach a refund attributable to an excess earned-income credit. The District Court granted summary judgment for the Government, and the Court of Appeals affirmed.

Held: An excess earned-income credit can properly be intercepted under the applicable statutes. Pp. 7–14.

(a) The IRC's treatment of earned-income credits supports the Government's position. The refundability of that credit is inseparable from its classification as an overpayment of tax. It is an "overpayment" for purposes not only of §6402(a), but also for purposes of §6402(c). Eligibility for an earned-income credit does not depend upon an individual's actually having paid any tax. The IRC's classification of the credit as an "overpayment" to be refunded is similarly independent of the individual's actually having made any payment. To the extent an excess credit is "payable" to an individual, it is payable as if it were a refund of tax paid. Pp. 7–12.

(b) There is no support for petitioner's claim that Congress did not intend the tax-intercept to reach excess earned-income credits. Although Congress never mentioned the earned-income credit in enacting the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1981, which added §6402(c) to the IRC, it must have been aware, when it provided in §6402(c) that "any overpayment" to be refunded shall be reduced by the amount of any past-due child support, that this would include refunds attributable to excess earned-income credits. And, although the goals of the earned-income credit—to reduce the disincentive to work caused by social security taxes on earned income, to stimulate the economy by funneling funds to persons likely to spend the money immediately, and to provide for relief for low-income families hurt by rising food and energy prices—are important, it cannot be said that Congress concluded that they outweigh the goals served by the subsequently enacted tax-intercept program—securing child support from absent parents and reducing the number of families on welfare. Pp. 12–14.

752 F.2d 1433, affirmed.

BLACKMUN, J., delivered the opinion of the Court, in which BURGER, C. J., and BRENNAN, WHITE, MARSHALL, POWELL, REHNQUIST, and O'CONNOR, JJ., joined. STEVENS, J., filed a dissenting opinion.

JUSTICE BLACKMUN delivered the opinion of the Court.

The Internal Revenue Code and the Social Security Act direct the Secretary of the Treasury to "intercept" certain tax refunds payable to persons who have failed to meet child-support obligations. In this case, the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit ruled that payments involving earned-income credits could be intercepted. 752 F.2d 1433 (1985). We granted certiorari, 472 U.S. —— (1985), because this ruling was in conflict with decisions of the Courts of Appeals for the Second and Tenth Circuits. See Rucker v. Secretary of the Treasury, 751 F. 2d 351 (CA10 1984); Nelson v. Regan, 731 F. 2d 105 (CA2), cert. denied sub nom. Manning v. Nelson, 469 U. S. —— (1984).

Stanley Sorenson, the husband of petitioner Marie Sorenson, was legally obligated to make child-support payments for a child of his previous marriage who was in the custody of his former wife. Mr. Sorenson was unemployed because of a disability and fell behind on those support payments. His former wife applied for welfare benefits from the State of Washington. Since 1975, the program for Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) has required, as a condition of eligibility, that applicants for welfare assign to the State concerned any right to child-support payments that has accrued at the time of assignment. Pub. L. 93–647, §101(c)(5)(C), 88 Stat. 2359, 42 U.S.C. §602(a)(26)(A).[1] Thus, Stanley Sorenson's former wife turned over to the State her right to collect the payments Mr. Sorenson had failed to make.

Stanley and Marie Sorenson also had their own dependent child living with them. They thus were potentially eligible to receive an earned-income credit. For the calendar year 1981, the time relevant to this lawsuit, §43 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, as amended, provided that an individual responsible for the support of a child living with him was allowed "as a credit against the tax imposed . . . for the taxable year an amount equal to 10 percent of so much of the earned income for the taxable year as does not exceed $5,000." As the amount of the taxpayer's earned income increased, the amount of the credit decreased, reaching zero when the taxpayer's adjusted gross income reached $10,000.[2]

Unlike certain other credits, which can be used only to offset tax that would otherwise be owed, the earned-income credit is "refundable." Thus, if an individual's earned-income credit exceeds his tax liability, the excess amount is "considered an overpayment" of tax under §6401(b), as it then read, of the 1954 Code.[3] Subject to specified setoffs, §6402(a) directs the Secretary to credit or refund "any overpayment" to the person who made it.[4] An individual who is entitled to an earned-income credit that exceeds the amount of tax he owes thereby receives the difference as if he had overpaid his tax in that amount.

In February 1982, petitioner and her husband timely filed a joint federal income tax return for the calendar year 1981. Petitioner had worked during part of that year, and all the Sorenson family income for the year was attributable to her wages and unemployment compensation benefits. By the return so filed, the Sorensons anticipated a refund of $1408.90, consisting in part of excess withholding on petitioner's wages and in part of an earned-income credit. The Internal Revenue Service, however, notified the Sorensons that $1,132 of the anticipated refund was being retained, under the authority granted it by the tax-intercept law, and would be paid over to the State of Washington because that State had been assigned the right to collect Mr. Sorenson's unpaid child-support obligations. See Second Declaration of Peter Greenfield, Exh. B, Sorenson v. Secretary of the Treasury, No. C82–441C (WD Wash.).

The tax-intercept law essentially directs the Secretary to give priority to a State's claim for recoupment of welfare payments made to a family who failed to receive child support, see §402(a)(26)(A) of the Social Security Act, as amended, 42 U.S.C. §602(a)(26)(A), over an individual's claim for refund of tax overpayment. See §6402(a), as amended, of the 1954 Code. The intercept law originally was enacted as part of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1981 (OBRA), Pub. L. 97–35, §2331, 95 Stat. 860. First, OBRA §2331(a) added §464 to the Social Security Act, 42 U.S.C. §664. That section directs the Secretaries of the Treasury and of Health and Human Services to establish a scheme by which a State is to notify the Secretary of the Treasury of persons who owe past-due child-support payments that have been assigned to it, and directs the Secretary of the Treasury to intercept tax-refund payments that would otherwise be paid to those persons:

> "Upon receiving notice from a State agency administering [an AFDC plan] . . . that a named individual owes past-due support which has been assigned to such State pursuant to section 402(a)(26), the Secretary of the Treasury shall determine whether any amounts, as refunds of Federal taxes paid, are payable to such individual (regardless of whether such individual filed a tax return as a married or unmarried individual). If the Secretary of the Treasury finds that any such amount is payable, he shall withhold from such refunds an amount equal to the past-due support, and pay such amount to the State agency (together with notice of the individual's home address) for distribution in accordance with section 457(b)(3)." §464(a), 42 U.S.C. §664(a).[5]

Section §2331(c) of OBRA amended the Internal Revenue Code. It added a new subsection to the provision governing the Secretary of the Treasury's authority to refund overpayments to taxpayers. The new subsection, §6402(c), requires the Secretary to withhold from the refund otherwise due the taxpayer the amount owed the State in past-due child support and to remit the amount withheld to the State:

> "The amount of any overpayment to be refunded to the person making the overpayment shall be reduced by the

[1] Section 402(a)(26)(A) of the Social Security Act, as amended, 42 U.S.C. §602(a)(26)(A), requires the assignment to the State of "any rights to support from any other person such applicant may have (i) in his own behalf or in behalf of any other family member for whom the applicant is applying for or receiving aid, and (ii) which have accrued at the times such assignment is executed."

[2] By the Tax Reform Act of 1984, Pub. L. 98–369, §471(c)(1), 98 Stat. 826, Congress redesignated §43 as §32. By §1042 of that Act, 98 Stat. 1043, it raised the earned-income percentage from 10 to 11 percent, the maximum amount of the credit from $500 to $550, and the eligibility ceiling from $10,000 to $11,000.

[3] At the time relevant to this lawsuit, §6401(b) of the 1954 Code provided, in pertinent part:

> "If the amount allowable as credits under section 31 (relating to tax withheld on wages), and 39 (relating to certain uses of gasoline, special fuels, and lubricating oil), and 43 (relating to earned income credit), exceeds the tax imposed by subtitle A (reduced by the credits allowable under subpart A of part IV of subchapter A of chapter 1, other than the credits allowable under sections 31, 39, and 43), the amount of such excess shall be considered an overpayment."

Section 6401(b) was amended by the Tax Reform Act of 1984. section 474(r)(36) of that Act, 98 Stat. 846, designated existing §6401(b) as §6401(b)(1) and substituted the following language for the language quoted above:

> "If the amount allowable as credits under subpart C of part IV of subchapter A of chapter 1 (relating to refundable credits) exceeds the tax imposed by subtitle A (reduced by the credits allowable under subparts A, B, and D of such part IV), the amount of such excess shall be considered an overpayment."

The earned-income credit remains refundable under the revised provision, since it is within the category of "refundable credits." See Tax Reform Act of 1984, §471, 98 Stat. 825.

[4] The version of §6402(a) in effect for the tax year 1981 provided:

> "In the case of any overpayment, the Secretary, within the applicable period of limitations, may credit the amount of such overpayment, including any interest allowed thereon, against any liability in respect of an internal revenue tax on the part of the person who made the overpayment and shall, subject to subsection (c), refund any balance to such person."

The question presented by this case is the scope of subsection (c)—the provision governing the offset of past-due child-support payments.

Section 2653(b)(2) of the Spending Reduction Act of 1984, 98 Stat. 1155, amended §6402(a). Under amended §6402(a), the Secretary's authority, with respect to refunds payable after Dec. 31, 1985, and before Jan. 1, 1988, see §2653(c) of the 1984 Act, 98 Stat. 1156, is restricted by a new subsection (d) as well as by subsection (c) of §6402. Section 2653(b)(1) of the 1984 Act, 98 Stat. 1154, added the new subsection (d). Section 6402(d) requires the offset of debts owed to various federal agencies. Under §6402(d)(2), the collection of past-due child-support payments pursuant to §6402(c) has priority over the collection of debts covered by §6402(d).

> amount of any past-due support (as defined in section 464(c) of the Social Security Act) owed by that person of which the Secretary has been notified by a State in accordance with section 464 of the Social Security Act. The Secretary shall remit the amount by which the overpayment is so reduced to the State to which such support has been assigned and notify the person making the overpayment that so much of the overpayment as was necessary to satisfy his obligation for past-due support has been paid to the State. This subsection shall be applied to an overpayment prior to its being credited to a person's future liability for an internal revenue tax."

After negotiations concerning the status of tax refunds in community property States such as Washington—issues that are not germane to the question now presented to this Court—the Secretary ultimately withheld only half of the refund increment the Sorensons claimed. Petitioner then filed a class action in the United States District Court for the Western District of Washington seeking, among other things, a declaration that §464 of the Social Security Act did not reach a refund attributable to an excess earned-income credit. The District Court rejected the Secretary's jurisdictional arguments, which were renewed on appeal to the Court of Appeals but which are not pressed in this Court. See Brief for Respondents 5, n. 1. But it agreed with the Secretary's arguments on the merits and granted summary judgment for the Government. 557 F. Supp. 729 (1982).

The Court of Appeals affirmed that judgment. 752 F.2d 1433 (CA9 1985). It rejected petitioner's statutory construction arguments, and held that, since the Code expressly defined excess earned-income credits as "overpayments," and disbursed those excess credits to recipients through the income tax refund process, the credits were "payable 'as' refunds of federal taxes paid" and therefore could be intercepted. Id., at 1441 (emphasis in original). Congress used the broad terms "any amounts" and "any overpayment" in the tax-intercept law and gave no indication that it intended to exclude earned-income credit payments from these terms.

The Court of Appeals also rejected petitioner's argument that the Secretary's position conflicted with Congress' intention to provide benefits to the poor through the earned-income credit. First, the legislative history of §43 did not suggest that the earned-income credit was intended primarily as a type of welfare grant; rather, it was meant to negate the disincentive to work caused by social security taxes. Since the earned-income credit was payable as a lump sum, it was more like excess withholding, which was clearly reachable by the intercept program, than it was like wages, a portion of which Congress exempted from the assessment and collection process. See 752 F.2d, at 1443, n. 1. Second, had Congress intended to exempt earned-income credit payments from the intercept program, it could have done so expressly. Instead, it provided that any amount payable through the federal tax-refund process might be intercepted. "In the face of this rather clear statutory mandate," said the Court of Appeals, "we conclude that we are not free to speculate that Congress intended otherwise." Id., at 1443.

II

Petitioner advances two arguments to support her claim that an excess earned-income credit cannot be intercepted. First, she claims that the language and structure of the interlocking statutory provisions that make up the intercept law exclude an earned-income credit from its reach: excess earned-income credits are neither "overpayments" nor "refunds of Federal taxes paid," and only those items are subject to interception. Second, she claims that permitting interception of an earned-income credit would frustrate Congress' aims in providing the credit, and thus that Congress could not have intended the intercept law to reach earned-income credits. We find neither argument persuasive.

A

The Internal Revenue Code's treatment of earned-income credits supports the Government's position. An individual can receive the amount by which his entitlement to an earned-income credit exceeds his tax liability only because §6401(b) of the Code defines that amount as an "overpayment," and §6402 provides a mechanism for disbursing overpayments, namely, the income tax refund process. The refundability of the earned-income credit is thus inseparable from its classification as an overpayment of tax. Petitioner therefore acknowledges that the excess earned-income credit is an "overpayment" for purposes of §6402(a), the general provision that authorizes all tax refunds. See n. 4, supra. If it were not, the Secretary would lack authorization for refunding it to her. She claims, however, that while an excess earned-income credit is an "overpayment" for purposes of §6402(a), it is not an "overpayment" for purposes of §6402(c), which requires that the "amount of any overpayment . . . shall be reduced by the amount of any past-due support" assigned to the State.

The normal rule of statutory construction assumes that " 'identical words used in different parts of the same act are intended to have the same meaning.' " Helvering v. Stockholms Enskilda Bank, 293 U.S. 84, 87 (1934), quoting Atlantic Cleaners & Dyers v. United States, 286 U.S. 427, 433 (1932). That the Internal Revenue Code includes an explicit definition of "overpayment" in the same subchapter strengthens the presumption. And that both subsections concern the tax-refund treatment of "overpayment[s]" is especially damaging to any claim "that the words, though in the same act, are found in such dissimilar connections as to warrant the conclusion that they were employed in the different parts of the act with different intent." Stockholms Enskilda Bank, 293 U.S., at 87.

Petitioner and the two Courts of Appeals that have excluded excess earned-income credits from the definition of "overpayment" used in §6402(c) offer two bases for their position. First, they believe that §6402(c) limits §6401(b)'s broad definition "by [using] the phrase 'overpayment to be refunded to the person making the overpayment.' " Nelson v. Regan, 731 F.2d, at 111; see Rucker v. Secretary of the Treasury, 751 F.2d, at 356. Not all overpayments, they suggest, are refunded to persons who "made" them, since some—those consisting of earned-income credits—may be refunded to persons who actually have not paid any tax. We disagree. All refunds made by the Secretary under §6402(a) are paid to "the person who made the overpayment." The phrase merely identifies the person entitled to the refund; it does not restrict the nature of the refund itself. Petitioner must characterize herself as a person who has "made" an overpayment; otherwise, she cannot claim her excess earned-income credit. The phrase in §6402(c) on which petitioner and the Second and Tenth Circuits relied is virtually identical to the phrase used in §6402(a). Since the words cannot have the limiting effect petitioner proposes when used in §6402(a), no justification exists for giving them such a construction in §6402(c).

[5] Section 464(a) was amended by the Child Support Enforcement Amendments of 1984, Pub. L. 98–378, §21.98 Stat. 1322, which authorized the interception and diversion of refunds for the benefit of non-AFDC children as well as children receiving AFDC benefits. The Amendments also provided additional procedural protections for refund claimants whose refunds are intercepted.

Second, petitioner and the Second and Tenth Circuits perceive a tension between §6401(b) and §6402(a)'s treatment of excess earned-income credits and §464(a)'s treatment of interceptable amounts. As used in those Code sections, "overpayment" includes more than "refunds of Federal taxes paid," the phrase used in the Social Security Act. Since §464 and §6402(c) were enacted simultaneously as part of OBRA, petitioner and the two Circuits believe that §6402(c) should be harmonized with §464 rather than with §6401(b) and 6402(a). See Rucker v. Secretary of the Treasury, 751 F.2d, at 357; Nelson v. Regan, 731 F.2d., at 111.

This second argument, it seems to us, misperceives the structure of the tax-intercept law, and manufactures a tension that need not exist. OBRA's placement of provisions regarding interception in both Acts reflects a division of functions. The tax-intercept program lies at the intersection of the Social Security Act's concern in subchapter IV, part D, with child support, and the Internal Revenue Code's concern in chapter 65, subchapter A with the treatment of credits in the tax-refund process. Section 464 addresses the concerns of the States that have received AFDC-related grants. It defines past-due child support, authorizes procedures by which the States can notify the Secretary of the Treasury of their entitlement to recover such past-due support, and directs the Secretary to aid the States, through his control over the tax-refund process, in recouping that support. Sections 6401 and 6402 addresses the operation of the tax-refund process under the Internal Revenue Code. They define the status of certain tax credits, set up a mechanism for disbursing refunds, and direct the Secretary to divert certain amounts from the refund process. To the extent that the tax-intercept law regulates the relationship of the Secretary of Treasury to refund claimants, it does so through §6402, and not through a provision that governs the Secretary's relationship to State agencies.

Petitioner, however, views §6402(c)'s reference to §464 as indicating that §464(a) is meant to be read into §6402(c) as a limitation on the Secretary's intercept powers. This argument depends on a somewhat strained construction of §6402(c)'s statement that "[t]he amount of any overpayment to be refunded to the person making the overpayment shall be reduced by the amount of any past-due support . . . owed by that person of which the Secretary has been notified by a State in accordance with section 464 of the Social Security Act." Petitioner claims that "[t]he words 'in accordance with section 464 of the Social Security Act' . . . do not modify 'has been notified by a State,' as one might initially assume. Rather they belatedly modify the words 'shall be reduced.'" Brief for Petitioner 18. In petitioner's view, her construction would lead to the conclusion that a refund can be reduced only to the extent that the refund represents a refund of tax actually paid, since that is all §464(a) permits.

We disagree with both petitioner's construction of §6402(c) and her reading of §464(a). First, it seems far more plausible that the words modify the nearest verb. If they are given this more natural reading, then §6402(c) directs the Secretary to intercept only that amount which properly is classified as past-due support and of which he properly has been notified.

But even if the reference in §6402(c) to §464 were read to refer solely to §464(a),[6] nothing in that subsection exempts excess earned-income credits from interception. Petitioner and the Second and Tenth Circuits recast their argument regarding the meaning of "overpayment" by contending that the amount of refund that is attributable to an excess earned-income credit is not a "refun[d] of Federal taxes paid," and that §464(a) permits interception of only "amounts, as refunds of Federal taxes paid":

> "A refund of federal taxes is a repayment of money paid by a taxpayer in excess of that taxpayer's liability. Although the earned income credit is given effect through the income tax return, the credit is not a tax refund because eligibility for the credit is not contingent upon payment of any federal income tax." Rucker v. Secretary of the Treasury, 751 F. 2d, at 356.

But just as eligibility for an earned-income credit does not depend upon an individual's actually having paid any tax, the Code's classification of the credit as an "overpayment" to be refunded by similarly independent of the individual's actually having made any payment. Cf. I.R.C. §6401(c). The Ninth Circuit correctly held that, to the extent an excess earned-income credit is "payable" to an individual, it is payable as if it were a refund of tax paid. 752 F. 2d, at 1441. Section 464(a)'s reference to the tax-refund process is best understood as a directive to the Secretary that he follow the procedures established by the Internal Revenue Code for calculating and disbursing refunds, rather than as an attempt implicitly to redefine terms given special meaning by the Code.

Nor do we agree with petitioner's claim that Congress did not intend the intercept program to reach excess earned-income credits. Petitioner and the Government agree that Congress never mentioned the earned-income credit in enacting OBRA. See Brief for Petitioner 24; Tr. of Oral Arg. 21. But it defies belief that Congress was unaware, when it provided in §6402(c) that "any overpayment to be refunded . . . shall be reduced by the amount of any past-due support" (emphasis added), that this would include refunds attributable to excess earned-income credits. Congress had previously expressly defined an excess earned-income credit as an "overpayment," in §6401(b) of the Internal Revenue Code—the section immediately preceding the section to which Congress added the intercept provision.[7]

What petitioner and the Second and Tenth Circuits are really claiming is that the intercept law should be read narrowly to avoid frustrating the goals of the earned-income credit program. The earned-income credit was enacted to reduce the disincentive to work caused by the imposition of social security taxes on earned income (welfare payments are not similarly taxed), to stimulate the economy by funneling funds to persons likely to spend the money immediately, and to provide relief for low-income families hurt by rising food and energy prices.[8] Each is an undeniably important objective. It is impossible, however, for us to say that these goals outweigh the goals served by the subsequently enacted tax-intercept program—securing child support from absent parents whenever possible and reducing the number of families on welfare.[9] Congress of course could conclude that families eligible for earned-income credits have a more compelling claim to the funds involved than do either the States or non-AFDC families. But it is equally clear that Congress could have decided that the more pressing need was to alleviate the "devasting consequences for children and the taxpayers" of the epidemic of nonsupport. See Hearings before the Senate Committee on Finance on Spending Reduction Proposals, 97th Cong., 1st Sess., pt. 1, p. 34 (1981) (statement of Secretary Schweiker).[10]

[6] In light of Congress' specific reference to §646(c) earlier is §6402(c), it seems particularly likely that Congress would have referred subsection (a) of §464 expressly had it meant "in accordance with §464(a)" rather than in accordance with the entire scheme for identifying past-due support payments and notifying the Federal Government of such obligations set out in §464.

The ordering of competing social policies is a quintessentially legislative function. In light of Congress' decision to direct the interception of any overpayment otherwise refundable to a taxpayer, the Ninth Circuit correctly refused to "speculate that Congress intended otherwise." 752 F. 2d, at 1443. Its judgment, accordingly, is affirmed.

It is so ordered.

Rev. Rul. 86-112

In Rev. Rul. 84-80, 1984-1 C.B. 275, Rev. Rul. 84-180, 1984-2 C.B. 314, Rev. Rul. 85-178, 1985-2 C.B. 338, and Rev. Rul. 86-30, 1986-8 I.R.B. 23, the Internal Revenue Service listed several states that revised their limited partnership statutes following the promulgation of the Revised Uniform Limited Partnership Act. The Service determined that the legislation enacted by those states corresponds to the Uniform Limited Partnership Act ("ULPA") for purposes of section 301.7701-2 of the Procedure and Administration Regulations.

The Service has determined that the following additional states have enacted legislation that, as of the effective date, corresponds to ULPA for purposes of section 301.7701-2 of the regulations:

KANSAS: Kan. Stat. Ann. sections 56-1a101 through 56-1a601 (1983) effective January 1, 1984.

NEW JERSEY: N.J. State. Ann. sections 42:2A-1 through 42:2A-1 through 42:2A-72 (West Supp. 1985) effective January 1, 1985.

[7] That Congress could not have viewed the earned-income credit as immune from seizure to satisfy child-support obligations is suggested by a number of other factors as well. As the Government notes, once an individual has actually received his tax-refund payment, the proceeds of that refund, even if they reflect an earned-income credit component, are subject to levy under §6305 of the Code. The fact that the Government may not have used this cumbersome procedure, see Tr. of Oral Arg. 23-25, reflects the economic inefficiency of locating and pursuing a payment that cannot exceed $550 rather than a lack of authority to do so. And certainly no one has suggested that the former spouse to whom a support obligation not assigned to the State is owed would be precluded from employing the judicial process to attach and seize the credit once the recipient had received it.

[10] Even if Congress' sole concern were providing funds to the neediest children involved, it is far from certain that all children living in households receiving refunds of earned-income credits are needier than all children owed past-due child support. When the earned-income credit is claimed at the end of the tax year (an individual can, pursuant to §3507 of the Code, receive an advance on his earned-income credit over the course of the year), it may in fact go to a recipient who is not currently needy. For example, an individual, with a dependent child, who was unemployed during most of 1981 and therefore earned only $5000, but found a job paying $20,000 per year on January 1, 1982, would have been able to claim in a tax return filed in April 1982 an earned-income credit of $500, despite the fact that, in late spring 1982, when the refund check ultimately arrived, the individual might no longer be needy.

laws of that State, is liable to tax therein by reason of his domicile, residence, place of management, place of incorporation or any other criterion of a similar nature, but in the case of an estate or trust, only to the extent that income derived by such estate or trust is liable to tax in that State, either in its hands or in the hands of its beneficiaries.

1. For the purposes of this Convention, the term "permanent establishment" means a fixed place of business through which the business of a resident of a Contracting State is wholly or partly carried on.

2. The term "permanent establishment" shall include especially:

8. The fact that a company which is a resident of a Contracting State controls or is controlled by a company which is a resident of the other Contracting State, or which carries on business in that other State (whether through a permanent establishment or otherwise), shall not constitute either company a permanent establishment of the other.

9. For the purposes of the Convention, the provisions of this Article shall be applied in determining whether any person has a permanent establishment in any State.

If the resident carries on, or has carried on, business as aforesaid, the business profits of the resident may be taxed in the other State but only so much of them as is attributable to that permanent establishment.

2. Subject to the provisions of paragraph 3, where a resident of a Contracting State carries on business in the other Contracting State through a permanent establishment situated therein, there shall in each Contracting State be attributed to that permanent establishment the business profits which it might be expected to make if it were a distinct and separate person engaged in the same or similar activities under the same or similar conditions and dealing wholly independently with the resident and with any other person related to the resident (within the meaning of paragraph 2 of Article IX (Related Persons)).

3. In determining the business profits of a permanent establishment, there shall be allowed as deductions expenses which are incurred for the purposes of the permanent establishment, including executive and general administrative expenses so incurred, whether in the State in which the permanent establishment is situated or elsewhere. Nothing in this paragraph shall require a Contracting State to allow the deduction of any expenditure which, by reason of its nature, is not generally allowed as a deduction under the taxation laws of that State.

4. No business profits shall be attributed to a permanent establishment of a resident of a Contracting State by reason of the use thereof for either the mere purchase of goods or merchandise or the mere provision of executive, managerial or administrative facilities or services for such resident.

5. For the purposes of the preceding paragraphs, the business profits to be attributed to a permanent establishment shall be determined by the same method year by year unless there is good and sufficient reason to the contrary.

6. Where business profits include items of income which are dealt with separately in other Articles of this Convention, then the provisions of those Articles shall not be affected by the provisions of this Article.

7. For the purposes of the Convention, the business profits attributable to a permanent establishment shall include only those profits derived from the assets or activities of the permanent establishment.

ARTICLE VIII

Transportation

1. Notwithstanding the provisions of Articles VII (Business Profits) and XIII (Gains), profits derived by a resident of a Contracting State from the operation of ships or aircraft in international traffic, and gains derived by a resident of a Contracting State from the alienation of ships or aircraft used principally in international traffic, shall be exempt from tax in the other Contracting State.

2. For the purposes of this Convention, profits derived by a resident of a Contracting State from the operation of ships or aircraft in international traffic include profits from:

(a) The rental of ships or aircraft operated in international traffic;

(b) The use, maintenance or rental of containers (including trailers and related equipment for the transport of containers) used in international traffic; and

(c) The rental of ships, aircraft or containers (including trailers and related equipment for the transport of containers) provided that such profits are incidental to profits referred to in paragraph 1, 2(a) or 2(b).

3. Notwithstanding the provisions of Article VII (Business Profits), profits derived by a resident of a Contracting State from a voyage of a ship where the principal purpose of the voyage is to transport passengers or property between places in the other Contracting State may be taxed in that other State.

4. Notwithstanding the provisions of Articles VII (Business Profits) and XII (Royalties), profits of a resident of a Contracting State engaged in the operation of motor vehicles or a railway as a common carrier or a contract carrier derived from:

(a) The transportation of passengers or property between a point outside the other Contracting State and any other point; or

(b) The rental of motor vehicles (including trailers) or railway rolling stock, or the use, maintenance or rental of containers (including trailers and related equipment for the transport of containers) used to transport passengers or property between a point outside the other Contracting State and any other point shall be exempt from tax in that other Contracting State.

5. The provisions of paragraphs 1, 3 and 4 shall also apply to profits or gains referred to in those paragraphs derived by a resident of a Contracting State from the participation in a pool, a joint business or an international operating agency.

6. Notwithstanding the provisions of Article XII (Royalties), profits derived by a resident of a Contracting State from the use, maintenance or rental of railway rolling stock, motor vehicles, trailers or containers (including trailers and related equipment for the transport of containers) used in the other Contracting State for a period or periods not expected to exceed in the aggregate 183 days in any twelve-month period shall be exempt from tax in the other Contracting State except to the extent that such profits are attributable to a permanent establishment in the other State and liable to tax in the other State by reason of Article VII (Business Profits).

ARTICLE IX

Related persons

1. Where a person in a Contracting State and a person in the other Contracting State are related and where the arrangements between them differ from those which would be made between unrelated persons, each State may adjust the amount of the income, loss or tax payable to reflect the income, deductions, credits or allowances which would, but for those arrangements, have been taken into account in computing such income, loss or tax.

2. For the purposes of this Article, a person shall be deemed to be related to another person if either person participates directly or indirectly in the management or control of the other, or if any third person or persons participate directly or indirectly in the management or control of both.

3. Where an adjustment is made or to be made by a Contracting State in accordance with paragraph 1, the other

Contracting State shall (notwithstanding any time or procedural limitations in the domestic law of that other State) make a corresponding adjustment to the income, loss or tax of the related person in that other State if:

(a) It agrees with the first-mentioned adjustment; and

(b) Within six years from the end of the taxable year to which the first-mentioned adjustment relates, the competent authority of the other State has been notified of the first-mentioned adjustment.

4. In the event that the notification referred to in paragraph 3 is not given within the time period referred to therein, and if the person to whom the first-mentioned adjustment relates has not received, at least six months prior to the expiration of such time period, notification of such adjustment from the Contracting State which has made or is to make such adjustment that State shall, notwithstanding the provisions of paragraph 1, not make the first-mentioned adjustment to the extent that such adjustment would give rise to double taxation.

5. The provisions of paragraphs 3 and 4 shall not apply in the case of fraud, willful default or neglect or gross negligence.

ARTICLE X

Dividends

1. Dividends paid by a company which is a resident of a Contracting State to a resident of the other Contracting State may be taxed in that other state.

2. However, such dividends may also be taxed in the Contracting State of which the company paying the dividends is a resident and according to the laws of that State; but if a resident of the other Contracting State is the beneficial owner of such dividends, the tax so charged shall not exceed:

(a) 10 per cent of the gross amount of the dividends if the beneficial owner is a company which owns at least 10 per cent of the voting stock of the company paying the dividends;

(b) 15 per cent of the gross amount of the dividends in all other cases.

This paragraph shall not affect the taxation of the company in respect of the profits out of which the dividends are paid.

3. The term "dividends" as used in this Article means income from shares or other rights, not being debt-claims, participating in profits, as well as income subjected to the same taxation treatment as income from shares by the taxation laws of the State of which the company making the distribution is a resident.

4. The provisions of paragraph 2 shall not apply if the beneficial owner of the dividends, being a resident of a Contracting State, carries on business in the other Contracting State of which the company paying the dividends is a resident, through a permanent establishment situated therein, or performs in that other State independent personal services from a fixed base situated therein, and the holding in respect of which the dividends are paid is effectively connected with such permanent establishment of fixed base. In such case, the provisions of Article VII (Business Profits) or Article XIV (Independent Personal Services), as the case may be, shall apply.

5. Where a company is a resident of a Contracting State, the other contracting State may not impose any tax on the dividends paid by the company, except insofar as such dividends are paid to a resident of that other State or insofar as the holding in respect of which the dividends are paid is effectively connected with a permanent establishment or a fixed base situated in that other State, nor subject the company's undistributed profits to a tax, even if the dividends paid or the undistributed profits consist wholly or partly of profits or income arising in such other State.

6. Nothing in this Convention shall be construed as preventing a Contracting State from imposing a tax on the earnings of a company attributable to permanent establishments in that State, in addition to the tax which would be chargeable on the earnings of a company which is a resident of that State, provided that any additional tax so imposed shall not exceed 10 per cent of the amount of such earnings which have not been subjected to such additional tax in previous taxation years. For the purposes of this paragraph, the term "earnings" means the amount by which the business profits attributable to permanent establishments in a Contracting State (including gains from the alienation of property forming part of the business property of such permanent establishments) in a year and previous years exceeds the sum of:

(a) Business losses attributable to such permanent establishments (including losses from the alienation of property forming part of the business property of such permanent establishments) in such year and previous years;

(b) All taxes, other than the additional tax referred to in this paragraph, imposed on such profits in that State;

(c) The profits reinvested in that State, provided that where that State is Canada, such amount shall be determined in accordance with the existing provisions of the law of Canada regarding the computation of the allowance in respect to investment in property in Canada, and any subsequent modification of those provisions which shall not affect the general principle hereof; and

(d) Five hundred thousand Canadian dollars ($500,000) or its equivalent in United States currency, less any amounts deducted by the company, or by an associated company with respect to the same or a similar business, under this subparagraph (d); for the purposes of this subparagraph (d) a company is associated with another company if one company directly or indirectly controls the other, or both companies are directly or indirectly controlled by the same person or persons, or if the two companies deal with each other not at arm's length.

7. Notwithstanding the provisions of paragraph 5, a Contracting State, other than a Contracting State that imposes the additional tax on earnings referred to in paragraph 6, may tax a dividend paid by a company to the extent that the dividend is attributable to profits earned in taxable years beginning after the date of signature of the Convention if, for the three-year period ending with the close of the company's taxable period preceding the declaration of the dividend (or for such part of that three-year period as the company has been in existence, or for the first taxable year if the dividend was declared in that taxable year), at least 50 per cent of such company's gross income from all sources was included in the computation of the business profits attributable to a permanent establishment which such company had in that State; provided that where a resident of the other Contracting State is the beneficial owner of such dividend any tax so imposed on the dividend shall be subject to the limitations of paragraph 2 or the rules of paragraph 4, as the case may be.

8. Notwithstanding the provisions of paragraph 5, a company which is a resident of Canada and which has income subject to tax in the United States (without regard to the provisions of the Convention) may be liable to the United States accumulated earnings tax and personal holding company tax but only if 50 per cent or more in value of the outstanding voting shares of the company is owned, directly or indirectly, throughout the last half of its taxable year by citizens or residents of the United States (other than citizens of Canada who do not have immigrant status in the United States or who have not been residents in the United States for more than three taxable years) or by residents of a third State.

ARTICLE XI

Interest

1. Interest arising in a Contracting State and paid to a resident of the other Contracting State may be taxed in that other State.

2. However, such interest may also be taxed in the Contracting State in which it arises, and according to the laws of that State; but if a resident of the other Contracting State is the beneficial owner of such interest, the tax so charged shall not exceed 15 per cent of the gross amount of the interest.

3. Notwithstanding the provisions of paragraph 2, interest arising in a Contracting State shall be exempt from tax in that State if:

(a) The interest is beneficially owned by the other Contracting State, a political subdivision or local authority thereof or an instrumentality of such other State, subdivision or authority, and is not subject to tax by that other State;

(b) The interest is beneficially owned by a resident of the other Contracting State and is paid with respect to debt obligations issued at arm's length and guaranteed or insured by that other State or a political subdivision thereof or an instrumentality of such other State or subdivision which is not subject to tax by that other State;

(c) The interest is benefically owned by a resident of the other Contracting State and is paid by the first-mentioned State, a political subdivision or local authority thereof or an instrumentality of such first-mentioned State, subdivision or authority which is not subject to tax by that first-mentioned State;

(d) The interest is beneficially owned by a seller who is a resident of the other Contracting State and is paid by a purchaser in connection with the sale on credit of any equipment, merchandise or services, except where the sale is made between persons dealing with each other not at arm's length; or

(e) The interest is paid by a company created under the laws in force in the other Contracting State will respect to an obligation entered into before the date of signature of this Convention, provided that such interest would have been exempt from tax in the first-mentioned State under Article XII of the 1942 Convention.

4. The term "interest" as used in this Article means income from debt-claims of every kind, whether or not secured by mortgage, and whether or not carrying a right to participate in the debtor's profits, and in particular, income from government securities and income from bonds or debentures, including premiums and prizes attaching to such securities, bonds or debentures, as well as income assimilated to income from money lent by the taxation laws of the Contracting State in which the income arises. However, the term "interest" does not include income dealt with in Article X (Dividends).

5. The provisions of paragraph 2 and 3 shall not apply if the beneficial owner of the interest, being a resident of a Contracting State, carries on business in the other Contracting State in which the interest arises, through a permanent establishment situated therein, or performs in that other State independent personal services from a fixed base situated therein, and the debt-claim in respect of which the interest is paid is effectively connected with such permanent establishment or fixed base. In such case, the provisions of Article VII (Business Profits) or Article XIV (Independent Personal Services), as the case may be, shall apply.

6. For the purposes of this Article, interest shall be deemed to arise in a Contracting State when the payer is that State itself, or a political subdivision, local authority or resident of that State. Where, however, the person paying the interest, whether he is a resident of a Contracting State or not, has in a State other than that of which he is a resident a permanent establishment or a fixed base in connection with which the indebtedness on which the interest is paid was incurred, and such interest is borne by such permanent establishment or fixed base, then such interest shall be deemed to arise in the State in which the permanent establishment or fixed base is situated and not in the State of which the payer is a resident.

7. Where, by reason by a special relationship between the payer and the beneficial owner or between both of them and some other person, the amount of the interest, having regard to the debt-claim for which it is paid, exceeds the amount which would have been agreed upon by the payer and the beneficial owner in the absence of such relationship, the provisions of this Article shall apply only to the last-mentioned amount. In such case, the excess part of the payments shall remain taxable according to the laws of each Contracting State, due regard being had to the other provisions of the Convention.

8. Where a resident of a Contracting State pays interest to a person other than a resident of the other Contracting State, that other State may not impose any tax on such interest except insofar as it arises in that other State or insofar as the debt-claim in respect of which the interest is paid effectively connected with a permanent establishment or a fixed base situated in that other State.

ARTICLE XII

Royalties

1. Royalties arising in a Contracting State and paid to a resident of the other Contracting State may be taxed in that other State.

2. However, such royalties may also be taxed in the Contracting State in which they arise, and according to the laws of that State; but if a resident of the other Contracting State is the beneficial owner of such royalties, the tax so charged shall not exceed 10 per cent of the gross amount of the royalties.

3. Notwithstanding the provisions of paragraph 2, copyright royalties and other like payments in respect of the production or reproduction of any literary, dramatic, musical or artistic work (but not including royalties in respect of motion picture films and works on film or videotape for use in connection with television) arising in a Contracting State and beneficially owned by a resident of the other Contracting State shall be taxable only in that other State.

4. The term "royalties" as used in this Article means payments of any kind received as a consideration for the use of, or the right to use, any copyright of literary, artistic or scientific work (including motion picture films and works on film or videotape for use in connection with television), any patent, trademark, design or model, plan, secret formula or process, or for the use of, or the right to use, tangible personal property or for information concerning industrial, commercial or scientific experience, and, notwithstanding the provisions of Article XIII (Gains), includes gains from the alienation of any intangible property or rights described in this paragraph to the extent that such gains are contingent on the productivity, use or subsequent disposition of such property or rights.

5. The provisions of paragraphs 2 and 3 shall not apply if the beneficial owner of the royalties, being a resident of a Contracting State, carries on business in the other Contracting State in which the royalties arise, through a permanent establishment situated therein, or performs in that other State independent personal services from a fixed base situated therein, and the right or property in respect of which the royalties are paid is effectively connected with such permanent establishment or fixed base. In such case the provisions of Article VII (Business Profits) or Article XIV (Independent Personal Services), as the case may be, shall apply.

6. For the purposes of this Article, royalties shall be deemed to arise in a Contracting State when the payer is that State itself, or a political subdivision, local authority or resident of that State. However:

(a) Except as provided in subparagraph (b), where the person paying the royalties, whether he is a resident of a Contracting State or not, has in a State other than that of which he is a resident a permanent establishment or a fixed base in connection with which the obligation to pay the royalties was incurred, and such royalties are borne by such permanent establishment or fixed base, then such royalties shall be deemed to arise in the State in which the permanent establishment or fixed base is situated and not in the State of which the payer is a resident; and

(b) Where the royalties are for the use of intangible property or tangible personal property in a Contracting State, then such royalties shall be deemed to arise in that State and not in the State of which the payer is a resident.

7. Where, by reason of a special relationship between the payer and the beneficial owner or between both of them and some other person, the amount of the royalties, having regard to the use, right or information for which they are paid, exceeds the amount which would have been agreed upon by the payer and the beneficial owner in the absence of such relationship, the provisons of this Article shall apply only to the last-mentioned amount. In such case, the excess part of the payments shall remain taxable according to the laws of each Contracting State, due regard being had to the other provisions of this Convention.

8. Where a resident of a Contracting State pays royalties to a person other than a resident of the other Contracting State, that other State may not impose any tax on such royalties except insofar as they arise in that other State or insofar as the right or property in respect of which the royalties are paid is effectively connected with a permanent establishment or a fixed base situated in that other State.

ARTICLE XIII

Gains

1. Gains derived by a resident of a Contracting State from the alienation of real property situated in the other Contracting State may be taxed in that other State.

2. Gains from the alienation of personal property forming part of the business property of a permanent establishment which a resident of a Contracting State has or had (within the twelve-month period preceding the date of alienation) in the other Contracting State or of personal property pertaining to a fixed base which is or was available (within the twelve-month period preceding the date of alienation) to a resident of a Contracting State in the other Contracting State for the purpose of performing independent personal services, including such gains from the alienation of such a permanent establishment or of such a fixed base, may be taxed in that other State.

3. Gains derived by a resident of a Contracting State from the alienation of:

(a) Shares forming part of a substantial interest in the capital stock of a company which is not a resident of that State the value of which shares is derived principally from real property situated in the other Contracting State; or

(b) An interest in a partnership, trust or estate the value of which is derived principally from real property situated in the other Contracting State may be taxed in that other State, provided that the laws in force in the first-mentioned State at the time of such alienation would, in comparable circumstances, subject to taxation gains derived by a resident of that other State. For the purposes of this paragraph,

(c) The term "real property" includes the shares of a company the value of which shares is derived principally from real property or an interest in a partnership, trust or estate referred to in subparagraph (b), but does not include property (other than mines, oil or gas wells, rental property or property used for agriculture or forestry) in which the business of the company, partnership, trust or estate is carried on; and

(d) A substantial interest exists when the resident and persons related thereto own 10 per cent or more of the shares of any class of the capital stock of a company.

4. Gains from the alienation of any property other than that referred to in paragraphs 1, 2 and 3 shall be taxable only in the Contracting State of which the alienator is a resident.

5. The provisions of paragraph 4 shall not affect the right of a Contracting State to levy a tax on gains from the alienation of property derived by an individual who is a resident of the other Contracting State if such individual:

(a) Was a resident of the first-mentioned State for 120 months during any period of 20 consecutive years; and

(b) Was a resident of the first-mentioned State at any time during the ten years immediately preceding the alienation of the property.

6. Where an individual (other than a citizen of the United States) who was a resident of Canada became a resident of the United States, in determining his liability to United States taxation in respect of any gain from the alienation of a principal residence in Canada owned by him at the time he ceased to be a resident of Canada, the adjusted basis of such property shall be no less than its fair market value at that time.

7. Where at any time an individual is treated for the purposes of taxation by a Contracting State as having alienated a property and is taxed in that State by reason thereof and the domestic law of the other Contracting State at such time defers (but does not forgive) taxation, that individual may elect in his annual return of income for the year of such alienation to be liable to tax in the other Contracting State in that year as if he had, immediately before that time, sold and repurchased such property for an amount equal to its fair market value at that time.

8. Where a resident of a Contracting State alienates property in the course of a corporate organization, reorganization, amalgamation, division or similar transaction and profit, gain or income with respect to such alienation is not recognized for the purpose of taxation in that State, if requested to do so by the person who acquires the property, the competent authority of the other Contracting State may agree, in order to avoid double taxation and subject to terms and conditions satisfactory to such competent authority, to defer the recognition of the profit, gain or income with respect to such property for the purpose of taxation in that other State until such time and in such manner as may be stipulated in the agreement.

9. Where a resident of a Contracting State alienates property which may in accordance with this Article be taxed in the other Contracting State and which was owned by a resident of the first-mentioned State on the date of signature of this Convention, the amount of the gain which is liable to tax in that other State in accordance with this Article shall be reduced by the proportion of the gain attributable (on a monthly basis), or such greater portion of the gain as is shown to the satisfaction of the competent authority of the other State to be reasonably attributable, to the period ending on December 31 of the year in which the Convention enters into force; the provisions of this paragraph shall not apply to property which on the date of signature of the Convention formed part of the business property of a permanent establishment or pertained to a fixed base in the other Contracting State.

ARTICLE XIV

Independent personal services

Income derived by an individual who is a resident of a Contracting State in respect of independent personal services may be taxed in that State. Such income may also be taxed in the other Contracting State if the individual has or had a fixed base regularly available to him in that other State but only to the extent that the income is attributable to the fixed base.

ARTICLE XV

Dependent personal services

1. Subject to the provisions of Articles XVIII (Pensions and Annuities) and XIX (Government Service), salaries, wages and other similar remuneration derived by a resident of a Contracting State in respect of an employment shall be taxable only in that State unless the employment is exercised in the other Contracting State. If the employment is so exercised, such remuneration as is derived therefrom may be taxed in that other State.

2. Notwithstanding the provisions of paragraph 1, remuneration derived by a resident of a Contracting State in respect of an employment exercised in a calendar year in the other Contracting State shall be taxable only in the first-mentioned State if:

(a) Such remuneration does not exceed ten thousand dollars ($10,000) in the currency of that other State; or

(b) The recipient is present in the other Contracting State for a period or periods not exceeding in the aggregate 183 days in that year and the remuneration is not borne by an employer who is a resident of that other State or by a permanent establishment or a fixed base which the employer has in that other State.

3. Notwithstanding the provisions of paragraphs 1 and 2, remuneration derived by a resident of a Contracting State in respect of an employment regularly exercised in more than one State on a ship, aircraft, motor vehicle or train operated by a resident of that Contracting State shall be taxable only in that State.

ARTICLE XVI

Artistes and athletes

1. Notwithstanding the provisions of Articles XIV (Independent Personal Services) and XV (Dependent Personal Services), income derived by a resident of a Contracting State as an entertainer, such as a theatre, motion picture, radio or television artiste, or a musician, or as an athlete, from his personal activities as such exercised in the other Contracting State, may be taxed in that other State, except where the amount of the gross receipts derived by such entertainer or athlete, including expenses reimbursed to him or borne on his behalf, from such activities do not exceed fifteen thousand dollars ($15,000) in the currency of that other State for the calendar year concerned.

2. Where income in respect of personal activities exercised by an entertainer or an athlete in his capacity as such accrues not to the entertainer or athlete but to another person, that income may, notwithstanding the provisions of Articles VII (Business Profits), XIV (Independent Personal Services) and XV (Dependent Personal Services), be taxed in the Contracting State in which the activities of the entertainer or athlete are exercised. For the purposes of the preceding sentence, income of an entertainer or athlete shall be deemed not to accrue to another person if it is established that neither the entertainer or athlete, nor persons related thereto, participate directly or indirectly in the profits of such other person in any manner, including the receipt of deferred remuneration, bonuses, fees, dividends, partnership distributions or other distributions.

3. The provisions of this Article shall not apply to the income of an athlete in respect of an employment with a team which participates in a league with regularly schedule games in both Contracting States.

ARTICLE XVII

Withholding of taxes in respect of independent personal services

1. Deduction and withholding of tax on account of the tax liability for a taxable year on remuneration paid to an individual who is a resident of a Contracting State (including an entertainer or athlete) in respect of the performance of independent personal services in the other Contracting State may be required by that other State, but with respect to the first five thousand dollars ($5,000) in the currency of that other State, paid as remuneration in that taxable year by each payer, such deduction and withholding shall not exceed 10 per cent of the payment.

2. Where the competent authority of a Contracting State considers that an amount that would otherwise be deducted or withheld from any amount paid or credited to an individual who is a resident of the other Contracting State in respect of the performance of independent personal services in the first-mentioned State is excessive in relation to the estimated tax liability for the taxable year of that individual in the first-mentioned State, it may determine that a lesser amount will be deducted or withheld.

3. The provisions of this Article shall not affect the liability of a resident of a Contracting State referred to in paragraph 1 or 2 for tax imposed by the other Contracting State.

ARTICLE XVIII

Pensions and annuities

1. Pensions and annuities arising in a Contracting State and paid to a resident of the other Contracting State may be taxed in that other State, but the amount of any pension included in income for the purposes of taxation in that other State shall not exceed the amount that would be included in the first-mentioned State if the recipient were a resident thereof.

2. However:

(a) Pensions may also be taxed in the Contracting State in which they arise and according to the laws of that State; but if a resident of the other Contracting State is the beneficial owner of a periodic pension payment, the tax so charged shall not exceed 15 per cent of the gross amount of such payment; and

(b) Annuities may also be taxed in the Contracting State in which they arise and according to the laws of that State; but if a resident of the other Contracting State is the beneficial owner of an annuity payment, the tax so charged shall not exceed 15 per cent of the portion of such payment that is liable to tax in the first-mentioned State.

3. For the purposes of this Convention, the term "pensions" includes any payment under a superannuation, pension or retirement plan, Armed Forces retirement pay, war veterans pensions and allowances and amounts paid under a sickness, accident or disability plan, but does not include payments under an income-averaging annuity contract or any benefit referred to in paragraph 5.

4. For the purposes of the Convention, the term "annuities" means a stated sum paid periodically at stated times during life or during a specified number of years, under an obligation to make the payments in return for adequate and full consideration (other than services rendered), but does not include a payment that is not a periodic payment or any annuity the cost of which was deductible for the purposes of taxation in the Contracting State in which it was acquired.

5. Benefits under the social security legislation in a Contracting State paid to a resident of the other Contracting State or a citizen of the United States shall be taxable only in the first-mentioned State.

6. Alimony and other similar amounts (including child support payments) arising in a Contracting State and paid to a resident of the other Contracting State shall be taxable only in that other State, but the amount included in income for the purposes of taxation in that other State shall not exceed the amount that would be included in income in the first-mentioned State if the recipient were a resident thereof.

ARTICLE XIX

Government service

Remuneration, other than a pension, paid by a Contracting State or a political subdivision or local authority thereof to a citizen of that State in respect of services rendered in the discharge of functions of a governmental nature shall be taxable only in that State. However, the provisions of Article XIV (Independent Personal Services), XV (Dependent Personal Services), or XVI (Artistes and Athletes), as the case may be, shall apply, and the preceding sentence shall not apply to remuneration paid in respect of services rendered in connection with a trade or business carried on by a Contracting State or a political subdivision or local authority thereof.

ARTICLE XX

Students

Payments which a student, apprentice or business trainee, who is or was immediately before visiting a Contracting State a resident of the other Contracting State, and who is present in the first-mentioned State for the purpose of his full-time education or training, receives for the purpose of his maintenance, education or training shall not be taxed in that State provided that such payments are made to him from outside that State.

ARTICLE XXI

Exempt organizations

1. Subject to the provisions of paragraph 3, income derived by a religious, scientific, literary, educational or charitable organization shall be exempt from tax in a Contracting State if it is resident in the other Contracting State but only to the extent that such income is exempt from tax in that other State.

2. Subject to the provisions of paragraph 3, income referred to in Articles X (Dividends) and XI (Interest) derived by a trust, company or other organization constituted and operated exclusively to administer or provide benefits under one or more funds or plans established to provide pension, retirement or other employee benefits shall be exempt from tax in a Contracting State if it is resident in the other Contracting State and its income is generally exempt from tax in that other State.

3. The provisions of paragraphs 1 and 2 shall not apply with respect to the income of a trust, company or other organization from carrying on a trade or business or from a related person other than a person referred to in paragraph 1 or 2.

4. A religious, scientific, literary, educational or charitable organization which is resident in Canada and which has received substantially all of its support from persons other than citizens or residents of the United States shall be exempt in the United States from the United States excise taxes imposed with respect to private foundations.

5. For the purposes of United States taxation, contributions by a citizen or resident of the United States to an organization which is resident in Canada, which is generally exempt from Canadian tax and which could qualify in the United States to receive deductible contributions if it were resident in the United States shall be treated as charitable contributions; however, such contributions (other than such contributions to a college or university at which the citizen or resident or a member of his family is or was enrolled) shall not be deductible in any taxable year to the extent that they exceed an amount determined by applying the percentage limitations of the laws of the United States in respect of the deductibility of charitable contributions to the income of such citizen or resident arising in Canada. The preceding sentence shall not be interpreted to allow in any taxable year deductions for charitable contributions in excess of the amount allowed under the percentage limitations of the laws of the United States in respect of the deductibility of charitable contributions.

6. For the purposes of Canadian taxation, gifts by a resident of Canada to an organization which is resident in the United States, which is generally exempt from United States tax and which could qualify in Canada to receive deductible gifts if it were created or established and resident in Canada shall be treated as gifts to a registered charity; however, such gifts (other than such gifts to a college or university at which the resident or a member of his family is or was enrolled) shall not be deductible in any taxable year to the extent that they exceed an amount determined by applying the percentage limitations of the laws of Canada in respect of the deductibility of gifts to registered charities to the income of such resident arising in the United States. The preceding sentence shall not be interpreted to allow in any taxable year deductions for gifts to registered charities in excess of the amount allowed under the percentage limitations of the laws of Canada in respect of the deductibility of gifts to registered charities.

ARTICLE XXII

Other income

1. Items of income of a resident of a Contracting State, wherever arising, not dealt with in the foregoing Articles of this Convention shall be taxable only in that State, except that if such income arises in the other Contracting State it may also be taxed in that other State.

2. To the extent that income distributed by an estate or trust is subject to the provisions of paragraph 1, then, notwithstanding such provisions, income distributed by an estate or trust which is a resident of a Contracting State to a resident of the other Contracting State who is a beneficiary of the estate or trust may be taxed in the first-mentioned State and according to the laws of that State, but the tax so charged shall not exceed 15 per cent of the gross amount of the income; provided, however, that such income shall be exempt from tax in the first-mentioned State to the extent of any amount distributed out of income arising outside that State.

ARTICLE XXIII

Capital

1. Capital represented by real property, owned by a resident of a Contracting State and situated in the other Contracting State, may be taxed in that other State.

2. Capital represented by personal property forming part of the business property of a permanent establishment which a resident of a Contracting State has in the other Contracting State, or by personal property pertaining to a fixed base available to a resident of a Contracting State in the other Contracting State for the purpose of performing independent personal services, may be taxed in that other State.

3. Capital represented by ships and aircraft operated by a resident of a Contracting State in international traffic, and by personal property pertaining to the operation of such ships and aircraft, shall be taxable only in that State.

4. All other elements of capital of a resident of a Contracting State shall be taxable only in that State.

ARTICLE XXIV

Elimination of double taxation

1. In the case of the United States, subject to the provisions of paragraphs 4, 5, and 6, double taxation shall be avoided as follows: In accordance with the provisions and subject to the limitations of the law of the United States (as it may be amended from time to time without changing the general principle hereof), the United States shall allow to a citizen or resident of the United States, or to a company electing to be treated as a domestic corporation, as a credit against the United States tax on income the appropriate amount of income tax paid or accrued to Canada; and, in the case of a company which is a resident of the United States owning at least 10 percent of the voting stock of a company which is a resident of Canada from which it receives dividends in any taxable year, the United States shall allow as a credit against the United States tax on income the appropriate amount of income tax paid or accrued to Canada by that company with respect to the profits out of which such dividends are paid. Such appropriate amount shall be based upon the amount of income tax paid or accrued to Canada, but shall not exceed that proportion of the United States tax that taxable income arising in Canada bears to the entire taxable income.

2. In the case of Canada, subject to the provisions of paragraphs 4, 5 and 6, double taxation shall be avoided as follows:

(a) Subject to the provisions of the law of Canada regarding the deduction from tax payable in Canada of tax paid in a territory outside Canada and to any subsequent modification of those provisions (which shall not affect the general principle hereof), and unless a greater deduction or relief is provided under the law of Canada, income tax paid or accrued to the United States on profits, income or gains arising in the United States shall be deducted from any Canadian tax payable in respect of such profits, income or gains; and

(b) Subject to the provisions of the law of Canada regarding the determination of the exempt surplus of a foreign affiliate and to any subsequent modification of those provisions (which shall not affect the general principle hereof), for the purposes of computing Canadian tax, a company which is a resident of Canada shall be allowed to deduct in computing its taxable income any dividend received by it out of the exempt surplus of a foreign affiliate which is a resident of the United States.

3. For the purposes of this Article:

(a) Profits, income or gains (other than gains to which paragraph 5 of Article XIII (Gains) applies) of a resident of a Contracting State which may be taxed in the other Contracting State in accordance with the Convention (without regard to paragraph 2 of Article XXIX (Miscellaneous Rules)) shall be deemed to arise in that other State; and

(b) Profits, income or gains of a resident of a Contracting State which may not be taxed in the other Contracting State in accordance with the Convention (without regard to paragraph 2 of Article XXIX (Miscellaneous Rules)) or to which paragraph 5 of Article XIII (Gains) applies shall be deemed to arise in the first-mentioned State.

4. Where a United States citizen is a resident of Canada, the following rules shall apply:

(a) Canada shall allow a deduction from the Canadian tax in respect of income tax paid or accrued to the United States in respect of profits, income or gains which arise (within the meaning of paragraph 3) in the United States, except that such deduction need not exceed the amount of the tax that would be paid to the United States if the resident were not a United States citizen; and

(b) For the purposes of computing the United States tax, the United States shall allow as a credit against United States tax the income tax paid or accrued to Canada after the deduction referred to in subparagraph (a). The credit so allowed shall not reduce that portion of the United States tax that is deductible from Canadian tax in accordance with subparagraph (a).

5. Notwithstanding the provisions of paragraph 4, where a United States citizen is a resident of Canada, the following rules shall apply in respect of the items of income referred to in Article X (Dividends), XI (Interest) or XII (Royalties) which arise (within the meaning of paragraph 3) in the United States, as long as the law in force in Canada allows a deduction in computing income for the portion of any foreign tax paid in respect of such items which exceeds 15 percent of the amount thereof:

(a) The deduction so allowed in Canada shall not be reduced by any credit or deduction for income tax paid or accrued to Canada allowed in computing the United States tax on such items;

(b) Canada shall allow a deduction from the Canadian tax in respect of the income tax paid or accrued to the United States on such items, except that such deduction need not exceed 15 per cent of the gross amount of such items that has been included in computing the income of the citizen for Canadian tax purposes; and

(c) For the purposes of computing the United States tax on such items, the United States shall allow as a credit against United States tax the income tax paid or accrued to Canada after the deduction referred to in subparagraph (b). The credit so allowed shall reduce only that portion of the United States tax on such items which exceeds 15 per cent of the amount thereof included in computing United States taxable income.

6. Where a United States citizen is a resident of Canada, items of income referred to in paragraph 4 or 5 shall, notwithstanding the provisions of paragraph 3, be deemed to arise in Canada to the extent necessary to avoid the double taxation of such income under paragraph 4(b) or paragraph 5(c).

7. For the purposes of this Article, any reference to "income tax paid or accrued" to a Contracting State shall include Canadian tax and United States tax, as the case may be, and taxes of general application which are paid or accrued to a political subdivision or local authority of that State, which are not imposed by that political subdivision or local authority in a manner inconsistent with the provisions of the Convention and which are substantially similar to the taxes of that State referred to in paragraphs 2 and 3(a) of Article II (Taxes Covered).

8. Where a resident of a Contracting State owns capital which, in accordance with the provisions of the Convention, may be taxed in the other Contracting State, the first-mentioned State shall allow as a deduction from the tax on the capital of that resident an amount equal to the capital tax paid in that other State. The deduction shall not, however, exceed that part of the capital tax, as computed before the deduction is given, which is attributable to the capital which may be taxed in that other State.

ARTICLE XXV

Non-Discrimination

1. Citizens of a Contracting State, who are residents of the other Contracting State, shall not be subjected in that other State to any taxation or any requirement connected therewith which is other or more burdensome than the taxation and connected requirements to which citizens of that other State in the same circumstances are or may be subjected.

2. Citizens of a Contracting State, who are not residents of the other Contracting State, shall not be subjected in that other State to any taxation or any requirement connected therewith which is other or more burdensome than the taxation and connected requirements to which citizens of any third State in the same circumstances (including State of residence) are or may be subjected.

3. In determining the taxable income of an individual who is a resident of a Contracting State there shall be allowed as a deduction in respect of any other person who is a resident of the other Contracting State and who is dependent on the individual for support the amount that would be so allowed if that other person were a resident of the first-mentioned State.

4. Where a married individual who is a resident of Canada and not a citizen of the United States has income that is taxable in the United States pursuant to Article XV (Dependent Personal Services), the United States tax with respect to such income shall not exceed such proportion of the total United States tax that would be payable for the taxable year if both the individual and his spouse were United States citizens as the individual's taxable income determined without regard to this paragraph bears to the amount that would be the total taxable income of the individual and his spouse. For the purposes of this paragraph.

(a) The "total United States tax" shall be determined as if all the income of the individual and his spouse arose in the United States; and

(b) A deficit of the spouse shall not be taken into account in determining taxable income.

5. Any company which is a resident of a Contracting State, the capital of which is wholly or partly owned or controlled, directly or indirectly, by one or more residents of the other Contracting State, shall not be subjected in the first-mentioned State to any taxation or any requirement connected therewith which is other or more burdensome than the taxation and connected requirements to which other similar companies of the first-mentioned State, the capital of which is wholly or partly owned or controlled, directly or indirectly, by one or more residents of a third State, are or may be subjected.

6. Notwithstanding the provisions of Article XXIV (Elimination of Double Taxation), the taxation on a permanent establishment which a resident of a Contracting State has in the other Contracting State shall not be less favorably levied in the other State than the taxation levied on residents of the other State carrying on the same activities. This provision shall not be construed as obliging a Contracting State to grant to residents of the other Contracting State any personal allowances, reliefs and reductions for taxation purposes on account of civil status or family responsibilities which it grants to its own residents.

7. Except where the provisions of paragraph 1 of Article IX (Related Persons), paragraph 7 of Article XI (Interest) or paragraph 7 of Article XII (Royalties) apply, interest, royalties and other disbursements paid by a resident of a Contracting State to a resident of the other Contracting State shall, for the purposes of determining the taxable profits of the first-mentioned resident, be deductible under the same conditions as if they had been paid to a resident of the first-mentioned State. Similarly, any debts of a resident of a Contracting State to a resident of the other Contracting State shall, for the purposes of determining the taxable capital of the first-mentioned resident, be deductible under the same conditions as if they had been contracted to a resident of the first-mentioned State.

8. The provisions of paragraph 7 shall not affect the operation of any provision of the taxation laws of a Contracting State:

(a) Relating to the deductibility of interest and which is in force on the date of signature of this Convention (including any subsequent modification of such provisions that does not change the general nature thereof); or

(b) Adopted after such date by a

Contracting State and which is designed to ensure that a person who is not a resident of that State does not enjoy, under the laws of that State, a tax treatment that is more favorable than that enjoyed by residents of that State.

9. Expenses incurred by a citizen or resident of a Contracting State with respect to any convention (including any seminar, meeting, congress or other function of a similar nature) held in the other Contracting State shall, for the purposes of taxation in the first-mentioned State, be deductible to the same extent that such expenses would be deductible if the convention were held in first-mentioned State.

10. Notwithstanding the provisions of Article II (Taxes Covered), this Article shall apply:

(a) In the case of Canada, to all taxes imposed under the Income Tax Act; and

(b) In the case of the United States, to all taxes imposed under the Internal Revenue Code.

ARTICLE XXVI

Mutual agreement procedure

1. Where a person considers that the actions of one or both of the Contracting States result or will result for him in taxation not in accordance with the provisions of this Convention, he may, irrespective of the remedies provided by the domestic law of those States, present his case in writing to the competent authority of the Contracting State of which he is a resident or, if he is a resident of neither Contracting State, or which he is a national.

2. The competent authority of the Contracting State to which the case has been presented shall endeavor, if the objection appears to it to be justified and if it is not itself able to arrive at a satisfactory solution, to resolve the case by mutual agreement with the competent authority of the other Contracting State, with a view to the avoidance of taxation which is not in accordance with the Convention. Except where the provisions of Article IX (Related Persons) apply, any agreement reached shall be implemented notwithstanding any time or other procedural limitations in the domestic law of the Contracting States, provided that the competent authority of the other Contracting State has received notification that such a case exists within six years from the end of the taxable year to which the case relates.

3. The competent authorities of the Contracting States shall endeavor to resolve by mutual agreement any difficulties or doubts arising as to the interpretation or application of the Convention. In particular, the competent authorities of the Contracting States may agree:

(a) To the same attribution of profits to a resident of a Contracting State and its permanent establishment situated in the other Contracting State;

(b) To the same allocation of income, deductions, credits or allowances between persons;

(c) To the same determination of the source, and the same characterization, of particular items of income;

(d) To a common meaning of any term used in the Convention;

(e) To the elimination of double taxation with respect to income distribution by an estate or trust;

(f) To the elimination of double taxation with respect to a partnership; or

(g) To increases in any other amounts referred to in the Convention to reflect monetary or economic developments.

They may also consult together for the elimination of double taxation in cases not provided for in the Convention.

4. Each of the Contracting States will endeavor to collect on behalf of the other Contracting State such amounts as may be necessary to ensure that relief granted by the Convention from taxation imposed by that other State does not enure to the benefit of persons not entitled thereto. However, nothing in this paragraph shall be construed as imposing on either of the Contracting States the obligation to carry out administrative measures of a different nature from those used in the collection of its own tax or which would be contrary to its public policy (order public).

5. The competent authorities of the Contracting States may communicate with each other directly for the purpose of reaching an agreement in the sense of the proceeding paragraphs.

ARTICLE XXVII

Exchange of information

1. The competent authorities of the Contracting States shall exchange such information as is necessary for carrying out the provisions of this Convention or of the domestic laws of the Contracting States concerning taxes covered by the Convention insofar as the taxation thereunder is not contrary to the Convention. The exchange of information is not restricted by Article I (Personal Scope). Any information received by a Contracting State shall be treated as secret in the same manner as information obtained under the taxation laws of that State and shall be disclosed only to persons or authorities (including courts and administrative bodies) involved in the assessment or collection of, the administration and enforcement in respect of, or the determination of appeals in relation to, the taxes covered by the Convention. Such persons or authorities shall use the information only for such purposes. They may disclose the information in public court proceedings or in judicial decisions.

2. If information is requested by a Contracting State in accordance with this Article, the other Contracting State shall endeavor to obtain the information to which the request relates in the same way as if its own taxation was involved notwithstanding the fact that the other State does not, at that time, need such information. If specifically requested by the competent authority of a Contracting State, the competent authority of the other Contracting State shall endeavor to provide information under this Article in the form requested, such as depositions of witnesses and copies of unedited original documents (including books, papers, statements, records, accounts or writings), to the same extent such depositions and documents can be obtained under the laws and administrative practices of that other State with respect to its own taxes.

3. In no case shall the provisions of paragraphs 1 and 2 be construed so as to impose on a Contracting State the obligation:

(a) To carry out administrative measures at variance with the laws and administrative practice of that or of the other Contracting State;

(b) To supply information which is not obtainable under the laws or in the normal course of the administration of that or of the other Contracting State; or

(c) To supply information which would disclose any trade, business, industrial, commercial or professional secret or trade process, or information the disclosure of which would be contrary to public policy (ordre public).

4. Notwithstanding the provisions of Article II (Taxes Covered), for the purposes of this Article the Convention shall apply:

(a) In the case of Canada, to all taxes imposed by the Government of Canada on estates and gifts and under the Income Tax Act; and

(b) In the case of the United States, to all taxes imposed under the Internal Revenue Code.

ARTICLE XXVIII

Diplomatic agents and consular officers

Nothing in this Convention shall affect the fiscal privileges of diplomatic agents or consular officers under the general rules of international law or under the provisions of special agreements.

ARTICLE XXIX

Miscellaneous rules

1. The provisions of this Convention shall not restrict in any manner any exclusion, exemption, deduction, credit or other allowance now or hereafter accorded by the laws of a Contracting State in the determination of the tax imposed by that State.

2. Except as provided in paragraph 3, nothing in the Convention shall be construed as preventing a Contracting State from taxing its residents (as determined under Article IV (Residence)) and, in the case of the United States, its citizens (including a former citizen whose loss of citizenship had as one of its principal purposes the avoidance of income tax, but only for a period of ten years following such loss) and companies electing to be treated as domestic corporations, as if there were no convention between the United States and Canada with respect to taxes on income and on capital.

3. The provisions of paragraph 2 shall not affect the obligations undertaken by a Contracting State:

(a) Under paragraphs 3 and 4 of Article IX (Related Persons), paragraphs 6 and 7 of Article XIII (Gains), paragraph 5 of Article XXIX (Miscellaneous Rules), paragraphs 3 and 5 of Article XXX (Entry into Force), and Articles XVIII (Pensions and Annuities), XIX (Government Service), XXI (Exempt Organizations), XXIV (Elimination of Double Taxation), XXV (Non-Discrimination) and XXVI (Mutual Agreement Procedure); and

(b) Under Article XX (Students), toward individuals who are neither citizens of, nor have immigrant status in, that State.

4. With respect to taxable years not barred by the statute of limitations ending on or before December 31 of the year in which the Convention enters into force, income from personal services not subject to tax by the United States under the 1942 Convention shall not be considered wages or net earnings from self-employment for purposes of social security taxes imposed under the Internal Revenue Code.

5. A United States citizen who is a resident of Canada and a beneficiary of a Canadian registered retirement savings plan may elect, under rules established by the competent authority of the United States, to defer United States taxation with respect to any income accrued in the plan but not distributed by the plan, until such time as a distribution is made from such plan, or any plan substituted therefor.

6. If 25 per cent or more of the capital of a company which is a resident of a Contracting State is owned directly or indirectly by individuals who are not residents of that State, and if by reason of special measures the tax imposed in that State on that company with respect to dividends (other than dividends referred to in paragraph 2(a) of Article X (Dividends)), interest or royalties arising in the other Contracting State is substantially less than the tax generally imposed by the first-mentioned State on corporate business profits, then, notwithstanding the provisions of Article X (Dividends), XI (Interest) or XII (Royalties), that other State may tax such dividends, interest or royalties as if there were no convention between the United States and Canada with respect to taxes on income and on capital.

ARTICLE XXX

Entry into force

1. This Convention shall be subject to ratification in accordance with the applicable procedures of each Contracting State and instruments of ratification shall be exchanged at Ottawa as soon as possible.

2. The Convention shall enter into force upon the exchange of instruments of ratification and, subject to the provisions of paragraph 3, its provisions shall have effect:

(a) For tax withheld at the source on income referred to in Articles X (Dividends), XI (Interest), XII (Royalties) and XVIII (Pensions and Annuities), with respect to amounts paid or credited on or after the first day of the second month next following the date on which the Convention enters into force;

(b) For other taxes, with respect to taxable years beginning on or after the first day of January next following the date on which the Convention enters into force; and

(c) Notwithstanding the provisions of subparagraph (b), for the taxes covered by paragraph 4 of Article XXIX (Miscellaneous Rules) with respect to all taxable years referred to in that paragraph.

3. For the purpose of applying the United States foreign tax credit in relation to taxes paid or accrued to Canada:

(a) Notwithstanding the provisions of paragraph 2(a) of Article II (Taxes Covered), the tax on 1971 undistributed income on hand imposed by Part IX of the Income Tax Act of Canada shall be considered to be an income tax for distributions made on or after the first day of January 1972 and before the first day of January 1979, and shall be considered imposed upon the recipient of a distribution, in the proportion that the distribution out of undistributed income with respect to which the tax has been paid bears to 85 per cent of such undistributed income; and

(b) The principles of paragraph 6 of Article XXIV (Elimination of Double Taxation) shall have effect for taxable years beginning on or after the first day of January 1976.

Any claim for refund based on the provisions of this paragraph may be filed on or before June 30 of the calendar year following that in which the Convention enters into force, notwithstanding any rule of domestic law to the contrary.

4. Subject to the provisions of paragraph 5, the 1942 Convention shall cease to have effect for taxes for which this Convention has effect in accordance with the provisions of paragraph 2.

5. Where any greater relief from tax would have been afforded by any provision of the 1942 Convention than under this Convention, any such provision shall continue to have effect for the first taxable year with respect to which the provisions of this Convention have effect under paragraph 2(b).

6. The 1942 Convention shall terminate on the last date on which it has effect in accordance with the preceding provisions of this Article.

7. The Exchange of Notes between the United States and Canada dated August

2 and September 17, 1928, providing for relief from double income taxation on shipping profits, is terminated. Its provisions shall cease to have effect with respect to taxable years beginning on or after the first day of January next following the date on which this Convention enters into force.

8. The provisions of the Convention between the Government of Canada and the Government of the United States of America for the Avoidance of Double Taxation and the Prevention of Fiscal Evasion with Respect to Taxes on the Estates of Deceased Persons signed at Washington on February 17, 1961 shall continue to have effect with respect to estates of persons deceased prior to the first day of January next following the date on which this Convention enters into force but shall cease to have effect with respect to estates of persons deceased on or after that date. Such Convention shall terminate on the last date on which it has effect in accordance with the preceding sentence.

ARTICLE XXXI

Termination

1. This Convention shall remain in force until terminated by a Contracting State.

2. Either Contracting State may terminate the Convention at any time after 5 years from the date on which the Convention enters into force provided that at least 6 months' prior notice of termination has been given through diplomatic channels.

3. Where a Contracting State considers that a significant change introduced in the taxation laws of the other Contracting State should be accommodated by a modification of the Convention, the Contracting States shall consult together with a view to resolving the matter; if the matter cannot be satisfactorily resolved, the first-mentioned State may terminate the Convention in accordance with the procedures set forth in paragraph 2, but without regard to the 5 year limitation provided therein.

4. In the event the Convention is terminated, the Convention shall cease to have effect:

(a) For tax withheld at the source on income referred to in Articles X (Dividends), XI (Interest), XII (Royalties), XVIII (Pensions and Annuities) and paragraph 2 of Article XXII (Other Income), with respect to amounts paid or credited on or after the first day of January next following the expiration of the 6 months' period referred to in paragraph 2; and

(b) For other taxes, with respect to taxable years beginning on or after the first day of January next following the expiration of the 6 months' period referred to in paragraph 2.

In witness whereof, the undersigned, being duly authorized thereto by their respective Governments, have signed this Convention.

Done in two copies at Washington this twenty-sixth day of September, 1980, in the English and French languages, each text being equally authentic.

Have agreed as follows:

ARTICLE I

Subparagraph 1(h) of Article III (General Definitions) of the Convention shall be deleted and replaced by the following:

ARTICLE II

Paragraph 4 of Article V (Permanent Establishment) shall be deleted and replaced by the following:

"1. Income derived by a resident of a Contracting State from real property (including income from agriculture, forestry or other natural resources) situated in the other Contracting State may be taxed in that other State.

2. For the purposes of this Convention, the term "real property" shall have the meaning which it has under the taxation laws of the Contracting State in which the property in question is situated and shall include any option or similar right in respect thereof. The term shall in any case include usufruct of real property, rights to explore for or to exploit mineral deposits, sources and other natural resources and rights to amounts computed by reference to the amount or value of production from such resources; ships and aircraft shall not be regarded as real property.

3. The provisions of paragraph 1 shall apply to income derived from the direct use, letting or use in any other form of real property and to income from the alienation of such property."

ARTICLE IV

Paragraph 1 of Article VIII (Transportation) shall be deleted and replaced by the following:

Notwithstanding the provisions of Articles VII (Business Profits), XII (Royalties) and XIII (Gains), profits derived by a resident of a Contracting State from the operation of ships or aircraft in international traffic, and gains derived by a resident of a Contracting State from the alienation of ships, aircraft or containers (including trailers and related equipment for the transport of containers) used principally in international traffic, shall be exempt from tax in the other Contracting State."

ARTICLE V

1. Paragraph 3 of Article XII (Royalties) shall be deleted and replaced by the following:

"3. Notwithstanding the provisions of paragraph 2, copyright royalties and other like payments in respect of the production or reproduction of any literary, dramatic, musical or artistic work (but not including royalties in respect of motion pictures and works on film, videotape or other means of reproduction for use in connection with television) arising in a Contracting State and beneficially owned by a resident of the other Contracting State shall be taxable only in that other State."

2. Paragraph 4 of Article XII (Royalties) shall be deleted and replaced by the following:

"4. The term 'royalties' as used in this Article means payments of any kind received as a consideration for the use of, or the right to use, any copyright of literary, artistic or scientific work (including motion pictures and works on film, videotape or other means of reproduction for use in connection with television), any patent, trade mark, design or model, plan, secret formula or process, or for the use of, or the right to use, tangible personal property or for information concerning industrial, commercial or scientific experience, and, notwithstanding the provisions of Article XIII (Gains), includes gains from the alienation of any intangible property or rights described in this paragraph to the extent that such gains are contingent on the productivity, use or subsequent disposition of such property or rights."

3. Subparagraph 6(b) of Article XII (Royalties) shall be deleted and replaced by the following:

"(b) Where the royalties are for the use of, or the right to use, intangible property or tangible personal property in a Contracting State, then such royalties shall be deemed to arise in that State and not in the State of which the payer is a resident."

ARTICLE VI

1. Paragraph 3 of Article XIII (Gains) shall be deleted and replaced by the following:

"3. For the purposes of this Article the term 'real property situated in the other Contracting State'

(a) In the case of real property situated in the United States, means a United States real property interest and real property referred to in Article VI (Income from Real Property) situated in the United States; and

(b) In the case of real property situated in Canada means:

(i) Real property referred to in Article VI (Income from Real Property) situated in Canada;

"5. The provisions of paragraph 4 shall not affect the right of a Contracting State to levy tax on gains from the alienation of property derived by an individual who is a resident of the other Contracting State if such individual:

(a) Was a resident of the first-mentioned State for 120 months during any period of 20 consecutive years preceding the alienation of the property; and

(b) Was a resident of the first-mentioned State at any time during the ten years immediately preceding the alienation of the property;

and if such property (or property for which such property was substituted in an alienation the gain on which was not recognized for the purposes of taxation in the first-mentioned State) was owned by the individual at the time he ceased to be a resident of the first-mentioned State."

3. Paragraph 9 of Article XIII (Gains) shall be deleted and replaced by the following:

"9. Where a person who is a resident of a Contracting State alienates a capital asset which may in accordance with this Article be taxed in the other Contracting State and

(a) That person owned the asset on September 26, 1980 and was resident in the first-mentioned State on that date; or

(b) The asset was acquired by that person in an alienation of property which qualified as a non-recognition transaction for the purposes of taxation in that other State;

the amount of the gain which is liable to tax in that other State in accordance with this Article shall be reduced by the proportion of the gain attributable on a monthly basis to the period ending on December 31 of the year in which the Convention enters into force, or such greater portion of the gain as is shown to the satisfaction of the competent authority of the other State to be reasonably attributable to that period. For the purposes of this paragraph the term "non-recognition transaction" includes a transaction to which paragraph 8 applies and, in the case of taxation in the United States, a transaction that would have been a non-recognition transaction but for Sections 897(d) and 897(e) of the Internal Revenue Code. The provisions of this paragraph shall not apply to

(c) An asset that on September 26, 1980 formed part of the business property of a permanent establishment or pertained to a fixed base of a resident of a Contracting State situated in the other Contracting State;

(d) An alienation by a resident of a Contracting State of an asset that was owned at any time after September 26, 1980 and before such alienation by a person who was not at all times after that date while the asset was owned by such person a resident of that State; or

(e) An alienation of an asset that was acquired by a person at any time after September 26, 1980 and before such alienation in a transaction other than a non-recognition transaction."

ARTICLE VII

1. Paragraph 3 of Article XVI (Artistes and Athletes) shall be deleted and replaced by the following:

"3. The provisions of paragraphs 1 and 2 shall not apply to the income of:

(a) An athlete in respect of his activities as an employee of a team which participates in a league with regularly schedule games in both Contracting States; or

(b) A team described in subparagraph (a)."

2. There shall be added to Article XVI (Artistes and Athletes) a new paragraph 4, as follows:

"4. ARTICLE XI

1. Paragraph 1 of Article XXIV (Elimination of Double Taxation) shall be deleted and replaced by the following:

> "1. In the case of the United States, subject to the provisions of paragraphs 4, 5 and 6, double taxation shall be avoided as follows: In accordance with the provisions and subject to the limitations of the law of the United States (as it may be amended from time to time without changing the general principle hereof), the United States shall allow to a citizen or resident of the United States, or to a company electing to be treated as a domestic corporation, as a credit against the United States tax on income the appropriate amount of income tax paid or accrued to Canada; and, in the case of a company which is a resident of the United States owning at least 10 per cent of the voting stock of a company which is a resident of Canada from which it receives dividends in any taxable year, the United States shall allow as a credit against the United States tax on income the appropriate amount of income tax paid or accrued to Canada by that company with respect to the profits out of which such dividends are paid."

> (b) Subject to the provisions of the law of Canada regarding the determination of the exempt surplus of a foreign affiliate and to any subsequent modification of those provisions (which shall not affect the general principle hereof), for the purposes of computing Canadian tax, a company which is a resident of Canada shall be allowed to deduct in computing its taxable income any dividend received by it out of the exempt surplus of a foreign affiliate which is a resident of the United States; and
> (c) Notwithstanding the provisions of subparagraph (a), where Canada imposes a tax on gains from the alienation of property that, but for the provisions of paragraph 5 of Article XIII (Gains), would not be taxable in Canada, income tax paid or accrued to the United States on such gains shall be deducted from any Canadian tax payable in respect of such gains."

3. There shall be added to Article XXIV (Elimination of Double Taxation) a new paragraph 9, as follows:

"9. The provisions of this Article relating to the source of profits, income or gains shall not apply for the purpose of determining a credit against United States tax for any foreign taxes other than income taxes paid or accrued to Canada."

This paragraph shall not be construed as obliging a Contracting State:

(a) To grant to a resident of the other Contracting State any personal allowances, reliefs and reductions for taxation purposes on account of civil status or family responsibilities which it grants to its own residents; or

(b) To grant to a company which is a resident of the other Contracting State the same tax relief that it provides to a company which is a resident of the first-mentioned State with respect to dividends received by it from a company."

ARTICLE XIII

1. Paragraph 2 of Article XXIX (Miscellaneous Rules) shall be deleted and replaced by the following:

"2. Except as provided in paragraph 3, nothing in the Convention shall be construed as preventing a Contracting State from taxing its residents (as determined under Article IV (Residence)) and, in the case of the United States, its citizens (including a former citizen whose loss of citizenship had as one of its principal purposes the avoidance of tax, but only for a period of ten years following such loss) and companies electing to be treated as domestic corporations, as if there were no convention between the United States and Canada with respect to taxes on income and on capital."

2. Subparagraph 3(a) of Article XXIX (Miscellaneous Rules) shall be deleted and replaced by the following:

4. Paragraph 5 of Article XXIX (Miscellaneous Rules) shall be deleted and replaced by the following:

"5. A beneficiary of a Canadian registered retirement savings plan may elect, under rules established by the competent authority of the United States, to defer United States taxation with respect to any income accrued in the plan but not distributed by the plan, until such time as a distribution is made from such plan, or any plan substituted therefor. The provisions of the preceding sentence shall not apply to income which is reasonably attributable to contributions made to the plan by the beneficiary while he was not a resident of Canada."

5. Paragraph 6 of Article XXIX (Miscellaneous Rules) shall be deleted and replaced by the following:

"6. Notwithstanding any other provision of the Convention,

(a) Where profits, income or gains derived by a trust is to be treated for the purposes of the Convention as income of a resident of a Contracting State, and a principal purpose for the establishment, acquisition or maintenance of the trust was to obtain a benefit under the Convention or the 1942 Convention for persons who are not residents of that State, Articles VI (Income from Real Property) through XXIV (Elimination of Double Taxation) shall not apply in relation to the profits, income or gains of the trust; and

(b) Articles VI (Income from Real Property) through XXIV (Elimination of Double Taxation) shall not apply to non-resident-owned investment corporations as defined under section 133 of the Income Tax Act of Canada, or under any similar provision enacted by Canada after the date of signature of the Protocol."

ARTICLE XIV

Paragraph 3 of Article XXX (Entry into Force) shall be deleted and replaced by the following:

"3. For the purposes of applying the United States foreign tax credit in relation to taxes paid or accrued to Canada:

(b) The principles of paragraph 6 of Article XXIV (Elimination of Double Taxation) shall have effect for taxable years beginning on or after the first day of January 1976; and

(c) The provisions of paragraph 1 of Article XXIV shall have effect for taxable years beginning on or after the first day of January 1981.

Any claim for refund based on the provisions of this paragraph may be filed on or before June 30 of the calendar year following that in which the Convention enters into force, notwithstanding any rule of domestic law to the contrary."

TECHNICAL EXPLANATION OF THE CONVENTION BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA AND CANADA WITH RESPECT TO TAXES ON INCOME AND ON CAPITAL SIGNED AT WASHINGTON, D.C. ON SEPTEMBER 26, 1980

INTRODUCTION

In this technical explanation of the Convention between the United States and Canada signed on September 26, 1980 ("the Convention"), references are made to the Convention and Protocol between Canada and the United States with respect to Income Taxes signed on March 4, 1942, as amended by the Convention signed on June 12, 1950, the Convention signed on August 8, 1956 and the Supplementary Convention signed on October 25, 1966 (the "1942 Convention"). These references are intended to put various provisions of the Convention into context. The technical explanation does not, however, provide a complete comparison between the Convention and the 1942 Convention. Moreover, neither the Convention nor the technical explanation is intended to have implications for the interpretation of the 1942 Convention.

The technical explanation is an official guide to the Convention. It reflects policies behind particular Convention provisions, as well as understandings reached with respect to the interpretation and application of the Convention.

Article I. PERSONAL SCOPE

Article I provides that the Convention is generally applicable to persons who are residents of either Canada or the United States or both Canada and the United States. The word "generally" is used because certain provisions of the Convention apply to persons who are residents of neither Canada nor the United States.

Article II. TAXES COVERED

Paragraph 1 states that the Convention applies to taxes "on income and on capital" imposed on behalf of Canada and the United States, irrespective of the manner in which such taxes are levied. As of September 26, 1980 neither Canada nor the United States imposed taxes on capital. Paragraph 1 is not intended either to broaden or to limit paragraph 2, which provides that the Convention shall apply, in the case of Canada, to the taxes imposed by the Government of Canada under Part I, XIII, and XIV of the Income Tax Act and, in the case of the United States, to the Federal income taxes imposed by the Internal Revenue Code ("the Code").

National taxes not generally covered by the Convention include, in the case of the United States, the estate, gift, and generation-skipping transfer taxes, the Windfall Profits Tax, Federal unemployment taxes, social security taxes imposed under section 1401, 3101, and 3111 of the Code, and the excise tax on insurance premiums imposed under Code section 4371. The Convention also does not generally cover the Canadian excise tax on net insurance premiums paid by residents of Canada for coverage of a risk situated in Canada. However, the Convention has the effect of covering the Canadian social security tax in certain respects because under Canadian domestic tax law no such tax is due if there is no income subject to tax under the Income Tax Act of Canada. Taxes imposed by the states of the United States, and by the provinces of Canada, are not generally covered by the Convention. However, if such taxes are imposed in accordance with the provisions of the Convention, a foreign tax credit is ensured by paragraph 7 of Article XXIV (Elimination of Double Taxation).

Paragraph 2 contrasts with paragraph 1 of the Protocol to the 1942 Convention, which refers to "Dominion income taxes." In addition, unlike the 1942 Convention, the Convention does not contain a reference to "surtaxes and excess-profits taxes."

Paragraph 3 provides that the Convention also applies to any taxes identical or substantially similar to the taxes on income in existence on September 26, 1980 which are imposed in addition to or in place of the taxes existing on that date. Similarly, taxes on capital imposed after that date are to be covered.

It was agreed that Part I of the Income Tax Act of Canada would meet the requirements of paragraph 3(a) if Canada were to enact a low flat rate tax on resource revenues which would not be deductible in computing income under Part I. This agreement is not intended to have implications for any other convention or for the interpretation of Code section 901 and 903. Further, the flat rate tax would not be a tax described in paragraphs 2 or 3. After Canada proposed enactment of an eight percent tax on oil and gas production revenues, it was confirmed that this tax was consistent with the understanding reached during the negotiations.

Paragraph 4 provides that, notwithstanding paragraphs 2 and 3, the Convention applies to certain United States taxes for certain specified purposes: the accumulated earnings tax and personal holding company tax are covered only to the extent necessary to implement the provisions of paragraphs 5 and 8 of Article X (Dividends); the excise taxes imposed with respect to private foundations are covered only to the extent necessary to implement the provisions of paragraph 4 of Article XXI (Exempt Organizations); and the social security taxes imposed under sections 1401, 3101, and 3111 of the Code are covered only to the extent necessary to implement the provisions of paragraph 4 of Article XXIX (Miscellaneous Rules). The pertinent provisions of Articles X, XXI, and XXIX are described below. Canada had no national taxes similar to the United States accumulated earnings tax, personal holding company tax, or excise taxes imposed with respect to private foundations.

Article II does not specifically refer to interest, fines and penalties. Thus, each Contracting State may, in general, impose interest, fines, and penalties or pay interest pursuant to its domestic laws. Any question whether such items are being imposed or paid in connection with covered taxes in a manner consistent with provisions of the Convention, such as Article XXV (Non-Discrimination), may, however, be resolved by the competent authorities pursuant to Article XXVI (Mutual Agreement Procedure). See, however, the discussion below of the treatment of certain interest under Articles XXIX (Miscellaneous Rules) and XXX (Entry Into Force).

Article III. GENERAL DEFINITIONS

Article III provides definitions and general rules of interpretation for the Convention. Paragraph 1(a) states that the term "Canada," when used in a geographical sense, means the territory of Canada, including any area beyond the territorial seas of Canada which, under international law and the laws of Canada, is an area within which Canada may exercise rights with respect to the seabed and subsoil and their natural resources. This definition differs only in form from the definition of Canada in the 1942 Convention; paragraph 1(a) omits the reference in the 1942 Convention to "the Provinces, the Territories and Sable Island" as unnecessary.

Paragraph 1(b)(i) defines the term "United States" to mean the United States of America. The term does not include Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Guam, or any other United States possession or territory.

Paragraph 1(b)(ii) states that when the term "United States" is used in a geographical sense the term also includes any area beyond the territorial seas of the United States which, under international law and the laws of the United States, is an area within which the United States may exercise rights with respect to the seabed and subsoil and their natural resources.

Paragraph 1(c) defines the term "Canadian tax" to mean the taxes imposed by the Government of Canada under Parts I, XIII, and XIV of the Income Tax Act as in existence on September 26, 1980 and any identical or substantially similar taxes on income imposed by the Government of Canada after that date and which are in addition to or in place of the then existing taxes. The term does not extend to capital taxes, if and when such taxes are ever imposed by Canada.

Paragraph 1(d) defines the term "United States tax" to mean the Federal income taxes imposed by the Internal Revenue Code as in existence on September 26, 1980 and any identical or substantially similar taxes on income imposed by the United States after that date in addition to or in place of the then existing taxes. The term does not extend to capital taxes, nor to the United States taxes identified in paragraph 4 of Article II (Taxes Covered).

Paragraph 1(e) provides that the term "person" includes an individual, an estate, a trust, a company, and any other body of persons. Although both the United States and Canada do not regard partnerships as taxable entities, the definition in the paragraph is broad enough to include partnerships where necessary.

Paragraph 1(f) defines the term "company" to mean any body corporate or any entity which is treated as a body corporate for tax purposes.

The term "competent authority" is defined in paragraph 1(g) to mean, in the case of Canada, the Minister of National Revenue or his authorized representative and, in the case of the United States, the Secretary of the Treasury or his delegate. The Secretary of the Treasury has delegated the general authority to act as competent authority to the Commissioner of the Internal Revenue Service, who has redelegated such authority to the Assistant Commissioner (Compliance) with the concurrence, in certain cases, of the Assistant Commissioner (Technical). The Assistant Commissioner (Compliance) has redelegated authority to the Director of International Operations to administer programs for routine and specific exchanges of information and mutual assistance in collection and to the Director, Examination Division, to administer programs for simultaneous and industrial exchanges of information.

Paragraph 1(h) defines the term "international traffic" to mean any voyage of a ship or aircraft to transport passengers or property, except where the principal purpose of the voyage is transport between points within a Contracting State. A voyage of a ship or aircraft that includes stops in both Contracting States may thus not be international traffic if the principal purpose of the voyage is to transport passengers or property within a Contracting State.

Paragraph 1(i) defines the term "State" to mean any national State, whether or not a Contracting State.

Paragraph 1(j) establishes "the 1942 Convention" as the term to be used throughout the Convention for referring to the pre-existing income tax treaty relationship between the United States and Canada.

Paragraph 2 provides that, in the case of a term not defined in the Convention, the domestic tax law of the Contracting State applying to the Convention shall control, unless the context in which the term is used requires a definition independent of domestic tax law or the competent authorities reach agreement on a meaning pursuant to Article XXVI (Mutual Agreement Procedure). The term "context" refers to the purpose and background of the provision in which the term appears.

Pursuant to the provisions of Article XXVI, the competent authorities of the Contracting States may resolve any difficulties or doubts as to the interpretation or application of the Convention. An agreement by the competent authorities with respect to the meaning of a term used in the Convention would supersede conflicting meanings in the domestic laws of the Contracting States.

Article IV. RESIDENCE

Article IV provides a detailed definition of the term "resident of a Contracting State." The definition begins with a person's liability to tax as a resident under the respective taxation laws of the Contracting States. A person who, under those laws, is a resident of one Contracting State and not the other need look no further. However, the Convention definition is also designed to assign residence to one State or the other for purposes of the Convention in circumstances where each of the Contracting States believes a person to be its resident. The Convention definition is, of course, exclusively for purposes of the Convention.

Paragraph 1 provides that the term "resident of a Contracting State" means any person who, under the laws of that State, is liable to tax therein by reason of his domicile, residence, place of management, place of incorporation, or any other criterion of a similar nature. The phrase "any other criterion of a similar nature" includes, for U.S. purposes, an election under the Code to be treated as a U.S. resident. An estate or trust is, however, considered to be a resident of a Contracting State only to the extent that income derived by such estate or trust is liable to tax in that State either in its hands or in the hands of its beneficiaries. To the extent that an estate or trust is considered a resident of a Contracting State under this provision, it can be a "beneficial owner" of items of income specified in other articles of the Convention—e.g., paragraph 2 of Article X (Dividends).

Paragraphs 2, 3, and 4 provide rules to determine a single residence for purposes of the Convention for persons resident in both Contracting States under the rules set forth in paragraph 1. Paragraph 2 deals with individuals. A "dual resident" individual is initially deemed to be a resident of the Contracting State in which he has a permanent home available to him. If the individual has a permanent home available to him in both States or in neither, he is deemed to be a resident of the Contracting State with which his personal and economic relations are closer. If the personal and economic relations of an individual are not closer to one Contracting State than to the other, the individual is deemed to be a resident of the Contracting State in which he has an habitual abode. If he has such an abode in both States or in neither State, he is deemed to be a resident of the Contracting State of which he is a citizen. If the individual is a citizen of both States or of neither, the competent authorities are to settle the status of the individual by mutual agreement.

Paragraph 3 provides that if, under the provisions of paragraph 1, a company is a resident of both Canada and the United States, then it shall be deemed to be a resident of the State under whose laws (including laws of political subdivisions) it was created. Paragraph 3 does not refer to the State in which a company is organized, thus making clear that the tie-breaker rule for a company is controlled by the State of the company's original creation. Various jurisdictions may allow local incorporation of an entity that is already organized and incorporated under the laws of another country. Paragraph 3 provides certainty in both the United States and Canada with respect to the treatment of such an entity for purposes of the Convention.

Paragraph 4 provides that where, by reason of the provisions of paragraph 1, an estate, trust, or other person, other than an individual or a company, is a resident of both Contracting States, the competent authorities of the States shall by mutual agreement endeavor to settle the question and determine the mode of application of the Convention to such person. This delegation of authority to the competent authorities complements the provisions of Article XXVI (Mutual Agreement Procedure), which implicitly grant such authority.

Paragraph 5 provides a special rule for certain government employees, their spouses, and dependent children. An individual is deemed to be a resident of a Contracting State if he is an employee of that State or of a political subdivision, local authority, or instrumentality of that State, is rendering services in the discharge of functions of a governmental nature in any State, and is subjected in the first-mentioned State to "similar obligations" in respect of taxes on income as are residents of the first-mentioned State. Paragraph 5 provides further that a spouse and dependent children residing with a government employee and also subject to "similar obligations" in respect of income taxes as residents of the first-mentioned State are also deemed to be residents of that State. Paragraph 5 overrides the normal tie-breaker rule of paragraph 2. A U.S. citizen or resident who is an employee of the U.S. government in a foreign country or who is a spouse or dependent of such employee is considered to be subject in the United States to "similar obligations" in respect of taxes on income as those imposed on residents of the United States, notwithstanding that such person may be entitled to the benefits currently allowed by sections 911, 912, or 913 of the Code.

Article V. PERMANENT ESTABLISHMENT

Paragraph 1 provides that for the purposes of the Convention the term "permanent establishment" means a fixed place of business through which the business of a resident of a Contracting State is wholly or partly carried on. Article V does not use the term "enterprise of a Contracting State," which appears in the 1942 Convention. Thus, paragraph 1 avoids introducing an additional term into the Convention. The omission of the term is not intended to have any implications for the interpretation of the 1942 Convention.

Paragraph 2 provides that the term "permanent establishment" includes especially a place of management, a branch, an office, a factory, a workshop, and a mine, oil or gas well, quarry, or any other place of extraction of natural resources. Paragraph 3 adds that a building site or construction or installation project constitutes a permanent establishment if and only if it lasts for more than 12 months. Paragraph 4 provides that a permanent establishment exists in a Contracting State if the use of a drilling rig or drilling ship in that State to explore for or exploit natural resources lasts for more than 3 months in any 12 month period, but not if such activity exists for a lesser period of time.

Paragraph 5 provides that a person acting in a Contracting State on behalf of a resident of the other Contracting State is deemed to be a permanent establishment of the resident if such person has and habitually exercises in the first-mentioned State the authority to conclude contracts in the name of the resident. This rule does not apply to an agent of independent status, covered by paragraph 7. Under the provisions of paragraph 5, a permanent establishment may exist even in the absence of a fixed place of business. If, however, the activities of a person described in paragraph 5 are limited to the ancillary activities described in paragraph 6, then a permanent establishment does not exist solely on account of the person's activities.

There are a number of minor differences between the provisions of paragraphs 1 through 5 and the analogous provisions of the 1942 Convention. One important deviation is elimination of the rule of the 1942 Convention which deems a permanent establishment to exist in any circumstance where a resident of one State uses substantial equipment in the other State for any period of time. The Convention thus generally raises the threshold for source basis taxation of activities that involve substantial equipment (and that do not otherwise constitute a permanent establishment). Another deviation of some significance is elimination of the rule of the 1942 Convention that considers a permanent establishment to exist where a resident of one State carries on business in the other State through an agent or employee who has a stock of merchandise from which he regularly fills orders that he receives. The convention provides that a person other than an agent of independent status who is engaged solely in the maintenance of a stock of goods or merchandise belonging to a resident of the other State for the purpose of storage, display or delivery does not constitute a permanent establishment.

Paragraph 6 provides that a fixed place of business used solely for, or an employee described in paragraph 5 engaged solely in, certain specified activities is not a permanent establishment, notwithstanding the provisions of paragraphs 1, 2, and 5. The specified activities are: a) the use of facilities for the purpose of storage, display, or delivery of goods or merchandise belonging to the resident whose business is being carried on; b) the maintenance of a stock of goods or merchandise belonging to the resident for the purpose of storage, display, or delivery; c) the maintenance of a stock of goods or merchandise belonging to the resident for the purpose of processing by another person; d) the purchase of goods or merchandise, or the collection of information, for the resident; and e) advertising, the supply of information, scientific research, or similar activities which have a preparatory or auxiliary character, for the resident. Combinations of the specified activities have the same status as any one of the activities. The reference in paragraph 6(e) to specific activities does not imply that any other particular activities—for example, the servicing of a patent or a know-how contract or the inspection of the implementation of engineering plans—do not fall within the scope of paragraph 6(e) provided that, based on the facts and circumstances, such activities have a preparatory of auxiliary character.

Paragraph 7 provides that a resident of a Contracting State is not deemed to have a permanent establishment in the other Contracting State merely because such resident carries on business in the other State through a broker, general commission agent, or any other agent of independent status, provided that such persons are acting in the ordinary course of their business.

Paragraph 8 states that the fact that a company which is a resident of one Contracting State controls or is controlled by a company which is either a resident of the other Contracting State, whether through a permanent establishment or otherwise, does not automatically render either company a permanent establishment of the other.

Paragraph 9 provides that, for purposes of the Convention, the provisions of Article V apply in determining whether any person has a permanent establishment in any State. Thus, these provisions would determine whether a person other than a resident of Canada or the United States has a permanent establishment in Canada or the United States, and whether a person resident in Canada or the United States has a permanent establishment in a third State.

Article VI. INCOME FROM REAL PROPERTY

Paragraph 1 provides that income derived by a resident of a Contracting State from real property situated in the other Contracting State may be taxed by that other State. Income from real property includes, for purposes of Article VI, income from agriculture or forestry. Also, while "income derived . . . from real property" includes income from rights such as an overriding royalty or a net profits interest in a natural resource, it does not include income in the form of rights to explore for or exploit natural resources which a party receives as compensation for services (e.g., exploration services); the latter income is subject to the provisions of Article VII (Business Profits), XIV (Independent Personal Services), or XV (Dependent Personal Services), as the case may be. As provided by paragraph 3, paragraph 1 applies to income derived from the direct use, letting or use in any other form of real property and to income from the alienation of such property.

Generally speaking, the term "real property" has the meaning which it has under the taxation laws of the Contracting State in which the property in question is situated, in accordance with paragraph 2. In any case, the term includes any option or similar right in respect of real property, the usufruct of real property, and rights to explore for or to exploit mineral deposits, sources, and other natural resources. The reference to "rights to explore for or to exploit mineral deposits, sources and other natural resources" includes rights generating either variable or fixed payments. The term "real property" does not include ships and aircraft.

Unlike Article XIII A of the 1942 Convention, Article VI does not contain an election to allow a resident of a Contracting State to compute tax on income from real property situated in the other State on a net basis. Both the Internal Revenue Code and the Income Tax Act of Canada generally allow for net basis taxation with respect to real estate rental income, although Canada does not permit such an election for natural resource royalties. Also, unlike the 1942 Convention which in Article XI imposes a 15 percent limitation on the source basis taxation of rental or royalty income from real property, Article VI of the Convention allows a Contracting State to impose tax on such income under its internal law. In Canada the rate of tax on resource royalties is 25 percent of the gross amount of the royalty, if the income is not attributable to a permanent establishment in Canada under the Convention.

Article VII. BUSINESS PROFITS

Paragraph 1 provides that business profits of a resident of a Contracting State are taxable only in that State unless the resident carries on business in the other Contracting State through a permanent establishment situated in that other State. If the resident carries on, or has carried on, business through such a permanent establishment, the other State may tax such business profits but only so much of them as are attributable to the permanent establishment. The reference to a prior permanent establishment ("or has carried on") makes clear that a Contracting State in which a permanent establishment existed has the right to tax the business profits attributable to that permanent establishment, even if there is a delay in the receipt or accrual of such profits until after the permanent establishment has been terminated.

Any business profits received or accrued in taxable years in which the Convention has effect, in accordance with Article XXX (Entry Into Force), which are attributable to a permanent establishment that was previously terminated are subject to tax in the Contracting State in which such permanent establishment existed under the provisions of Article VII.

Paragraph 2 provides that where a resident of either Canada or the United States carries on business in the other Contracting State through a permanent establishment in that other State, both Canada and the United States shall attribute to that permanent establishment business profits which the permanent establishment might be expected to make if it were a distinct and separate person engaged in the same or similar activities under the same or similar conditions and dealing wholly independently with the resident and with any other person related to the resident. The term "related to the resident" is to be interpreted in accordance with paragraph 2 of Article IX (Related Persons). The reference to other related persons is intended to make clear that the test of paragraph 2 is not restricted to independence between a permanent establishment and a home office.

Paragraph 3 provides that, in determining business profits of a permanent establishment, there are to be allowed as deductions those expenses which are incurred for the purposes of the permanent establishment, including executive and administrative expenses, whether incurred in the State in which the permanent establishment is situated or in any other State. However, nothing in the paragraph requires Canada or the United States to allow a deduction for any expenditure which would not generally be allowed as a deduction under its taxation laws. The language of this provision differs from that of paragraph 1 of Article III of the 1942 Convention, which states that in the determination of net industrial and commercial profits of a permanent establishment there shall be allowed as deductions "all expenses, wherever incurred" as long as such expenses are reasonably allocable to the permanent establishment. Paragraph 3 of Article VII of the Convention is not intended to have any implications for interpretation of the 1942 Convention, but is intended to assure that under the Convention deductions are allowed by a Contracting State which are generally allowable by that State.

Paragraph 4 provides that no business profits are to be attributed to a permanent establishment of a resident of a Contracting State by reason of the use of the permanent establishment for merely purchasing goods or merchandise or merely providing executive, managerial, or administrative facilities or services for the resident. Thus, if a company resident in a Contracting State has a permanent establishment in the other State, and uses the permanent establishment for the mere performance of stewardship of other managerial services carried on for the benefit of the resident, this activity will not result in profits being attributed to the permanent establishment.

Paragraph 5 provides that business profits are to be attributed to a permanent establishment by the same method in every taxable period unless there is good and sufficient reason to change such method. In the United States, such a change may be a change in accounting method requiring the approval of the Internal Revenue Service.

Paragraph 6 explains the relationship between the provisions of Article VII and other provisions of the Convention. Where business profits include items of income which are dealt with separately in other Articles of the Convention, those other Articles are controlling.

Paragraph 7 provides a definition for the term "attributable to." Profits "attributable to" a permanent establishment are those derived from the assets or activities of the permanent establishment. Paragraph 7 does not preclude Canada or the United States from using appropriate domestic tax law rules of attribution. The "attributable to" definition does not, for example, preclude a taxpayer from using the rules of section 1.864-4(c)(5) of the Treasury Regulations to assure for U.S. tax purposes that interest arising in the United States is attributable to a permanent establishment in the United States. (Interest arising outside the United States is attributable to a permanent establishment in the United States based on the principles of Regulations sections 1.864-5 and 1.864-6 and Revenue Ruling 75-253, 1975-2 C.B. 203.) Income that would be taxable under the Code and that is "attributable to" a permanent establishment under paragraph 7 is taxable pursuant to Article VII, however, even if such income might under the Code be treated as fixed or determinable annual or periodical gains or income not effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States. The "attributable to" definition means that the limited "force-of-attraction" rule of Code section 864(c)(3) does not apply for U.S. tax purposes under the Convention.

Article VIII. TRANSPORTATION

Paragraph 1 provides that profits derived by a resident of a Contracting State from the operation of ships or aircraft in international traffic are exempt from tax in the other Contracting State, even if, under Article VII (Business Profits), such profits are attributable to a permanent establishment. Paragraph 1 also provides that gains derived by a resident of a Contracting State from the alienation of ships or aircraft used principally in international traffic are exempt from tax in the other Contracting State even if, under Article XIII (Gains), those gains would be taxable in that other State. These rules differ from Article V of the 1942 Convention, which conditions the exemption in the State of source on registration of the ship or aircraft in the other State.

Paragraph 2(a) provides that profits covered by paragraph 1 include profits from the rental of ships or aircraft operated in international traffic. Such rental profits are included whether the rental is on a time, voyage, or bareboat basis, and irrespective of the State of residence of the operator.

Paragraph 2(b) provides that profits covered by paragraph 1 include profits derived from the use, maintenance or rental of containers, including trailers and related equipment for the transport of containers, if such containers are used in international traffic.

Paragraph 2(c) provides that profits covered by paragraph 1 include profits derived by a resident of a Contracting State from the rental of ships, aircraft, or containers (including trailers and related equipment for the transport of containers), even if not operated in international traffic, as long as such profits are incidental to profits of such person referred to in paragraphs 1, 2(a), or 2(b).

To the extent that profits described in paragraph 2 would also fall within Article XII (Royalties) (e.g., rent from the lease of a container), the provisions of Article VIII are controlling.

Paragraph 3 states that profits derived by a resident of a Contracting State from a voyage of a ship where the principal purpose of the voyage is to transport passengers or property between points in the other Contracting State is taxable in that other State, whether or not the resident maintains a permanent establishment there. Paragraph 3 overrides the provisions of Article VII. Profits from such a voyage do not qualify for exemption under Article VIII by virtue of the definition of "international traffic" in paragraph 1(h) of Article III (General Definitions). However, profits from a similar voyage by aircraft are taxable in the Contracting State of source only if the profits are attributable to a permanent establishment maintained in that State.

Paragraph 4 provides that profits derived by a resident of a Contracting State engaged in the operation of motor vehicles or a railway as a common carrier or contract carrier, and attributable to the transportation of passengers or property between a point outside the other Contracting State and any other point are exempt from tax in that other State. In addition, profits of such a person from the rental of motor vehicles (including trailers) or railway rolling stock, or from the use, maintenance, or rental of containers (including trailers and related equipment for the transport of containers) used to transport passengers or property between a point outside the other Contracting State and any other point are exempt from tax in that other State.

Paragraph 5 provides that a resident of a Contracting State that participates in a pool, a joint business, or an international operating agency is subject to the provisions of paragraphs 1, 3, and 4 with respect to the profits or gains referred to in paragraphs, 1, 3, and 4.

Paragraph 6 states that profits derived by a resident of a Contracting State from the use, maintenance, or rental of railway rolling stock, motor vehicles, trailers, or containers (including trailers and related equipment for the transport of containers) used in the other Contracting State for a period not expected to exceed 183 days in the aggregate in any 12-month period are exempt from tax in that other State except to the extent that the profits are attributable to a permanent establishment, in which case the State of source has the right to tax under Article VII. The provisions of paragraph 6, unlike the provisions of paragraph 4, apply whether or not the resident is engaged in the operation of motor vehicles or a railway as a common carrier or contract carrier. Paragraph 6 overrides the provisions of Article XII (Royalties), which would otherwise permit taxation in the State of source in the circumstances described.

Gains from the alienation of motor vehicle and railway rolling stock derived by a resident of a Contracting State are not affected by paragraph 4 or 6. Such gains would be taxable in the other Contracting State, however, only if the motor vehicles or rolling stock formed part of a permanent establishment maintained there. See paragraphs 2 and 4 of Article XIII.

Article IX. RELATED PERSONS

Paragraph 1 authorizes Canada and the United States, as the case may be, to adjust the amount of income, loss, or tax payable by a person with respect to arrangements between that person and a related person in the other Contracting State. Such adjustment may be made when arrangements between related persons differ from those that would obtain between unrelated persons. The term "person" encompasses a company resident in a third State with, for example, a permanent establishment in a Contracting State.

Paragraph 2 provides that, for the purposes of Article IX, a person is deemed to be related to another person if either participates directly or indirectly in the management or control of the other or if any third person or persons participate directly or indirectly in the management or control of both. Thus, if a resident of any State controls directly or indirectly a company resident in Canada and a company resident in the United States, such companies are considered to be related persons for purposes of Article IX. Article IX and the definition of "related person" in paragraph 2 may encompass situations that would not be covered by provisions in the domestic laws of the Contracting States. Nor is the paragraph 2 definition controlling for the definition of "related person" or similar terms appearing in other Articles of the Convention. Those terms are defined as provided in paragraph 2 of Article III (General Definitions).

Paragraph 3 provides that where, pursuant to paragraph 1, an adjustment is made or to be made by a Contracting State, the other Contracting State shall make a corresponding adjustment to the income, loss, or tax of the related person in that other State, provided that the other State agrees with the adjustment and, within six years from the end of the taxable year of the person in the first State to which the adjustment relates, the competent authority of the other State has been notified in writing of the adjustment. The reference to an adjustment which "is made or to be made" does not require a Contracting State to formally propose an adjustment before paragraph 3 becomes pertinent. The notification required by paragraph 3 may be made by any of the related persons involved or by the competent authority of the State which makes or is to make the initial adjustment. The notification must give details regarding the adjustment sufficient to apprise the competent authority receiving the notification of the nature of the adjustment. If the requirements of paragraph 3 are complied with, the corresponding adjustment will be made by the other Contracting State notwithstanding any time or procedural limitations in the domestic law of that State.

Paragraph 4 provides that in a case where the other Contracting State has not been notified as provided in paragraph 3 and if the person whose income, loss, or tax is being adjusted has not received notification of the adjustment within five and one-half years from the end of its taxable year to which the adjustment relates, such adjustment shall not be made to the extent that the adjustment would give rise to double taxation between the United States and Canada. Again, the notification referred to in this paragraph need not be a formal adjustment, but it must be in writing and must contain sufficient details to permit the taxpayer to give the notification referred to in paragraph 3.

If, for example, the Internal Revenue Service proposes to make an adjustment to the income of a U.S. company pursuant to Code section 482, and the adjustment involves an allocation of income from a related Canadian company, the competent authority of Canada must receive written notification of the proposed IRS adjustment within six years from the end of the taxable year of the U.S. company to which the adjustment relates. If such notification is not received in timely fashion and if the U.S. company does not receive written notification of the adjustment from the IRS within 5½ years from the end of its relevent taxable year, the IRS will unilaterally recede on the proposed section 482 adjustment to the extent that this adjustment would otherwise give rise to double taxation between the United States and Canada. The Internal Revenue Service will determine whether and to what extent the adjustment would give rise to double taxation with respect to income arising in Canada by examining the relevant facts and circumstances such as the amount of foreign tax credits attributable to Canadian taxes paid by the U.S. company, includng any carryovers and credits for deemed paid taxes.

Paragraph 5 provides that neither a corresponding adjustment described in paragraph 3 nor the cancelling of an adjustment described in paragraph 4 will be made in any case of fraud, willful default, neglect, or gross negligence on the part of the taxpayer or any related person.

Paragraphs 3 and 4 of Article IX are exceptions to the "saving clause" contained in paragraph 2 of Article XXIX (Miscellaneous Rules), as provided in paragraph 3(a) of Article XXIX. Paragraphs 3 and 4 of Article IX apply to adjustments made or to be made with respect to taxable years for which the Convention has effect as provided in paragraphs 2 and 5 of Article XXX (Entry Into Force).

Article X. DIVIDENDS

Paragraph 1 allows a Contracting State to impose tax on its residents with respect to dividends paid by a company which is a resident of the other Contracting State.

Paragraph 2 limits the amount of tax that may be imposed on such dividends by the Contracting State in which the company paying the dividends is resident if the beneficial owner of the dividends is a resident of the other Contracting State. The limitation is 10 percent of the gross amount of the dividends if the beneficial owner is a company that owns 10 percent or more of the voting stock of the company paying the dividends; and 15 percent of the gross amount of the dividends in all other cases. Paragraph 2 does not impose any restrictions with respect to taxation of the profits out of which the dividends are paid.

Paragraph 3 defines the term "dividends," as the term is used in this Article. Each Contracting State is permitted to apply its domestic law rules for differentiating dividends from interest and other disbursements.

Paragraph 4 provides that the limitations of paragraph 2 do not apply if the beneficial owner of the dividends carries on business in the State in which the company paying the dividends is a resident through a permanent establishment or fixed base situated there, and the stockholding in respect of which the dividends are paid is effectively connected with such permanent establishment or fixed base. In such a case, the dividends are taxable pursuant to the provisions of Article VII (Business Profits) or Article XIV (Independent Personal Services), as the case may be. Thus, dividends paid in respect of holdings forming part of the assets of a permanent establishment or fixed base or which are otherwise effectively connected with such permanent establishment or fixed base (i.e., dividends attributable to the permanent establishment or fixed base) will be taxed on a net basis using the rates and rules of taxation generally applicable to residents of the State in which the permanent establishment or fixed base is situated.

Paragraph 5 imposes limitations on the right of Canada or the United States, as the case may be, to impose tax on dividends paid by a company which is a resident of the other Contracting State. The State in which the company is not resident may not tax such dividends except insofar as they are paid to a resident of that State or the holding in respect of which the dividends are paid is effectively connected with a permanent establishment or fixed base in that State. In the case of the United States, such dividends may also be taxed in the hands of a U.S. citizen and certain former citizens, pursuant to the "saving clause" of paragraph 2 of Article XXIX (Miscellaneous Rules). In addition, the Contracting State in which the company is not resident may not subject such company's undistributed profits to any tax. See, however, paragraphs 6, 7, and 8 which, in certain circumstances, qualify the rules of paragraph 5. Neither paragraph 5 nor any other provision of the Convention restricts the ability of the United States to apply the provisions of the Code concerning foreign personal holding companies and controlled foreign corporations.

Paragraph 6 provides that, notwithstanding paragraph 5, a Contracting State in which is maintained a permanent establishment or permanent establishments of a company resident in the other Contracting State may impose tax on such company's earnings, in addition to the tax that would be charged on the earnings of a company resident in that State. The additional tax may not, however, exceed 10 percent of the amount of the earnings which have not been subjected to such additional tax in previous taxation years. Thus, Canada, which has a branch profits tax in force, may impose that tax up to the 10 percent limitation in the case of a United States company with one or more permanent establishments in Canada. This branch profits tax may be imposed notwithstanding other rules of the Convention, including paragraph 6 of Article XXV (Non-Discrimination).

For purposes of paragraph 6, the term "earnings" means the excess of business profits attributable to all permanent establishments for a year and previous years over the sum of: a) business losses attributable to such permanent establishments for such years; b) all taxes on profits, whether or not covered by the Convention (e.g., provincial taxes on profits and provincial resource royalties (which Canada considers "taxes") in excess of the mineral resource allowance provided for under the law of Canada), other than the additional tax referred to in paragraph 6; c) profits reinvested in such State; and d) $500,000 (Canadian, or its equivalent in U.S. dollars) less any amounts deducted under paragraph 6(d) with respect to the same or a similar business by the company or an associated company. The deduction under paragraph 6(d) is available as of the first year for which the Convention has effect, regardless of the prior earnings and tax expenses, if any, of the permanent establishment. The $500,000 deduction is taken into account after other deductions, and is permanent. For the purpose of paragraph 6, references to business profits and business losses gains and losses from the alienation of property forming part of the business property of a permanent establishment. The term "associated company" includes a company which directly or indirectly controls another company or two companies directly or indirectly controlled by the same person or persons, as well as any two companies that deal with each other not at arm's length. This definition differs from the definition of "related persons" in paragraph 2 of Article IX (Related Persons).

Paragraph 7 provides that, notwithstanding paragraph 5, a Contracting State that does not impose a branch profits tax as described in paragraph 6 (i.e., under current law, the United States) may tax a dividend paid by a company which is a resident of the other Contracting State if at least 50 percent of the company's gross income from all sources was included in the computation of business profits attributable to one or more permanent establishments which such company had in the first-mentioned State. The dividend subject to such a tax must, however, be attributable to profits earned by the company in taxable years beginning after September 26, 1980 and the 50 percent test must be met for the three-year period preceding the taxable year of the company in which the dividend is declared (including years ending on or before September 26, 1980) or such shorter period as the company had been in existence prior to that taxable year. Dividends will be deemed to be distributed, for purposes of paragraph 7, first out of profits of the taxation year of the company in which the distribution is made and then out of the profits of the preceding year or years of the company. Paragraph 7 provides further that if a resident of the other Contracting state is the beneficial owner of such dividends, any tax imposed under paragraph 7 is subject to the 10 or 15 percent limitation of paragraph 2 or the rules of paragraph 4 (providing for dividends to be taxed as business profits or income from independent personal services), as the case may be.

Paragraph 8 provides that, notwithstanding paragraph 5, a company which is a resident of Canada and which, absent the provisions of the Convention, has income subject to tax by the United States may be liable for the United States accumulated earnings tax and personal holding company tax. These taxes can be applied, however, only if 50 percent or more in value of the outstanding voting shares of the company is owned, directly or indirectly, throughout the last half of its taxable year by residents of a third State or by citizens or residents of the United States, other than citizens of Canada who are resident in the United States but who either do not have immigrant status in the United States or who have not been resident in the United States for more than three taxable years. The accumulated earnings tax is applied to accumulated taxable income calculated without the benefits of the Convention. Similarly, the personal holding company tax is applied to undistributed personal holding company income computed as if the Convention had not come into force.

Article X does not apply to dividends paid by a company which is not a resident of either Contracting State. Such dividends, if they are income of a resident of one of the Contracting States, are subject to tax as provided in Article XXII (Other Income).

Article XI. INTEREST

Paragraph 1 allows interest arising in Canada or the United States and paid to a resident of the other State to be taxed in the latter State. Paragraph 2 provides that such interest may also be taxed in the Contracting State where it arises, but if a resident of the other Contracting State is the beneficial owner, the tax imposed by the State of source is limited to 15 percent of the gross amount of the interest.

Paragraph 3 provides a number of exceptions to the right of the source State to impose a 15 percent tax under paragraph 2. The following types of interest beneficially owned by a resident of a Contracting State are exempt from tax in the State of source: [illegible]) interest beneficially owned by a Contracting State, a political subdivision, or a local authority thereof, or an instrumentality of such State, subdivision, or authority, which interest is not subject to tax by such state; b) interest beneficially owned by a resident of a Contracting State and paid with respect to debt obligations issued at arm's length which are guaranteed or insured by such State or a political subdivision thereof, or by an instrumentality of such State or subdivision (not by a local authority or an instrumentality thereof), but only if the guarantor or insurer is not subject to tax by that State; c) interest paid by a Contracting State, a political subdivision, or a local authority thereof, or by an instrumentality of such State, subdivision, or authority, but only if the payor is not subject to tax by such State; and d) interest beneficially owned by a seller of equipment, merchandise, or services, but only if the interest is paid in connection with a sale on credit of equipment, merchandise, or services and the sale was made at arm's length. Whether such a transaction is made at arm's length will be determined in the United States under the facts and circumstances. The relationship between the parties is a factor, but not the only factor, taken into account in making this determination. Furthermore, interest paid by a company resident in the other Contracting State with respect to an obligation entered into before September 26, 1980 is exempt from tax in the State of source (irrespective of the State of residence of the beneficial owner), provided that such interest would have been exempt from tax in the Contracting State of source under Article XII of the 1942 Convention. Thus, interest paid by a United States corporation whose business is not managed and controlled in Canada to a recipient not resident in Canada or to a corporation not managed and controlled in Canada would be exempt from Canadian tax as long as the debt obligation was entered into before September 26, 1980. The phrase "not subject to tax by that . . . State" in paragraph 3(a), (b), and (c) refers to taxation at the Federal levels of Canada and the United States.

The phrase "obligation entered into before the date of signature of this Convention" means: (1) any obligation under which funds were dispersed prior to September 26, 1980; (2) any obligation under which funds are dispersed on or after September 26, 1980, pursuant to a written contract binding prior to and on such date, and at all times thereafter until the obligation is satisfied; or (3) any obligation with respect to which, prior to September 26, 1980, a lender had taken every action to signify approval under procedures ordinarily employed by such lender in similar transactions and had sent or deposited for delivery to the person to whom the loan is to be made written evidence of such approval in the form of a document setting forth, or referring to a document sent by the person to whom the loan is to be made that sets forth, the principal terms of such loan.

Paragraph 4 defines the term "interest," as used in Article XI, to include, among other things, debt claims of every kind as well as income assimilated to income from money lent by the taxation laws of the Contracting State in which the income arises. In no event, however, is income dealt with in Article X (Dividends) to be considered interest.

Paragraph 5 provides that neither the 15 percent limitation on tax in the Contracting State of source provided in paragraph 2 nor the various exemptions from tax in such State provided in paragraph 3 apply if the beneficial owner of the interest is a resident of the other Contracting State carrying on business in the State of source through a permanent establishment or fixed base, and the debt claim in respect of which the interest is paid is effectively connected with such permanent establishment or fixed base (i.e., the interest is attributable to the permanent establishment or fixed base). In this case, interest income is to be taxed in the Contracting State of source as business profits—that is, on a net basis.

Paragraph 6 establishes the source of interest for purposes of Article XI. Interest is considered to arise in a Contracting State if the payer is that State, or a political subdivision, local authority, or resident of that State. However, in cases where the person paying the interest, whether a resident of a Contracting State or of a third State, has in a State other than that of which he is a resident a permanent establishment or fixed base in connection with which the indebtedness on which the interest was paid was incurred, and such interest is borne by the permanent establishment or fixed base, then such interest is deemed to arise in the State in which the permanent establishment or fixed base is situated and not in the State of the payer's residence. Thus, pursuant to paragraphs 6 and 2, and Article XXII (Other Income), Canadian tax will not be imposed on interest paid to a U.S. resident by a company resident in Canada if the indebtedness is incurred in connection with, and the interest is borne by, a permanent establishment of the company situated in a third State. "Borne by" means allowable as a deduction in computing taxable income.

Paragraph 7 provides that in cases involving special relationships between persons Article XI does not apply to amounts in excess of the amount which would have been agreed upon between persons having no special relationship; any such excess amount remains taxable according to the laws of Canada and the United States, consistent with any revelant provisions of the Convention.

Paragraph 8 restricts the right of a Contracting State to impose tax on interest paid by a resident of the other Contracting State. The first State may not impose any tax on such interest except insofar as the interest is paid to a resident of that State or arises in that State or the debt claim in respect of which the interest is paid is effectively connected with a permanent establishment or fixed base situated in that State. Thus, pursuant to paragraph 8 the United States has agreed not to impose tax on certain interest paid by Canadian companies to persons not resident in the United States, to the extent that such companies would pay U.S. source interest under Code section 861(a)(1)(C) but not under the source rule of paragraph 6. It is to be noted that paragraph 8 is subject to the "saving clause" of paragraph 2 of Article XXIX (Miscellaneous Rules), so the United States may in all events impose its tax on interest received by U.S. citizens.

Article XII. ROYALTIES

Generally speaking, under the 1942 Convention royalties, including royalties with respect to motion picture films, which are derived by a resident of one Contracting State from sources within the other Contracting State are taxed at a maximum rate of 15 percent in the latter State; copyright royalties are exempt from tax in the State of source, if the resident does not have a permanent establishment in that State. See Articles II, III, XIII C, and paragraph 1 of Article XI of the 1942 Convention, and paragraph 6(a) of the Protocol to the 1942 Convention.

Paragraph 1 of Article XII of the Convention provides that a Contracting State may tax its residents with respect to royalties arising in the other Contracting State. Paragraph 2 provides that such royalties may also be taxed in the Contracting State in which they arise, but that if a resident of the other Contracting State is the beneficial owner of the royalties the tax in the Contracting State of source is limited to 10 percent of the gross amount of the royalties. Paragraph 3 provides that, notwithstanding paragraph 2, copyright royalties and other like payments in respect of the production or reproduction of any literary, dramatic, musical, or artistic work, including royalties from such works on videotape cassettes for private (home) use, if beneficially owned by a resident of the other Contracting State, may not be taxed by the Contracting State of source. This exemption at source does not apply to royalties in respect of motion picture films and works on film or videotape for use in connection with television broadcasting. Such royalties are subject to tax at a maximum rate of 10 percent in the Contracting State in which they arise, as provided in paragraph 2 (unless the provisions of paragraph 5, described below, apply).

Paragraph 4 defines the term "royalties" for purposes of Article XII. "Royalties" means payments of any kind received as consideration for the use of the right to use any copright of literary, artistic, or scientific work, including motion picture films and works on film or videotape for private (home) use or for use in connection with television broadcasting, any patent, trademark, design or model, plan, secret formula or process, or any payment for the use of or the right to use tangible personal property or for information concerning industrial, commercial, or scientific experience. The term "royalties" also includes gains from the alienation of any intangible property or rights described in paragraph 4 to the extent that such gains are contingent on the productivity, use, or subsequent disposition of such intangible property or rights. Thus, a guaranteed minimum payment derived from the alienation of (but not the use of) any right or property described in paragraph 4 is not a "royalty." Any amounts deemed contingent on use by reason of Code section 871(e) are, however, royalties under paragraph 2 of Article III (General Definitions), subject to Article XXVI (Mutual Agreement Procedure). The term "royalties" does not encompass management fees, which are covered by the provisions of Article VII (Business Profits) of XIV (Independent Personal Services), or payments under a bona fide cost-sharing arrangement. Technical service fees may be royalties in case where the fees are periodic and dependent upon productivity or a similar measure.

Paragraph 5 provides that the 10 percent limitation on tax in the Contracting State of source provided by paragraph 2, and the exemption in the Contracting State of source for certain copyright royalties provided by paragraph 3, do not apply if the beneficial owner of the royalties carries on business in the State of source through a permanent establishment or fixed base and the right or property in respect of which the royalties are paid is effectively connected with such permanent establishment or fixed base (i.e., the royalties are attributable to the permanent establishment or fixed base). In that event, the royalty income would be taxable under the provisions of Article VII (Business Profits) or XIV (Independent Personal Services), as the case may be.

Paragraph 6 establishes rules to determine the source of royalties for purposes of Article XII. The first rule is that royalties arise in a Contracting State when the payer is that State, or a political subdivision, local authority, or resident of that State. Notwithstanding that rule, royalties arise not in the State of the payer's residence but in any State, whether or not a Contracting State, in which is situated a permanent establishment or fixed base in connection with which the obligation to pay royalties was incurred, if such royalties are borne by such permanent establishment or fixed base. Thus, royalties paid to a resident of the United States by a company resident in Canada for the use of property in a third State will not be subject to tax in Canada if the obligation to pay the royalties is incurred in connection with, and the royalties are borne by, a permanent establishment of the company in a third State. "Borne by" means allowable as a deduction in computing taxable income.

A third rule, which overrides both the residence rule and the permanent establishment rule just described, provides that royalties for the use of intangible property or tangible personal property arise in the Contracting State in which such property is used. Thus, consistent with the provisions of Code section 861(a)(4), if a resident of a third State pays royalties to a resident of Canada for the right to use intangible property in the United States, such royalties are considered to arise in the United States and are subject to taxation by the United States consistent with the Convention. Similarly, if a resident of Canada pays royalties to a resident of a third State, such royalties are considered to arise in the United States and are subject to U.S. taxation if they are for the right to use intangible property in the United States. The term "intangible property" encompasses all the items described in paragraph 4, other than tangible personal property.

Paragraph 7 provides that in cases involving special relationships between persons the benefits of Article XII do not apply to amounts in excess of the amount which would have been agreed upon between persons with no special relationship; any such excess amount remains taxable according to the laws of Canada and the United States, consistent with any relevant provisions of the Convention.

Paragraph 8 restricts the right of a Contracting State to impose tax on royalties paid by a resident of the other Contracting State. The first State may not impose any tax on such royalties except insofar as they arise in that State or they are paid to a resident of that State or the right or property in respect of which the royalties are paid is effectively connected with a permanent establishment or fixed base situated in that State. This rule parallels the rule in paragraph 8 of Article XI (Interest) and paragraph 5 of Article X (Dividends). Again, U.S. citizens remain subject to U.S. taxation on royalties received despite this rule, by virtue of paragraph 2 of Article XXIX (Miscellaneous Rules).

Article XIII. GAINS

Paragraph 1 provides that Canada and the United States may each tax gains from the alienation of real property situated within that State which are derived by a resident of the other Contracting State. The term "real property" is defined for this purpose in paragraph 2 of Article VI (Income From Real Property). The term "alienation" used in paragraph 1 and other paragraphs of Article XIII means sales, exchanges and other dispositions or deemed dispositions (e.g., change of use, gifts, death) that are taxable events under the taxation laws of the Contracting State applying the provisions of the Article.

Paragraph 2 of Article XIII provides that the Contracting State in which a resident of the other Contracting State "has or had" a permanent establishment or fixed base may tax gains from the alienation of personal property constituting business property if such gains are attributable to such permanent establishment or fixed base. Unlike paragraph 1 of Article VII (Business Profits), paragraph 2 limits the right of the source State to tax such gains to a twelve-month period following the termination of the permanent establishment or fixed base.

Paragraph 3 authorizes the Contracting State of source to tax gains derived from the alienation of certain stock and other interests, if such interests ultimately reflect value derived from real property situated in that State. The right to tax in the State of source applies when there is an alienation of either shares forming part of a substantial interest in the capital stock of a company which is not a resident of the taxpayer's State of residence, or an interest in a partnership, trust, or estate, but only if the value of such shares or interest, as the case may be, is derived principally from real property in the Contracting State of source. The term "principally" means more than 50 percent. The right accorded to the State of source depends, however, on the domestic law in force in the Contracting State of residence. Thus, if at the time of alienation the latter State does not, by reason of its domestic law, impose tax upon gains derived from the alienation of a class of shares or interests (such as shares in companies which are not residents of that State), then the State of source may not impose tax in reciprocal circumstances.

Subparagraph (c) of paragraph 3 provides that the term "real property" as used in the paragraph, does not include property—other than mines, oil or gas wells, rental property, or property used for agriculture or forestry—in which a business is carried on. The term does include the shares of a company which derive their value principally from real property (wherever located) and an interest in a partnership, trust, or estate the direct disposition of which would be subject to tax under the paragraph. Thus, taxation in the Contracting State of source is preserved through several tiers of entities if the value of the shares or interest alienated is ultimately dependent principally upon real property in that State.

A "substantial interest" exists only if, on or after the effective date of the Convention provided in Article XXX (Entry Into Force), the resident and any persons related to him own 10 percent or more of the shares of any class of the captial stock of a company. It is the intention that once a "substantial interest" exists, all stock that is part of such "substantial interest" is covered by paragraph 3, even if the percentage of ownership declines to less than 10 percent. The term "related persons" is not defined by the rules of Article IX (Related Persons); rather, the term is defined pursuant to paragraph 2 of Article III (General Definitions).

Paragraph 4 reserves to the Contracting State of residence the sole right to tax gains from the alienation of any property other than property referred to in paragraphs 1, 2, and 3.

Paragraph 5 states that, despite paragraph 4, a Contracting State may impose tax on gains derived by an individual who is a resident of the other Contracting State if such individual was a resident of the first-mentioned State for 120 months (whether or not consecutive) during any period of 20 consecutive years, and was a resident of that State at any time during the 10-year period immediately preceding the alienation of the property.

Paragraph 6 provides a rule to coordinate Canadian and Unites States taxation of gains from the alienation of a principal residence situated in Canada. An individual (not a citizen of the United States) who was a resident of Canada and becomes a resident of the United States may determine his liability for U.S. income tax purposes in respect of gain from the alienation of a principal residence in Canada owned by him at the time he ceased to be a resident of Canada by claiming an adjusted basis for such residence in an amount no less than the fair market value of the residence at that time. Under paragraph 2(b) of Article XXX, the rule of paragraph 6 applies to gains realized for U.S. income tax purposes in taxable years beginning on or after the first day of January next following the date when instruments of ratification are exchanged, even if a particular individual described in paragraph 6 ceased to be a resident of Canada prior to such date. Paragraph 6 supplements any benefits available to a taxpayer pursuant to the provisions of Code section 1034.

Paragraph 7 provides a rule to coordinate U.S. and Canadian taxation of gains in circumstances where an individual is subject to tax in both Contracting States and one Contracting State deems a taxable alienation of property by such person to have occurred, while the other Contracting State at that time does not find a realization or recognition of income and thus defers, but does not forgive, taxation In such a case the individual may elect in his annual return of income for the year of such alienation to be liable to tax in the latter Contracting State as if he had sold and repurchased the property for an amount equal to its fair market value at a time immediately prior to the deemed alienation. The provision would, for example, apply in the case of a gift by a U.S. citizen or a U.S. resident individual which Canada deems to be an income producing event for its tax purposes but with respect to which the United States defers taxation while assigning the donor's basis to the donee. The provision would also apply in the case of a U.S. citizen who, for Canadian tax purposes, is deemed to recognize income upon his departure from Canada, but not to a Canadian resident (not a U.S. citizen) who is deemed to recognize such income. The rule does not apply in the case of death, although Canada also deems that to be a taxable event, because the United States in effect forgives income taxation of economic gains at death. If in one Contracting State there are losses and gains from deemed alienations of different properties, then paragraph 7 must be applied consistently in the other Contracting State within the taxable period with respect to all such properties. Paragraph 7 only applies, however, if the deemed alienations of the properties result in a net gain.

Paragraph 8 concerns the coordination of Canadian and U.S. rules with respect to the recognition of gain on corporate organizations, reorganizations, amalgamations, divisions, and similar transactions. Where a resident of a Contracting State alienates property in such a transaction, and profit, gain, or income with respect to such alienation is not recognized for income tax purposes in the Contracting State of residence, the competent authority of the other Contracting State may agree, pursuant to paragraph 8, if requested by the person who acquires the property, to defer recognition of the profit, gain, or income with respect to such property for income tax purposes. This deferral shall be for such time and under such other conditions as are stipulated between the person who acquires the property and the competent authority. The agreement of the competent authority of the State of source is entirely discretionary and will be granted only to the extent necessary to avoid double taxation of income. This provision means, for example, that the United States competent authority may agree to defer recognition of gain with respect to a transaction if the alienator would otherwise recognize gain for U.S. tax purposes and would not recognize gain under Canada's law. The provision only applies, however, if alienations described in paragraph 8 result in a net gain. In the absence of extraordinary circumstances the provisions of the paragraph must be applied consistently within a taxable period with respect to alienations described in the paragraph that take place within that period.

Paragraph 9 provides a transitional rule reflecting the fact that under Article VIII of the 1942 Convention gains from the sale or exchange of capital assets are exempt from taxation in the State of source provided the taxpayer had no permanent establishment in that State. Paragraph 9 applies to property that on September 26, 1980 was owned by a resident of the other Contracting if it did not form part of the business property of a permanent establishment or pertain to a fixed base in the State of source. Paragraph 9 applies to deemed dispositions. In addition, paragraph 9 applies to a gain described in paragraph 1, even though such gain is also income within the meaning of paragraph 3 of Article VI.

Paragraph 9 provides that where a resident of Canada or the United States is subject to tax pursuant to Article XIII in the other Contracting State on gains from the alienation of property, the amount of the gain shall be reduced for tax purposes in that other State by the amount of the gain attributable to the period during which the property was held up to and including December 31 of the year in which the documents of ratification are exchanged. The gain attributable to such period is normally determined by dividing the total gain by the number of full calendar months the property was held by such person, including, in the case of property having a carryover basis, the number of months in which a predecessor in interest held the property, and multiplying such monthly amount by the number of full calendar months ending on or before December 31 of the year in which the instruments of ratification are exchanged. In a case where property with a carryover basis is alienated after September 26, 1980, paragraph 9 applies to the alienator if at the time he sells or exchanges the property he is a person entitled to the benefits of paragraph 9 and his basis in the property is carried over from that of a person who, on September 26, 1980, would have been entitled to claim exemption at source under the 1942 Convention had he sold the property at that time.

Upon a clear showing, however, a taxpayer may prove that a greater portion of the gain was attributable to the specified period. Thus, in the United States the fair market value of the alienated property at the treaty valuation date may be established under paragraph 9 in the manner and with the evidence that is generally required by U.S. Federal income, estate, and gift tax regulations. For this purpose a taxpayer may use valid appraisal techniques for valuing real estate such as the comparable sales approach (see Rev. Proc. 79–24, 1979–1 C.B. 595), and the reproduction cost approach. If more than one property is alienated in a single transaction each property will be considered individually.

A taxpayer who desires to make this alternate showing for U.S. tax purposes must so indicate on his U.S. income tax return for the year of the sale or exchange and must attach to the return a statement describing the relevant evidence. The U.S. competent authority or his authorized delegate will determine whether the taxpayer has satisfied the requirements of paragraph 9.

U.S. residents, citizens and former citizens remain subject to U.S. taxation on gains as provided by the Code notwithstanding the provisions of Article XIII, other than paragraphs 6 and 7. See paragraphs 2 and 3(a) of Article XXIX (Miscellaneous Rules).

Article XIV. INDEPENDENT PERSONAL SERVICES

Article XIV concerns the taxation of income derived by an individual in respect of the performance of independent personal services. Such income may be taxed in the Contracting State of which such individual is a resident. It may also be taxed in the other Contracting State if the individual has or had a fixed base regularly available to him in the other State for the purpose of performing his activities, but only to the extent that the income is attributable to that fixed base. The use of the term "has or had" ensures that a Contracting State in which a fixed base existed has the right to tax income attributable to that fixed base even if there is a delay between the termination of the fixed base and the receipt of accrual of such income.

Unlike Article VII of the 1942 Convention, which provides a limited exemption from tax at source on income from independent personal services, Article XIV does not restrict the exemption to persons present in the State of source for fewer than 184 days. Furthermore, Article XIV does not allow the $5,000 exemption at source of the 1942 Convention, which was available even if services were performed through a fixed base. However, Article XIV provides complete exemption at source if a fixed base does not exist.

Article XV. DEPENDENT PERSONAL SERVICES

Paragraph 1 provides that, in general, salaries, wages, and other similar remuneration derived by a resident of a Contracting State in respect of an employment are taxable only in that State unless the employment is exercised in the other Contracting State. If the employment is exercised in the other Contracting State, the entire remuneration derived therefrom may be taxed in that other State but only if, as provided by paragraph 2, the recipient is present in the other State for a period or periods exceeding 183 days in the calendar year, or the remuneration is borne by an employer who is a resident of that other State or by a permanent establishment or fixed base which the employer has in that other State. However, in all cases where the employee earns $10,000 or less in the currency of the State of source, such earnings are exempt from tax in that State. "Borne by" means allowable as a deduction in computing taxable income. Thus, if a Canadian resident individual employed at the Canadian permanent establishment of a U.S. company performs services in the United States, the income earned by the employee from such services is not exempt from U.S. tax under paragraph 1 if such income exceeds $10,000 (U.S.) because the U.S. company is entitled to a deduction for such wages in computing its taxable income.

Paragraph 3 provides that a resident of a Contracting State is exempt from tax in the other Contracting State with respect to remuneration derived in respect of an employment regularly exercised in more than one State on a ship, aircraft, motor vehicle, or train operated by a resident of the taxpayer's State of residence. The word "regularly" is intended to distinguish crew members from persons occasionally employed on a ship, aircraft, motor vehicle, or train. Only the Contracting State of which the employee and operator are resident has the right to tax such remuneration. However, this provision is subject to the "saving clause" of paragraph 2 of Article XXIX (Miscellaneous Rules), which permits the United States to tax its citizens despite paragraph 3.

Article XV states that its provisions are overridden by the more specific rules of Article XVIII (Pensions and Annuities) and Article XIX (Government Services).

Article XVI. ARTISTES AND ATHLETES

Article XVI concerns income derived by a resident of a Contracting State as an entertainer, such as a theatre, motion picture, radio, or television artiste, or a musician, or as an athlete, from his personal activities as such exercised in the other Contracting State. Article XVI overrides Articles XIV (Independent Personal Services) and XV (Dependent Personal Services) to allow source basis taxation of an entertainer or athlete in cases where the latter Articles would not permit such taxation. Thus, paragraph 1 provides that certain income of an entertainer or athlete may be taxed in the State of source in all cases where the amount of gross receipts derived by the entertainer or athlete, including expenses reimbursed to him or borne on his behalf, exceeds $15,000 in the currency of that other State for the calendar year concerned. For example, where a resident of Canada who is an entertainer derives income from his personal activities as an entertainer in the United States, he is taxable in the United States on all such income in any case where his gross receipts are greater than $15,000 for the calendar year. Article XVI does not restrict the right of the State of source to apply the provisions of Articles XIV and XV. Thus, an entertainer or athlete resident in a Contracting State and earning $14,000 in wages borne by a permanent establishment in the other State may be taxed in the other State as provided in Article XV.

Paragraph 2 provides that where income in respect of personal activities exercised by an entertainer or an athlete accrues not to the entertainer or athlete himself but to another person, that income may, notwithstanding the provisions of Article VII (Business Profits), Article XIV, and Article XV, be taxed in the Contracting State in which the activities are exercised. The anti-avoidance rule of paragraph 2 does not apply if it is established by the entertainer or athlete that neither he nor persons related to him participate directly or indirectly in the profits of the other person in any manner, including the receipt of deferred remuneration, bonuses, fees, dividends, partnership distributions, or other distributions.

Thus, if an entertainer who is a resident of Canada is under contract with a company and the arrangement between the entertainer and the company provides for payments to the entertainer based on the profits of the company, all of the income of the company attributable to the performer's U.S. activities may be taxed in the United States irrespective of whether the company maintains a permanent establishment in the United States. Paragraph 2 does not affect the rule of paragraph 1 that applies to the entertainer or athlete himself.

Paragraph 3 provides that Article XVI does not apply to the income of an athlete in respect of an employment with a team which participates in a league with regularly scheduled games in both Canada and the United States. Such an athlete is entitled to the benefits of Article XV (Dependent Personal Services). Thus, the athlete's remuneration would be exempt from tax in the Contracting State of source if he is a resident of the other Contracting State and earns $10,000 or less in the currency of the State of source, or if he is present in that State for a period or periods not exceeding in the aggregate 183 days in the calendar year, and his remuneration is not borne by a resident of that State or a permanent establishment or fixed base in that State. Paragraph 3 does not affect the taxation of the employer of an athlete covered by the paragraph. The employer is taxable pursuant to other articles of the Convention, such as Article VII.

Article XVII. WITHHOLDING OF TAXES IN RESPECT OF INDEPENDENT PERSONAL SERVICES

Article XVII confirms that a Contracting State may require withholding of tax on account of tax liability with respect to remuneration paid to an individual who is a resident of the other Contracting State, including an entertainer or athlete, in respect of the performance of independent personal services in the first-mentioned State. However, withholding with respect to the first $5,000 (in the currency of the State of source) of such remuneration paid in that taxable year by each payor shall not exceed 10 percent of such payment. In the United States, the withholding described in paragraph 1 relates to withholding with respect to income tax liability and does not relate to withholding with respect to other taxes, such as social security taxes. Nor is the paragraph intended to suggest that withholding in circumstances not specifically mentioned, such as withholding with respect to dependent personal services, is precluded by the Convention.

Paragraph 2 provides that in any case where the competent authority of Canada or the United States believes that withholding with respect to remuneration for the performance of independent personal services is excessive in relation to the estimated tax liability of an individual to that State for a taxable year, it may determine that a lesser amount will be deducted or withheld. Paragraph 2 may thus result in a lesser withholding than the maximum authorized by paragraph 1.

Paragraph 3 states that the provisions of Article XVII do not affect the liability of a resident of a Contracting State for taxes imposed by the other Contracting State. The Article deals only with the method of collecting taxes and not with substantive tax liability.

Article XVIII A of the 1942 Convention authorizes the issuance of regulations to specify circumstances under which residents of the United States temporarily performing personal services in Canada may be exempted from deduction and withholding of United States tax. This provision is omitted from the Convention as unnecessary. The Code and regulations provide sufficient authority to avoid excessive withholding of U.S. income tax.

Article XVIII. PENSIONS AND ANNUITIES

Paragraph 1 provides that a resident of a Contracting State is taxable in that State with respect to pensions and annuities arising in the other Contracting State. However, the amount of any pensions included in such person's income is not to exceed the amount that would be included if the person were a resident of the Contracting State in which the pension arises. Paragraph 1 imposes no such restriction with respect to the amount that may be taxed in the State of residence in the case of annuities.

Paragraph 2 provides rules with respect to the taxation of pensions and annuities in the Contracting State in which they arise. If the beneficial owner of a periodic pension payment is a resident of the other Contracting State, the tax imposed in the State of source is limited to 15 percent of the gross amount of such payment. Thus, the State of source is not required to allow a deduction or exclusion for a return of capital to the pensioner, but its tax is limited in amount in the case of a periodic payment. Other pension payments may be taxed in the State of source without limit.

In the case of annuities beneficially owned by a resident of a Contracting State, the Contracting State of source is limited to a 15 percent tax on the portion of the payment that is liable to tax in that State under its taxation laws.

Paragraph 3 defines the term "pensions" for purposes of the Convention to include any payment under a superannuation, pension, or retirement plan, Armed-Forces retirement pay, war veterans pensions and allowances, and amounts paid under a sickness, accident, or disability plan. Thus, the term "pension" includes pensions paid by private employers as well as any pension paid by a Contracting State in respect of services rendered to that State. A pension for government service is covered. The term "pensions" does not include payments under an income averaging annuity contract or benefits paid under social security legislation. The latter benefits are taxed, pursuant to paragraph 5, only in the Contracting State paying the benefit. Income derived from an income averaging annuity contract is taxable pursuant to the provisions of Article XXII (Other Income).

Paragraph 4 provides that, for purposes of the Convention, the term "annuities" means a stated sum paid periodically at stated times during life or during a specified number of years, under an obligation to make payments in return for adequate and full consideration other than services rendered. The term does not include a payment that is not periodic or any annuity the cost of which was deductible for tax purposes in the Contracting State where the annuity was acquired. Items excluded from the definition of "annuities" are subject to the rules of Article XXII.

Paragraph 5 provides that benefits under social security legislation in Canada or the United States paid to a resident of the other Contracting State or to a citizen of the United States are taxable only in the Contracting State paying the benefit. Paragraph 5 encompasses benefits paid under social security legislation of a political subdivision, such as a province of Canada.

Paragraph 6 provides that only the State of which a person is resident has the right to tax alimony and other similar amounts (including child support payments) arising in the other Contracting State and paid to such person. However, the amount included in income for purposes of taxation in the State of residence is not to exceed the amount that would be included in income if the recipient were a resident of the Contracting State of source. Paragraph 6 does not define the term "alimony"; the term is defined pursuant to the provisions of paragraph 2 of Article III (General Definitions).

Article XVIII does not provide rules to determine the State in which pensions, annuities, alimony, and other similar amounts arise. The provisions of paragraph 2 of Article III are used to determine where such amounts arise for purposes of determining whether a Contracting State has the right to tax such amounts.

The entirety of Article XVIII is, by reason of paragraph 3(a) of Article XXIX (Miscellaneous Rules), an exception to the "saving clause." Thus, the rules in this Article change U.S. taxation of U.S. citizens and residents.

Article XIX. GOVERNMENT SERVICE

Article XIX provides that remuneration, other than a pension, paid by a Contracting State or political subdivision or local authority thereof to a citizen of that State in respect of services rendered in the discharge of governmental functions shall be taxable only in that State. (Pursuant to paragraph 5 of Article IV (Residence), other income of such a citizen may also be exempt from tax, or subject to reduced rates of tax, in the State in which he is performing services, in accordance with other provisions of the Convention.) However, if the services are rendered in connection with a trade or business, then the provisions of Article XIV (Independent Personal Services), Article XV (Dependent Personal Services), or Article XVI (Artistes and Athletes), as the case may be, are controlling. Whether functions are of a governmental nature may be determined by a comparison with the concept of a governmental function in the State in which the income arises.

Pursuant to paragraph 3(a) of Article XXIX (Miscellaneous Rules), Article XIX is an exception to the "saving clause." As a result, a U.S. citizen resident in Canada and performing services in Canada in the discharge of functions of a governmental nature for the United States is taxable only in the United States on remuneration for such services.

This provision differs from the rules of Article VI of the 1942 Convention. For example, Article XIX allows the United States to impose tax on a person other than a citizen of Canada who earns remuneration paid by Canada in respect of services rendered in the discharge of governmental functions to the United States. (Such a person may, however, be entitled to an exemption from U.S. tax as provided in Code section 893.) Also, under the provisions of Article XIX Canada will not impose tax on amounts paid by the United States in respect of services rendered in the discharge of governmental functions to a U.S. citizen who is ordinarily resident in Canada for purposes other than rendering governmental services. Under paragraph 1 of Article VI of the 1942 Convention, such amounts would be taxable by Canada.

Article XX. STUDENTS

Article XX provides that a student, apprentice, or business trainee temporarily present in a Contracting State for the purpose of his full-time education or training is exempt from tax in that State with respect to amounts received from outside that State for the purpose of his maintenance, education, or training, if the individual is or was a resident of the other Contracting State immediately before visiting the first-mentioned State. There is no limitation on the number of years or the amount of income to which the exemption applies.

The Convention does not contain provisions relating specifically to professors and teachers. Teachers are treated under the Convention pursuant to the rules established in Articles XIV (Independent Personal Services) and XV (Dependent Personal Services), in the same manner as other persons performing services. In Article VIII A of the 1942 Convention there is a 2-year exemption in the Contracting State of source in the case of a professor or teacher who is a resident to the other Contracting State.

Article XXI. EXEMPT ORGANIZATIONS

Paragraph 1 provides that a religious, scientific, literary, educational, or charitable organization resident in a Contracting State shall be exempt from tax on income arising in the other Contracting State but only to the extent that such income is exempt from taxation in the Contracting State in which the organization is resident. Since this paragraph, and the remainder of Article XXI, deal with entities that are not normally taxable, the test of "resident in" is intended to be similar—but cannot be identical—to the one outlined in paragraph 1 of Article IV (Residence). Paragraph 3 provides that paragraph 1 does not exempt from tax income of a trust, company, or other organization from carrying on a trade or business, or income from a "related person" other than a person referred to in paragraph 1 or 2.

Paragraph 2 provides that a trust, company, or other organization that is resident in a Contracting State and constituted and operated exclusively to administer or provide employee benefits or benefits for the self-employed under one or more funds or plans established to provide pension or retirement benefits or other employee benefits is exempt from taxation on dividend and interest income arising in the other Contracting State, if the income of such organization is generally exempt from taxation in the Contracting State in which it is resident. Pursuant to paragraph 3 the exemption at source provided by paragraph 2 does not apply to dividends or interest from carrying on a trade or business or from a "related person," other than a person referred to in paragraph 1 or 2. The term "related person" is not necessarily defined by paragraph 2 of Article IX (Related Persons).

Paragraph 4 provides an exemption from U.S. excise taxes on private foundations in the case of a religious, scientific, literary, educational, or charitable organization which is resident in Canada but only if such organization has received substantially all of its support from persons other than citizens or residents of the United States.

Paragraph 5 provides that contributions by a citizen or resident of the United States to an organization which is resident in Canada and is generally exempt from Canadian tax are treated as charitable contributions, but only if the organization could qualify in the United States to receive deductible contributions if it were resident in (i.e., organized in) the United States. Paragraph 5 generally limits the amount of contributions made deductible by the Convention to the income of the U.S. citizen or resident arising in Canada, as determined under the Convention. In the case of contributions to a college or university at which the U.S. citizen or resident or a member of his family is or was enrolled, the special limitation to income arising in Canada is not required. The percentage limitations of Code section 170 in respect of the deductibility of charitable contributions apply after the limitations established by the Convention. Any amounts treated as charitable contributions by paragraph 5 which are in excess of amounts deductible in a taxable year pursuant to paragraph 5 may be carried over and deducted in subsequent taxable years, subject to the limitations of paragraph 5.

Paragraph 6 provides rules for purposes of Canadian taxation with respect to the deductibility of gifts to a U.S. resident organization by a resident of Canada. The rules of paragraph 6 parallel the rules of paragraph 5. The current limitations in Canadian law provide that deductions for gifts to charitable organizations may not exceed 20 percent of income. Excess deductions may be carried forward for one year.

The term "family" used in paragraphs 5 and 6 is defined in paragraph 2 of the Exchange of Notes accompanying the Convention to mean an individual's brothers and sisters (whether by whole or half-blood, or by adoption), spouse, ancestors, lineal descendents, and adopted descendents. Paragraph 2 of the Exchange of Notes also provides that the competent authorities of Canada and the United States will review procedures and requirements for organizations to establish their exempt status under paragraph 1 of Article XXI or as an eligible recipient of charitable contributions or gifts under paragraphs 5 and 6 of Article XXI. It is contemplated that such review will lead to the avoidance of duplicative administrative efforts in determining such status and eligibility.

The provisions of paragraph 5 and 6 generally parallel the rules of Article XIII D of the 1942 Convention. However, paragraphs 5 and 6 permit greater deductions for certain contributions to colleges and universities than do the provisions of the 1942 Convention.

Article XXII. OTHER INCOME

Paragraph 1 provides that a Contracting State of which a person is a resident has the sole right to tax items of income, wherever arising, if such income is not dealt with in the prior Articles of the Convention. If such income arises in the other Contracting State, however, it may also be taxed in that State. The determination of where income arises for this purpose is made under the domestic laws of the respective Contracting States unless the Convention specifies where the income arises (e.g., paragraph 6 of Article XI (Interest)) for purposes of determining the right to tax, in which case the provisions of the Convention control.

Paragraph 2 provides that to the extent that income distributed by an estate of trust resident in one Contracting State is deemed under the domestic law of that State to be a separate type of income "arising" within that State, such income distributed to a beneficiary resident in the other Contracting State may be taxed in the State of source at a maximum rate of 15 percent of the gross amount of such distribution. Such a distribution will, however, be exempt from tax in the State of source to the extent that the income distributed by the estate or trust was derived by the estate or trust from sources outside that State. Thus, in a case where the law of Canada treats a distribution made by a trust resident in Canada as a separate type of income arising in Canada, Canadian tax is limited by paragraph 2 to 15 percent of the gross amount distributed to a U.S. resident beneficiary. Although the Code imposes tax on certain domestic trusts (e.g., accumulation trusts) and such trusts are residents of the United States for purposes of Article IV (Residence) and paragraph 2 of Article XXII, paragraph 2 does not apply to distributions by such trusts because, pursuant to Code sections 667(e) and 662(b), these distributions have the same character in the hands of a nonresident beneficiary as they do in the hands of the trust. Thus, a distribution by a domestic accumulation trust is not a separate type of income for U.S. purposes. The taxation of such a distribution in the United States is governed by the distribution's character, the provisions of the Code and the provisions of the Convention other than the provision in paragraph 2 limiting the tax at source to 15 percent.

Article XXIII. CAPITAL

Although neither Canada nor the United States currently has national taxes on capital, Article XXIII provides rules for the eventuality that such taxes might be enacted in the future. Paragraph 1 provides that capital represented by real property (as defined in paragraph 2 of Article VI (Income From Real Property)) owned by a resident of a Contracting State and situated in the other Contracting State may be taxed in that other State.

Paragraph 2 provides that capital represented by either personal property forming part of the business property of a permanent establishment of personal property pertaining to a fixed base in a Contracting State may be taxed in that State.

Paragraph 3 provides that capital represented by ships and aircraft operated by a resident of a Contracting State in international traffic and by personal property pertaining to the operation of such ships and aircraft are taxable only in the Contracting State of residence.

Paragraph 4 provides that all elements of capital other than those covered by paragraphs 1, 2, and 3 are taxable only in the Contracting State of residence. Thus, capital represented by motor vehicles or railway cars, not pertaining to a permanent establishment or fixed base in a Contracting State, would be taxable only in the Contracting State of which the taxpayer is a resident.

Article XXIV. ELIMINATION OF DOUBLE TAXATION

Paragraph 1 provides the general rules that will apply under the Convention with respect to foreign tax credits for Canadian taxes paid or accrued. The United States undertakes to allow to a citizen or resident of the United States, or to a company electing under Code section 1504(d) to be treated as a domestic corporation, a credit against the Federal income taxes imposed by the Code for the "appropriate amount" of income tax paid or accrued to Canada. In the case of a company which is a resident of the United States owning 10 percent or more of the voting stock of a company which is a resident of Canada (which for this purpose does not include a company electing under Code section 1504(d) to be treated as a domestic corporation), and from which it receives dividends in a taxable year, the United States shall allow as a credit against income taxes imposed by the Code the appropriate amount of income tax paid or accrued to Canada by the Canadian company with respect to the profits out of which such company paid the dividends.

The direct and deemed-paid credits allowed by paragraph 1 are subject to the limitations of the Code as they may be amended from time to time without changing the general principle of paragraph 1. Thus, as is generally the case under U.S. income tax conventions, provisions such as Code sections 901(c), 904, 905, 907, 908, and 911 apply for purposes of computing the allowable credit under paragraph 1.

The term "income tax paid to accrued" is defined in paragraph 7 of Article XXIV to include certain specified taxes which are paid or accrued. Paragraph 1 provides a credit for these specified taxes whether or not they qualify as creditable under Code section 901 or 903. However, if any portion of the Canadian taxes creditable under the Convention does not qualify as income taxes or "in lieu" taxes under the Code, the amount of direct and deemed-paid credit that may be claimed under the Convention may not exceed the proportion of the federal income taxes imposed by the Code that the taxpayer's taxable income arising in Canada bears to the taxpayer's worldwide taxable income. In other words, Canadian taxes made creditable solely by paragraph 1 are creditable only to the extent of a per country limitation computed with respect to Canada pursuant to the special source rules set forth in paragraphs 3 and 6, subject to U.S. limitation rules (e.g., Code sections 904(b)(2) and 904(f)). If, after application of these rules, a person has paid or accrued an amount to Canada in excess of the amount creditable against U.S. tax for a given year, the excess may be carried over to other years to offset U.S. tax on income arising in Canada under the Convention.

Any creditable taxes not covered by paragraph 1 (e.g., third State taxes) may not offset U.S. tax on income arising in Canada under the Convention. Thus, if the taxpayer elects to compute the foreign tax credit for any years using the special source rules set forth in paragraphs 3 and 6, a separate limitation is computed for taxes not covered by paragraph 1 without regard to the source rules of paragraphs 3 and 6, and the credit for such taxes may not exceed such limitation. The credit allowed under this separate limitation may not exceed the proportion of the Federal income taxes imposed by the Code that the taxpayer's taxable income from foreign sources (under the Code) not included in taxable income arising in Canada (and not in excess of total foreign source taxable income under the Code) bears to the taxpayer's worldwide taxable income. In any case the credit for taxes covered by paragraph 1 and the credit for other foreign taxes is limited to the amount allowed under an overall limitation computed by aggregating taxable income arising in Canada and other foreign source taxable income.

If Canadian taxes claimed as credits are income taxes or "in lieu" taxes under the Code, and such taxes exceed the proportion of U.S. tax that taxable income arising in Canada bears to the entire taxable income, such taxes qualify on the same basis as other creditable taxes to be absorbed by the separate limitation computed with respect to other taxes.

In a case where a taxpayer has different types of income subject to separate limitations under the Code (e.g., section 904(d)(1)(B) DISC dividends, foreign oil related income and "other" income) the Convention rules just described apply in the context of each of the separate Code limitations.

A taxpayer may, for any year, claim a credit pursuant to the rules of the Code. In such case, the taxpayer would be subject to the limitations established in the Code, and would forego the rules of the Convention that determine where taxable income arises. In addition, any Canadian taxes covered by paragraph 1 which are not creditable under the Code would not be credited. In the event that Canadian taxes creditable under the Code and other taxes creditable under the Code exceed the limitation provided in the Code, the credit for Canadian taxes is determined pro rata on the basis of the proportion that Canadian creditable taxes bear to total creditable taxes.

The following examples illustrate the application of Article XXIV:

Example 1. A United States corporate taxpayer has for the taxable year $100 of taxable income having a Canadian source under the Convention but a U.S. source under the Code (see, for example, paragraph 1 of Article VII (Business Profits) and paragraph 3(a) of Article XXIV); $100 of taxable income having a U.S. source under both the Convention and the Code; $80 of taxable income having a foreign (non-Canadian) source under the Code but a U.S. source under the Convention (see paragraph 3(b) of Article XXIV); and ($50) of loss having a Canadian source. The taxpayer pays $50 of foreign (non-Canadian) income taxes, and $20 of Canadian taxes which are income taxes under the Code. All the foreign source income of the taxpayer constitutes "other" income described in Code section 904(d)(1)(c). In this case, the Convention provides that there is $50 of Canadian source taxable income, and therefore up to $23 of Canadian taxes covered by the Convention

qualify for the credit. Since the taxpayer has paid only $20 of Canadian taxes covered by the Convention, a credit is allowed in that amount. The limitation for Canadian taxes under the Convention is not available to absorb other foreign taxes. The limitation with respect to other foreign taxes and foreign non-Canadian income is $13.80 and foreign income taxes in that amount may be credited in addition to the $20 of Canadian taxes, for a total credit of $33.80; the taxpayer has a foreign tax credit carryover of $36.20 of non-Canadian income taxes.

Example 2. The facts are the same as in Example 1, except that foreign non-Canadian operations result in a loss of ($30) rather than net income of $80, and no foreign non-Canadian income taxes are paid. The Code limitation is zero, because there is no foreign source taxable income. The Convention still provides that there is $50 of Canadian source taxable income but the credit is limited to $9.20

The remaining $10.80 of Canadian taxes covered by the Convention ($20 − $9.20) are available as a carryover.

Example 3. The facts are the same as in Example 1 except that the first $100 of taxable income mentioned in Example 1 has a Canadian source under both the Convention and the Code. The Convention still provides that there is $50 of Canadian source income and $20 of Canadian taxes covered by the Convention thereby qualify for credit $\frac{($50}{$230} \times $105.80)$.

The limitation with respect to foreign non-Canadian taxes is $36.80
$\frac{($80}{$230} \times $105.80)$.
In this case, however, if the Canadian taxes covered by the Convention would qualify for credit under Code section 901 or 903, the taxpayer could elect the Code limitation of $59.80
$\frac{$130}{$230} \times $105.80)$,
which is more advantageous than the separate limitations computed under the Convention because those limitations do not permit third State income taxes to be credited against U.S. tax on income arising in Canada.

Example 4. The facts are the same as in Example 3 except that $10 of the $20 Canadian taxes covered by the Convention would not be creditable under Code section 901 or 903. If the taxpayer elects to claim a credit for the Canadian taxes which are creditable solely by reason of the Convention, it must use the Convention rules to compute the credit limitation ($23 + $36.80 = $59.80).

Example 5. The facts are the same as in Example 1 except that the corporation pays $25 of Canadian taxes covered by the Convention which are income taxes under the Code and $12 of foreign non-Canadian income taxes. The Convention still provides that there is $50 of Canadian source taxable income, and $23 of Canadian taxes covered by the Convention thereby qualify for credit. In addition, the limitation of $13.80 with respect to other foreign taxes permits the crediting of non-Canadian taxes plus Canadian taxes covered by the Convention. The taxpayer has a foreign tax credit carryover of $.03 of Canadian taxes and $.17 of other taxes, which may qualify for credit in carryover years.

The Convention only provides a credit for amounts paid or accrued. The determination of whether an amount is paid or accrued is made under the Code.

The rules of paragraph 1 are modified in certain respects by rules in paragraphs 4 and 5 for income derived by United States citizens who are residents of Canada. Paragraph 4 provides two steps for the elimination of double taxation in such a case. First, paragraph 4(a) provides that Canada shall allow a deduction from (credit against) Canadian tax in respect of income tax paid or accrued to the United States in respect of profits, income, or gains which arise in the United States (within the meaning of paragraph 3(a)); the deduction against Canadian tax need not, however, exceed the amount of income tax that would be paid or accrued to the United States if the individual were not a U.S. citizen, after taking into account any relief available under the Convention.

The second step, as provided in paragraph 4(b), is that the United States allows as a credit against United States tax, subject to the rules of paragraph 1, the income tax paid or accrued to Canada after the Canadian credit for U.S. tax provided by paragraph 4(a). The credit so allowed by the United States is not to reduce the portion of the United States tax that is creditable against Canadian tax in accordance with paragraph 4(a).

The following example illustrates the application of paragraph 4.

A United States citizen resides in Canada and earns $250 of income from the performance of independent personal services, $100 of which would be taxable by the United States under the provisions of Article XIV (Independent Personal Services) if such person were not a citizen of the United States. Taxable income for U.S. purposes, taking into account the rules of Code section 913, is $150. By reason of paragraph 3(a), the $100 that may be taxed by the United States arises in the United States for purposes of Article XXIV. Assume that the U.S. tax on the $100 of profits arising in the United States would be $25, if the taxpayer were not a U.S. citizen; the $100 is the only income of the taxpayer arising in the United States; and the $150 is his total taxable income from all sources. Assume further that the tentative U.S. income tax liability of the taxpayer, on his worldwide income, is $60; and that the tentative Canadian tax on the $250 of income is $100. Canada allows $25 as a credit against $100, leaving a net Canadian tax of $75. The U.S. allows as a credit $35 ($60–$25) of the $75 Canadian tax. (Pursuant to paragraph 6, which carries out the objectives of paragraphs 4 and 5 and is discussed in more detail below, a total of $87.50 of the individual's taxable income arises in Canada for purposes of the U.S. foreign tax credit $\frac{A}{$150} \times $60 = $35; A = $87.50)$.
Thus, paragraph 6 overrides paragraph 3(a) to source an additional $37.50 of taxable income as arising in Canada.) The additional $40 of Canadian tax is allowed as a foreign tax credit carryover, subject to the limitations of the Convention and the Code.

Paragraph 5 provides special rules for the elimination of double taxation in the case of dividends, interest, and royalties earned by a U.S. citizen resident in Canada. These rules apply notwithstanding the provisions of paragraph 4, but only as long as the law in Canada allows a deduction in computing income for the portion of any foreign tax paid in respect of dividends, interest, or royalties which exceeds 15 percent of the amount of such items of income, and only with respect to those items of income. The rules of paragraph 4 apply with respect to other items of income; moreover, if the law in force in Canada regarding the deduction for foreign taxes changes, the provisions of paragraph 5 shall not apply and the U.S. foreign tax credit for Canadian taxes and the Canadian credit for U.S. taxes will be determined solely pursuant to the provisions of paragraph 4.

The calculations under paragraph 5 are as follows. First, the deduction in computing income allowed in Canada shall be made with respect to U.S. tax on the dividends, interest, and royalties before any foreign tax credit is allowed by the United States with respect to income tax paid or accrued to Canada. Second, Canada shall allow a deduction from (credit against) Canadian tax for U.S. tax paid or accrued with respect to the dividends, interest, and royalties, but such credit need not exceed 15 percent of the gross amount of such items of income that have been included in computing income for Canadian tax purposes. (The credit may, however, exceed the amount of tax that the United States would be entitled to levy under the Convention upon a Canadian resident who is not a U.S. citizen.) Third, for purposes of computing the U.S. tax on such dividends, interest, and royalties, the United States shall allow as a credit against the U.S. tax the income tax paid or accrued to Canada after the 15 percent credit against Canadian tax for income tax paid to accrued to the United States. The United States is in no event obliged to give a credit for Canadian income tax which will reduce the U.S. tax below 15 percent of the amount of the dividends, interest, and royalties.

The rules of paragraph 5 are illustrated by the following example.

Example A. A U.S. citizen who is a resident of Canada receives $200 of income with respect to personal services performed within Canada and $100 of royalty income arising within the United States. Taxable income for U.S. purposes, taking into account the rules of Code section 913, is $120. U.S. tax (before foreign tax credits) is $50. The $100 royalty bears U.S. tax (before foreign tax credits) of $41.67
$\frac{($100}{$120} \times $50)$.
Under Canadian law a deduction of $26.67 (the excess of $41.67 over 15 percent of $100) is allowed in computing income. The Canadian tax on $273.33 of income is $170. Canada gives a credit against the $170 for $15, leaving a final Canadian tax of $155. Of the $155, $41.58 is attributable to the royalty
$\frac{($73.33}{$273.33} \times $170 - $15))$.
Of this amount $26.67 ($41.67 − $15) is creditable against U.S. tax pursuant to paragraph 5 and $14.91 is a foreign tax credit carryover for U.S. purposes, subject to the limitations of paragraph 5. (An additional $8.33 of Canadian tax with respect to Canadian source services income is creditable against U.S. tax pursuant to paragraphs 3 and 4(b).)

The general rule for avoiding double taxation in Canada is provided in paragraph 2. Pursuant to paragraph 2(a) Canada undertakes to allow to a resident of Canada a credit against income taxes imposed under the Income Tax Act for the appropriate amount of income taxes paid or accrued to the United States. Paragraph 2(b) provides for the deduction by a Canadian company. In computing taxable income, of any dividend received out of the exempt surplus of a U.S. company which is an affiliate. The provisions of paragraph 2 are subject to the provisions of the Income Tax Act as they may be amended from time to time without changing the general principle of paragraph 2.

Paragraph 3 provides source rules for purposes of applying Article XXIV. Profits, income, or gains of a resident of a Contracting State which may be taxed in the other Contracting State in accordance with the Convention, for reasons other than the saving clause of paragraph 2 of Article XXIX (Miscellaneous Rules) (e.g., pensions and annuities taxable where arising pursuant to Article XVIII (Pensions and Annuities)), are deemed to arise in the latter State. This rule does not, however, apply to gains taxable under paragraph 5 of Article XIII (Gains) (i.e., gains taxed by a Contracting State derived from the alienation of property by a former resident of that State). Gains from such an alienation arise, pursuant to paragraph 3(b), in the State of which the alienator is a resident. Thus, if in accordance with paragraph 5 of Article XIII, Canada imposes tax on certain gains of a U.S. resident such gains are deemed, pursuant to paragraphs 2 and 3(b) of Article XXIV, to arise in the United States for purposes of computing the deduction against Canadian tax for the U.S. tax on such gain. Under the Convention such gains arise in the United States for purposes of the United States foreign tax credit. Paragraph 3(b) also provides that profits, income, or gains arise in the Contracting State of which a person is a resident if they may not be taxed in the other Contracting State under the provisions of the Convention (e.g., alimony), other than the "saving clause" of paragraph 2 of Article XXIX. Paragraph 3 does not affect the source of losses.

The rules of paragraphs 3 and 6 must be utilized by a person claiming a credit for Canadian taxes solely by reason of the Convention. A person claiming a credit for Canadian income taxes pursuant to the Code may, however, use the Code credit rules exclusively. Furthermore, a person claiming a credit for income taxes of a third State may not rely upon the rules of paragraphs 3 and 6 for purposes of treating income that would otherwise have a U.S. source as having a foreign source (i.e., in the situation where the rules of the Convention produce excess limitation after Canadian taxes are taken into account).

Paragraph 6 is necessary to implement the objectives of paragraphs 4(b) and 5(c). Paragraph 6 provides that where a U.S. citizen is a resident of Canada, items of income referred to in paragraph 4 or 5 are deemed for the purposes of Article XXIV to arise in Canada to the extent necessary to avoid double taxation of income by Canada and the United States consistent with the objectives of paragraphs 4(b) and 5(c). Paragraph 6 can override the source rules of paragraph 3 to permit a limited resourcing of income. The principles of paragraph 6 have effect, pursuant to paragraph 3(b) of Article XXX (Entry Into Force), for taxable years beginning on or after January 1, 1976. See the discussion of Article XXX below.

The application of paragraph 6 is illustrated by the following example.

Example B. The facts are the same as in Example A. The United States has undertaken, pursuant to paragraph 5(c) and paragraph 6, to credit $26.67 of Canadian taxes on royalty income that has a U.S. source under both paragraph 3 and the Code. The credit, however, only reduces the U.S. tax on the royalty income which exceeds 15 percent of the amount of such income included in computing U.S. taxable income. Pursuant to paragraph 6, for purposes of determining the U.S. foreign tax credit limitation under the Convention with respect to Canadian taxes $64.08 $\left(\frac{$A}{$120} \times $50 = $26.67;\ A = $64.08\right)$ of taxable income with respect to the royalties is deemed to arise in Canada.

Paragraph 7 provides that any reference to "income tax paid or accrued" to Canada or the United States includes Canadian tax or United States tax, as the case may be. The terms "Canadian tax" and "United States tax" are defined in paragraphs 1(c) and 1(d) of Article III (General Definitions). References to income taxes paid or accrued also include taxes of general application paid or accrued to a political subdivision or local authority of Canada or the United States which are not imposed by such political subdivision or local authority in a manner inconsistent with the provisions of the Convention and which are substantially similar to taxes of Canada or the United States referred to in paragraphs 2 and 3(a) of Article II (Taxes Covered).

In order for a tax imposed by a political subdivision or local authority to fall within the scope of paragraph 7, such tax must apply to individuals, companies, or other persons generally, and not only to a particular class of individuals or companies or a particular type of business. The tax must also be substantially similar to the national taxes referred to in paragraphs 2 and 3(a) of Article II. Finally, the political subdivision or local authority must apply its tax in a manner not inconsistent with the provisions of the Convention. For example, the political subdivision or local authority must not impose its tax on a resident of the other Contracting State earning business profits within the political subdivision or local authority but not having a permanent establishment there.

Paragraph 8 relates to the provisions of Article XXIII (Capital). It provides that were a resident of a Contracting State owns capital which, in accordance with the provisions of Article XXIII, may be taxed in the other Contracting State, the State of residence shall allow as a deduction from (credit against) its tax on capital an amount equal to the capital tax paid in the other Contracting State. The deduction is not, however, to exceed that part of the capital tax, computed before the deduction, which is attributable to capital which may be taxed in the other State.

Article XXV. NON-DISCRIMINATION

Paragraphs 1 and 2 of Article XXV protect individual citizens of a Contracting State from discrimination by the other Contracting State in taxation matters. Paragraph 1 provides that a citizen of a Contracting State who is a resident of the other Contracting State may not be subjected in that other State to any taxation or requirement connected with taxation which is other or more burdensome than the taxation and connected requirements imposed on similarly situated citizens of the other State.

Paragraph 2 assures protection in a case where a citizen of a Contracting State is not a resident of the other Contracting State. Such a citizen may not be subjected in the other State to any taxation or requirement connected to taxation which is other or more burdensome than the taxation and connected requirements to which similarly situated citizens of any third State are subjected. The reference to citizens of a third State "in the same circumstances" includes consideration of the State of residence. Thus, pursuant to paragraph 2, the Canadian taxation with respect to a citizen of the United States resident in, for example, the United Kingdom may not be more burdensome than the taxation of a U.K. citizen resident in the United Kingdom. Any benefits available to the U.K. citizen by virtue of an income tax convention between the United Kingdom and Canada would be available to the U.S. citizen resident in the United Kingdom if he is otherwise in the same circumstances as the U.K. citizen.

Paragraph 3 assures that, in computing taxable income, an individual resident of a Contracting State will be entitled to the same deduction for dependents resident in the other Contracting State that would be allowed if the dependents were residents of the individual's State of residence. The term "dependent" is defined in accordance with the rules set forth in paragraph 2 of Article III (General Definitions). For U.S. tax purposes, paragraph 3 does not expand the benefits currently available to a resident of the United States with a dependent resident in Canada. See Code section 152(b)(3).

Paragraph 4 allows a resident of Canada (not a citizen of the United States) to file a joint return in cases where such person earns salary, wages, or other similar remuneration as an employee and such income is taxable in the United States under the Convention. Paragraph 4 does not apply where the resident of Canada earns wages which are exempt in the United States under Article XV (Dependent Personal Services) or earns only income taxable by the United States under provisions of the Convention other than Article XV.

The benefit provided by paragraph 4 is available regardless of the residence of the taxpayer's spouse. It is limited, however, by a formula designed to ensure that the benefit is available solely with respect to persons whose U.S. source income is entirely, or almost entirely, wage income. The formula limits the United States tax with respect to wage income to that portion of the total U.S. tax that would be payable for the taxable year if both the individual and his spouse were United States citizens as the individual's taxable income (determined without any of the benefits made available by paragraph 4, such as the standard deduction) bears to the total taxable income of the individual and his spouse. The term "total United States tax" used in the formula is total United States tax without regard to any foreign tax credits, as provided in subparagraph 4(a). (Foreign income taxes may, however, be claimed as deductions in computing taxable income, to the extent allowed by the Code.) In determining total taxable income of the individual and his spouse, the benefits made available by paragraph 4 are taken into account, but a deficit of the spouse is not.

> A, a Canadian citizen and resident, is married to B who is also a Canadian citizen and resident. A earns $12,000 of wages taxable in the U.S. under Article XV (Dependent Personal Services) and $2,000 of wages taxable only in Canada. B earns $1,000 of U.S. source dividend income, taxed by the United States at 15 percent pursuant to Article X (Dividends). B also earns $2,000 of wages taxable only in Canada. A's taxable income for U.S. purposes, determined without regard to paragraph 4, is $11,700 ($12,000 − $2,000 (Code sections 151(b) and 873(b)(3)) + $1,700 (Code section 63)). The U.S. tax (Code section 1(d)) with respect to such income is $2,084.50. The total U.S. tax payable by A and B if both were U.S. citizens and all their income arose in the United States would be $2,013 under Code section 1(a) on taxable income of $14,800 ($17,000 − $200 (Code section 116) − $2,000 (Code section 151)). Pursuant to paragraph 4, the U.S. tax imposed on A's wages from U.S. sources is limited to $1,591.36

The provisions of paragraph 4 may be elected on a year-by-year basis. They are purely computational and do not make either or both spouses residents of the United States for the purpose of other U.S. income tax conventions.

Paragraph 5 protects against discrimination in a case where the capital of a company which is a resident of one Contracting State is wholly or partly owned or controlled, directly or indirectly, by one or more residents of the other Contracting State. Such a company shall not be subjected in the State of which it is a resident to any taxation or requirement connected therewith which is other or more burdensome than the taxation and connected requirements to which are subjected other similar companies which are residents of that State but whose capital is wholly or partly owned or controlled, directly or indirectly, by one or more residents of a third State.

Paragraph 6 protects against discrimination in the case of a permanent establishment which a resident of one Contracting State has in the other Contracting State. The taxation of such a permanent establishment by the other Contracting State shall not be less favorable than the taxation of residents of that other State carrying on the same activities. The paragraph specifically overrides the provisions of Article XXIV (Elimination of Double Taxation), thus ensuring that permanent establishments will be entitled to relief from double taxation on a basis comparable to the relief afforded to similarly situated residents. Paragraph 6 does not oblige a Contracting State to grant to a resident of the other Contracting State any personal allowances, reliefs, and reductions for taxation purposes on account of civil status or family responsibilities which it grants to its own residents. The principles of paragraph 6 would apply with respect to a fixed base as well as a permanent establishment. Paragraph 6 does not, however, override the provisions of Code section 906.

Paragraph 7 concerns the right of a resident of a Contracting State to claim deductions for purposes of computing taxable profits in the case of disbursements made to a resident of the other Contracting State. Such disbursements shall be deductible under the same conditions as if they had been made to a resident of the first-mentioned State. These provisions do not apply to amounts to which paragraph 1 of Article IX (Related Persons), paragraph 7 of Article XI (Interest), or paragraph 7 of Article XII (Royalties) apply. Paragraph 7 of Article XXV also provides that, for purposes of determining the taxable capital of a resident of a Contracting State, any debts of such person to a resident of the other Contracting State shall be deductible under the same conditions as if they had been contracted to a resident of the first-mentioned State. This portion of paragraph 7 relates to Article XXIII (Capital).

Paragraph 8 provides that, notwithstanding the provisions of paragraph 7, a Contracting State may enforce the provisions of its taxation laws relating to the deductibility of interest, in force on September 26, 1980, or as modified subsequent to that date in a manner that does not change the general nature of the provisions in force on September 26, 1980; or which are adopted after September 26, 1980, and are designed to ensure that nonresidents do not enjoy a more favorable tax treatment under the taxation laws of that State than that enjoyed by residents. Thus Canada may continue to limit the deductions for interest paid to certain nonresidents as provided in section 18(4) of Part I of the Income Tax Act.

Paragraph 9 provides that expenses incurred by citizens or residents of a Contracting State with respect to any convention, including any seminar, meeting, congress, or other function of similar nature, held in the other Contracting State, are deductible for purposes of taxation in the first-mentioned State to the same extent that such expenses would be deductible if the convention were held in that first-mentioned State. Thus, for U.S. income tax purposes an individual who is a citizen or resident of the United States and who attends a convention held in Canada may claim deductions for expenses incurred in connection with such convention without regard to the provisions of Code section 274(h). Section 274(h) imposes special restrictions on the deductibility of expenses incurred in connection with foreign conventions. A claim for a deduction for such an expense remains subject, in all events, to the provisions of U.S. law with respect to the deductibility of convention expenses generally (e.g., Code sections 162 and 212). Similarly, in the case of a citizen or resident of Canada attending a convention in the United States, paragraph 9 requires Canada to allow a deduction for expenses relating to such convention as if the convention had taken place in Canada.

Paragraph 10 provides that, notwithstanding the provisions of Article II (Taxes Covered), the provisions of Article XXV apply in the case of Canada to all taxes imposed under the Income Tax Act; and, in the case of the United States, to all taxes imposed under the Code. Article XXV does not apply to taxes imposed by political subdivisions or local authorities of Canada or the United States.

Article XXV substantially broadens the protection against discrimination provided by the 1942 Convention, which contains only one provision dealing specifically with this subject. That provision, paragraph 11 of the Protocol to the 1942 Convention, states that citizens of one of the Contracting States residing within the other Contracting State are not to be subjected to the payment of more burdensome taxes than the citizens of the other State.

The benefits of Article XXV may affect the tax liability of a U.S. citizen or resident with respect to the United States. See paragraphs 2 and 3 of Article XXIX (Miscellaneous Rules).

Article XXVI. MUTUAL AGREEMENT PROCEDURE

Paragraph 1 provides that where a person considers that the actions of one or both of the Contracting States will result in taxation not in accordance with the Convention, he may present his case in writing to the competent authority of the Contracting State of which he is a resident or, if he is a resident of neither Contracting State, of which he is a national. Thus, a resident of Canada must present to the Minister of National Revenue (or his authorized representative) any claim that such resident is being subjected to taxation contrary to the Convention. A person who requests assistance from the competent authority may also avail himself of any remedies available under domestic laws.

Paragraph 2 provides that the competent authority of the Contracting State to which the case is presented shall endeavor to resolve the case by mutual agreement with the competent authority of the other Contracting State, unless he believes that the objection is not justified or he is able to arrive at a satisfactory unilateral solution. Any agreement reached between the competent authorities of Canada and the United States shall be implemented notwithstanding any time or other procedural limitations in the domestic laws of the Contracting States, except where the special mutual agreement provisions of Article IX (Related Persons) apply, provided that the competent authority of the Contracting State asked to waive its domestic time or procedural limitations has received written notification that such a case exists within six years from the end of the taxable year in the first-mentioned State to which the case relates. The notification may be given by the competent authority to take action, or a person related to the taxpayer. Unlike Article IX, Article XXVI does not require the competent authority of a Contracting State to grant unilateral relief to avoid double taxation in a case where timely notification is not given to the competent authority of the other Contracting State. Such unilateral relief may, however, be granted by the competent authority in its discretion pursuant to the provisions of Article XXVI and in order to achieve the purposes of the Convention. In a case where the provisions of Article IX apply, the provisions of paragraphs 3, 4, and 5 of that Article are controlling with respect to adjustments and corresponding adjustments of income, loss, or tax and the effect of the Convention upon time or procedural limitations of domestic law. Thus, if relief is not available under Article IX because of fraud, the provisions of paragraph 2 of Article XXVI do not independently authorize such relief.

Paragraph 3 provides that the competent authorities of the Contracting States shall endeavor to resolve by mutual agreement any difficulties or doubts arising as to the interpretation or application of the Convention. In particular, the competent authorities may agree to the same attribution of profits to a resident of a Contracting State and its permanent establishment in the other Contracting State; the same allocation of income, deductions, credits, or allowances between persons; the same determination of the source of income; the same characterization of particular items of income; a common meaning of any term used in the Convention; rules, guidelines, or procedures for the elimination of double taxation with respect to income distributed by an estate or trust, or with respect to a partnership; or to increase any dollar amounts referred to in the Convention to reflect monetary or economic developments. The competent authorities may also consult and reach agreements on rules, guidelines, or procedures for the elimination of double taxation in cases not provided for in the Convention.

The list of subjects of potential mutual agreement in paragraph 3 is not exhaustive; it merely illustrates the principles set forth in the paragraph. As in the case of other U.S. tax conventions, agreement can be arrived at in the context of determining the tax liability of a specific person or in establishing rules, guidelines, and procedures that will apply generally under the Convention to resolve issues for classes or taxpayers. It is contemplated that paragraph 3 could be utilized by the competent authorities, for example, to resolve conflicts between the domestic laws of Canada and the United States with respect to the allocation and apportionment of deductions.

Paragraph 4 provides that each Contracting State will endeavor to collect on behalf of the other State such amounts as may be necessary to ensure that relief granted by the Convention from taxation imposed by the other State does not enure to the benefit of persons not entitled to such relief. Paragraph 4 does not oblige either Contracting State to carry out administrative measures of a different nature from those that would be used by Canada or the United States in the collection of its own tax or which would be contrary to its public policy.

Paragraph 5 confirms that the competent authorities of Canada and the United States may communicate with each other directly for the purpose of reaching agreement in the sense of paragraphs 1 through 4.

Article XXVII. EXCHANGE OF INFORMATION

Paragraph 1 authorizes the competent authorities to exchange the information necessary for carrying out the provisions of the Convention or the domestic laws of Canada and the United States concerning taxes covered by the Convention, insofar as the taxation under those domestic laws is not contrary to the Convention. The authority to exchange information granted by paragraph 1 is not restricted by Article I (Personal Scope), and thus need not relate solely to persons otherwise covered by the Convention. It is contemplated that Article XXVII will be utilized by the competent authorities to exchange information upon request, routinely, and spontaneously.

Any information received by a Contracting State pursuant to the Convention is to be treated as secret in the same manner as information obtained under the taxation laws of that State. Such information shall be disclosed only to persons or authorities, including courts and administrative bodies, involved in the assessment or collection of, the administration and enforcement in respect of, or the determination of appeals in relation to the taxes covered by the Convention, and the information may be used by such persons only for such purposes. (In accordance with paragraph 4, for the purposes of this Article the Convention applies to a broader range of taxes than those covered specifically by Article II (Taxes Covered).)

In specific cases a competent authority providing information may, pursuant to paragraph 3, impose such other conditions on the use of information as are necessary. Although the information received by persons described in paragraph 1 is to be treated as secret, it may be disclosed by such persons in public court proceedings or in judicial decisions.

The provisions of paragraph 1 authorize the U.S. competent authority to continue to allow the General Accounting Office to examine tax return information received from Canada when GAO is engaged in a study of the administration of U.S. tax laws pursuant to a directive of Congress. However, the secrecy requirements of paragraph 1 must be met.

If a Contracting State requests information in accordance with Article XXVII, the other Contracting State shall endeavor, pursuant to paragraph 2, to obtain the information to which the request relates in the same manner as if its own taxation were involved, notwithstanding the fact that such State does not need the information. In addition, the competent authority requested to obtain information shall endeavor to provide the information in the particular form requested, such as depositions of witnesses and copies of unedited original documents, to the same extent such depositions and documents can be obtained under the laws or administrative practices of that State with respect to its own taxes.

Paragraph 3 provides that the provisions of paragraphs 1 and 2 do not impose on Canada or the United States the obligation to carry out administrative measures at variance with the laws and administrative practice of either State; to supply information which is not obtainable under the laws or in the normal course of the administration of either State; or to supply information which would disclose any trade, business, industrial, commercial, or professional secret or trade process, or information the disclosure of which would be contrary to public policy. Thus, Article XXVII allows, but does not obligate, the United States and Canada to obtain and provide information that would not be available to the requesting State under its laws or administrative practice or that in different circumstances would not be available to the State requested to provide the information. Further, Article XXVII allows a Contracting State to obtain information for the other Contracting State even if there is no tax liability in the State requested to obtain the information. Thus, the United States will continue to be able to give Canada tax information even if there is no U.S. tax liability at issue.

Paragraph 4 provides that, for the purpose of Article XXVII, the Convention applies, in the case of Canada, to all taxes imposed by the Government of Canada on estates and gifts and under the Income Tax Act and, in the case of the United States, to all taxes imposed under the Internal Revenue Code. Article XXVII does not apply to taxes imposed by political subdivisions or local authorities of the Contracting States. Paragraph 4 is designed to ensure that information exchange will extend to most national level taxes on both sides, and specifically to information gathered for purposes of Canada's taxes on estates and gifts (not effective for deaths or gifts after 1971). This provision is intended to mesh with paragraph 8 of Article XXX (Entry Into Force), which terminates the existing estate tax convention between the United States and Canada.

Article XXVIII. DIPLOMATIC AGENTS AND CONSULAR OFFICERS

Article XXVIII states that nothing in the Convention affects the fiscal privileges of diplomatic agents or consular officers under the general rules of international law or under the provisions of special agreements. However, various provisions of the Convention could apply to such persons, such as those concerning exchange of information, mutual agreement, and non-discrimination.

Article XXIX. MISCELLANEOUS RULES

Paragraph 1 states that the provisions of the Convention do not restrict in any manner any exclusion, exemption, deduction, credit, or other allowance accorded by the laws of a Contracting State in the determination of the tax imposed by that State. Thus, if a deduction would be allowed for an item in computing the taxable income of a Canadian resident under the Code, such deduction is available to such person in computing taxable income under the Convention. Paragraph 1 does not, however, authorize a taxpayer to make inconsistent choices between rules of the Code and rules of the Convention. For example, if a resident of Canada desires to claim the benefits of the "attributable to" rule of paragraphs 1 and 7 of Article VII (Business Profits) with respect to the taxation of business profits of a permanent establishment, such person must use the "attributable to" concept consistently for all items of income and deductions and may not rely upon the "effectively connected" rules of the Code to avoid U.S. tax on other items of attributable income. In no event are the rules of the Convention to increase overall U.S. tax liability from what liability would be if there were no convention.

Paragraph 2 provides a "saving clause" pursuant to which Canada and the United States may each tax its residents, as determined under Article IV (Residence), and the United States may tax its citizens (including any former citizen who lost his citizenship for the principal purpose of avoiding of U.S. income tax, but only for a period of 10 years following such loss) and companies electing under Code section 1504(d) to be treated as domestic corporations, as if there were no convention between the United States and Canada with respect to taxes on income and capital.

Paragraph 3 provides that, notwithstanding paragraph 2, the United States and Canada must respect certain specified provisions of the Convention in regard to residents, citizens, and section 1504(d) companies. Paragraph 3(a) lists certain paragraphs and Articles of the Convention that represent exceptions to the "saving clause" in all situations; paragraph 3(b) provides a limited further exception for students who have not acquired immigrant status in the State where they are temporarily present.

Paragraph 4 provides relief with respect to social security taxes imposed on employers, employees, and self-employed persons under Code sections 1401, 3101, and 3111. Income from personal services not subject to tax by the United States under the provisions of the 1942 Convention is not to be considered wages or net earnings from self-employment for purposes of the U.S. social security taxes with respect to taxable years of the taxpayer not barred by the statute of limitations (under the Code) ending on or before December 31 of the year in which instruments of ratification are exchanged. Thus, if instruments of ratification are exchanged in 1981 a resident of Canada earning income from personal services and such person's employer may apply for refunds of the employee's and employer's shares of U.S. social security tax paid attributable to the employee's income from personal services that is exempt from U.S. tax by virtue of the 1942 Convention. In this example, the refunds would be available for social security taxes paid with respect to taxable years not barred by the statute of limitations of the Code ending on or before December 31, 1981. For purposes of Code section 6611, the date of overpayment with respect to refunds of U.S. tax pursuant to paragraph 4 is the date on which instruments of ratification of the Convention are exchanged.

Under certain limited circumstances, an employee may, pursuant to paragraph 5 of Article XXX (Entry Into Force), claim an exemption from U.S. tax on wages under the 1942 Convention for one year after the Convention comes into force. The provisions of paragraph 4 would not, however, provide an exemption from U.S. social security taxes for such year.

Paragraph 4 does not modify existing U.S. statutes concerning social security benefits or funding. The Social Security Act requires the general funds of the Treasury to reimburse the social security trust funds on the basis of the records of wages and self-employment income maintained by the Social Security Administration. The Convention does not alter those records. Thus, any refunds of tax made pursuant to paragraph 4 would not affect claims for U.S. quarters of coverage with respect to social security benefits. And such refunds would be charged to general revenue funds, not social security trust funds.

Paragraph 5 provides a method to resolve conflicts between the Canadian and U.S. treatment of individual retirement accounts. Certain Canadian retirement plans which are qualified plans for Canadian tax purposes do not meet Code requirements for qualification. As a result, the earnings of such a plan are currently included in income, for U.S. tax purposes, rather than being deferred until actual distributions are made by the plan. Canada defers current taxes on the earnings of such a plan but imposes tax on actual distributions from the plan. Paragraph 5 is designed to avoid a mismatch of U.S. taxable income and foreign tax credits attributable to the Canadian tax on such distributions. Under the paragraph a United States citizen who is a resident of Canada and a beneficiary of a Canadian registered retirement savings plan may elect to defer U.S. taxation with respect to any income accrued in the plan but not distributed by the plan, until such time as a distribution is made from the plan or any substitute plan. The election is to be made under rules established by the competent authority of the United States.

Paragraph 6 provides that if 25 percent or more of the capital of a company which is a resident of a Contracting State is owned directly or indirectly by individuals who are not residents of that State, and if by reason of special measures the tax imposed in that State on that company with respect to dividends (other than direct investment dividends referred to in paragraph 2(a) of Article X (Dividends)), interest, or royalties arising in the other Contracting State is substantially less than the tax generally imposed by the first-mentioned State on corporate business profits, then, notwithstanding the provisions of Article X, XI (Interest), or XII (Royalties), the other State may tax such dividends, interest, or royalties as if there were no convention between the United States and Canada with respect to taxes on income and on capital. Thus, the Contracting State in which dividends, interest, or royalties arise may substitute its domestic law rate of tax on such income, which in the United States is currently 30 percent and in Canada is currently 25 percent, for the maximum rates provided for in the Convention, which range from zero to 15 percent.

The phrase "substantially less than" is subject to definition pursuant to paragraph 2 of Article III (General Definitions). In any event, the phrase does not include the situation under Canadian law where a privately owned company distributes its investment income in the form of dividends and receives a refund of up to 16⅔ percent of such a distribution. The effect of such a refund is not considered to produce tax "substantially less than" the tax generally imposed in Canada.

Article XXX. ENTRY INTO FORCE

Paragraph 1 provides that the Convention is subject to ratification in accordance with the procedures of Canada and the United States. The exchange of instruments of ratification is to take place at Ottawa as soon as possible.

Paragraph 2 provides, subject to paragraph 3, that the Convention shall enter into force upon the exchange of instruments of ratification. It has effect, with respect to source State taxation of dividends, interest, royalties, pensions, annuities, alimony, and child support, for amounts paid or credited on or after the first day of the second calendar month after the date on which the instruments of ratification are exchanged. For other taxes, the Convention takes effect for taxable years beginning on or after January 1 next following the date when instruments of ratification are exchanged. In the case of relief from United States social security taxes provided by paragraph 4 of Article XXIX (Miscellaneous Rules), the Convention also has effect for taxable years before the date on which instruments of ratification are exchanged.

Paragraph 3 provides special effective date rules for foreign tax credit computations with respect to taxes paid or accrued to Canada. Paragraph 3(a) provides that the tax on 1971 undistributed income on hand imposed by Part IX of the Income Tax Act of Canada is considered to be an "income tax" for distributions made on or after January 1, 1972 and before January 1, 1979. Any such tax which is paid or accrued under U.S. standards is considered to be imposed at the time of distribution and on the recipient of the distribution, in the proportion that the distribution out of undistributed income with respect to which the tax has been paid bears to 85 percent of such undistributed income. A person claiming a credit for tax pursuant to paragraph 3(a) is obligated to compute the amount of the credit in accordance with that paragraph.

Paragraph 3(b) provides that the principles of paragraph 6 of article XXIV (Elimination of Double Taxation), which provides for resourcing of certain dividend, interest, and royalty income to eliminate double taxation of U.S. citizens residing in Canada, have effect for taxable years beginning on or after January 1, 1976. The paragraph is intended to grant the competent authorities sufficient flexibility to address certain practical problems that have arisen under the 1942 Convention. It is anticipated that the competent authorities will be guided by paragraphs 4 and 5 of Article XXIV in applying paragraph 3(b) of Article XXX. Any claim for refund based on the provisions of paragraph 3 may be filed on or before June 30 of the calendar year following the year in which instruments of ratification are exchanged, notwithstanding statutes of limitations or other rules of domestic law to the contrary. For purposes of Code section 6611, the date of overpayment is the date on which instruments of ratification are exchanged, with respect to any refunds of U.S. tax pursuant to paragraph 3.

Paragraph 4 provides that, subject to paragraph 5, the 1942 Convention ceases to have effect for taxes for which the Convention has effect under the provisions of paragraph 2. For example, if under paragraph 2 the Convention were to have effect with respect to taxes withheld at source on dividends paid as of March 1, 1981, the 1942 Convention will not have effect with respect to such taxes.

Paragraph 5 modifies the rule of paragraph 4 to allow all of the provisions of the 1942 Convention to continue to have effect for the period through the first taxable year with respect to which the provisions of the Convention would otherwise have effect under paragraph 2(b), if greater relief from tax is available under the 1942 Convention than under the Convention.

Paragraph 6 provides that the 1942 Convention terminates on the last of the dates on which it has effect in accordance with the provisions of paragraph 4 and 5.

Paragraph 7 terminates the Exchange of Notes between the United States and Canada of August 2 and September 17, 1928 providing for relief from double taxation of shipping profits. The provisions of the Exchange of Notes no longer have effect for taxable years beginning on or after January 1 following the exchange of instruments of ratification of the Convention. The 1942 Convention, in Article V, had suspended the effectiveness of the Exchange of Notes.

Paragraph 8 terminates the Convention between Canada and the United States for the Avoidance of Double Taxation with Respect to Taxes on the Estates of Deceased Persons signed on February 17, 1961. The provisions of that Convention cease to have effect with respect to estates of persons deceased on or after January 1 of the year following the exchange of instruments of ratification of the Convention.

Article XXXI. TERMINATION

Paragraph 1 provides that the Convention shall remain in force until terminated by Canada or the United States.

Paragraph 2 provides that either Canada or the United States may terminate the Convention at any time after 5 years from the date on which instruments of ratification are exchanged, provided that notice of termination is given through diplomatic channels at least 6 months prior to the date on which the Convention is to terminate.

Paragraph 3 provides a special termination rule in situations where Canada or the United States changes its taxation laws and the other Contracting State believes that such change is significant enough to warrant modification of the Convention. In such a circumstance, the Canadan Ministry of Finance and the United States Department of the Treasury would consult with a view to resolving the matter. If the matter cannot be satisfactorily resolved, the Contracting State requesting an accommodation because of the change in the other Contracting State's taxation laws may terminate the Convention by giving the 6 months' prior notice required by paragraph 2, without regard to whether the Convention has been in force for 5 years.

Paragraph 4 provides that, in the event of termination, the Convention ceases to have effect for tax withheld at source under Articles X (Dividends), XI (Interest), XII (Royalties), and XVIII (Pensions and Annuities), and under paragraph 2 of Article XXII (Other Income), with respect to amounts paid or credited on or after the first day of January following the expiration of the 6 month period referred to in paragraph 2. In the case of other taxes, the Convention shall cease to have effect in the event of termination with respect to taxable years beginning on or after January 1 following the expiration of the 6 month period referred to in paragraph 2.

If an organization listed above submits information that warrants the renewal of its classification as a public charity or as a private operating foundation, the Internal Revenue Service will issue a ruling or determination letter with the revised classification as to foundation status. Grantors and contributors may thereafter rely upon such ruling or determination letter as provided in section 1.509(a)–7 of the Income Tax Regulations. It is not the practice of the Service to announce such revised classification of foundation status in the Internal Revenue Bulletin.

Announcement of the Disbarment, Suspension, or Consent to Voluntary Suspension of Attorneys, Certified Public Accountants, Enrolled Agents and Enrolled Actuaries from Practice Before the Internal Revenue Service

Under 31 Code of Federal Regulations, Part 10, an attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary, in order to avoid the institution or conclusion of a proceeding for his disbarment or suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service, may offer his consent to suspension from such practice. The Director of Practice, in his discretion, may suspend an attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary in accordance with the consent offered.

Attorneys, certified public accountants, enrolled agents, and enrolled actuaries are prohibited in any Internal Revenue Service matter from directly or indirectly employing, accepting assistance from, being employed by or sharing fees with, any practitioner disbarred or under suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service.

To enable attorneys, certified public accountants, enrolled agents and enrolled actuaries to identify practictioners under consent suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service, the Director of Practice will announce in Internal Revenue Bulletin the names and addresses of practitioners who have been suspended from such practice, their designation as attorneys, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary, and the date or period of suspension. This announcement will appear in the weekly Bulletin at the earliest practicable date after such action and will continue to appear in the weekly Bulletin for five successive weeks or for as many weeks as is practicable for each attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary so suspended and will later be consolidated and published in the Cumulative bulletin.

The following individuals have been placed under consent suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service:

Name	Address	Designation	Term of Suspension
Robert D. Digby	North Little Rock, AR	Certified Public Accountant	Four Months from July 29, 1986
Jeffrey E. Ellis	Rockland, ME	Certified Public Accountant	Indefinte from July 2, 1986
Charles L. Honey	Prescott, AR	Attorney	One Year from July 2, 1986
Bernhardt Karp	Hudson, NY	Attorney & Certified Public Accountant	Indefinite from July 29, 1986
George N. Meros	Springfield, MO	Attorney	Indefinite from July 25, 1986
William G. Waldrop	Adamsville, AL	Certified Public Accountant	Indefinite from July 17, 1986

Under 20 Code of Federal Regulations, Part 901, an enrolled actuary, in order to avoid the initiation or conclusion of a suspension or termination proceeding, may offer his/her consent to suspension of enrollment. The Executive Director, Joint Board for the Enrollment of Actuaries, may suspend enrollment in accordance with the consent offered. An enrolled actuary whose enrollment is suspended is prohibited from performing actuarial services under the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA) during the period of suspension.

To enable employees of the Internal Revenue Service and others to identify enrolled actuaries under suspension, the Executive Director will announce in the Internal Revenue Bulletin the names and addresses of enrolled actuaries who have been suspended. This announcement will appear in the weekly Bulletin at the earliest practicable date following suspension and will continue to appear in the weekly Bulletin for at least three successive weeks for each enrolled actuary so suspended and will later be consolidated and published in the Cumulative Bulletin.

Name of Enrolled Actuary	Address	Term of Suspension
David P. Rosenberg	Philadelphia, PA	Indefinite effective August 13, 1986

Definition of Terms

Revenue rulings and revenue procedures (hereinafter referred to as "rulings") that have an effect on previous rulings use the following defined terms to describe the effect:

Amplified describes a situation where no change is being made in a prior published position, but the prior position is being extended to apply to a variation of the fact situation set forth therein. Thus, if an earlier ruling held that a principle applied to A, and the new ruling holds that the same principle also applies to B, the earlier ruling is amplified. (Compare with modified, below).

Clarified is used in those instances where the language in a prior ruling is being made clear because the language has caused, or may cause, some confusion. It is not used where a position in a prior ruling is being changed.

Distinguished describes a situation where a ruling mentions a previously published ruling and points out an essential difference between them.

Modified is used where the substance of a previously published position is being changed. Thus, if a prior ruling held that a principle applied to A but not to B, and the new ruling holds that it applies to both A and B, the prior ruling is modified because it corrects a published position. (Compare with amplified and clarified, above).

Obsoleted describes a previously published ruling that is not considered determinative with respect to future transactions. This term is most commonly used in a ruling that lists previously published rulings that are obsoleted because of changes in law or regulations. A ruling may also be obsoleted because the substance has been included in regulations subsequently adopted.

Revoked describes situations where the position in the previously published ruling is not correct and the correct position is being stated in the new ruling.

Superseded describes a situation where the new ruling does nothing more than restate the substance and situation of a previously published ruling (or rulings). Thus, the term is used to republish under the 1954 Code and regulations the same position published under the 1939 Code and regulations. The term is also used when it is desired to republish in a single ruling a series of situations, names, etc., that were previously published over a period of time in separate rulings. If the new ruling does more than restate the substance of a prior ruling, a combination of terms is used. For example, modified and superseded describes a situation where the substance of a previously published ruling is being changed in part and is continued without change in part and it is desired to restate the valid portion of the previously published ruling in a new ruling that is self contained. In this case the previously published ruling is first modified and then, as modified, is superseded.

Supplemented is used in situations in which a list, such as a list of the names of countries, is published in a ruling and that list is expanded by adding further names in subsequent rulings. After the original ruling has been supplemented several times, a new ruling may be published that includes the list in the original ruling and the additions, and supersedes all prior rulings in the series.

Suspended is used in rare situations to show that the previous published rulings will not be applied pending some future action such as the issuance of new or amended regulations, the outcome of cases in litigation, or the outcome of a Service study.

ESTATE TAX

Rev. Rul. 86-117, page 19.
Credits against tax; property transferred in payment of state inheritance tax liability. The payment of state inheritance taxes in property other than cash constitutes "taxes actually paid" to the state for purposes of the federal estate tax credit. The amount "actually paid" is the lesser of the state inheritance tax liability discharged by the transfer of the property or the fair market value of the property on the date of the transfer. The estate realizes gain or loss upon the transfer measured by the difference between the estate's basis in the property and the amount of the state tax liability that was discharged.

T22.23:

Mission of the Service

The purpose of the Internal Revenue Service is to collect the proper amount of tax revenues at the least cost to the public, and in a manner that warrants the highest degree of public confidence in our integrity, efficiency and fairness. To achieve that purpose, we will:

—Encourage and achieve the highest possible degree of voluntary compliance in accordance with the tax law and regulations;

—Advise the public of their rights and responsibilities;

—Determine the extent of compliance and the causes of noncompliance;

—Do all things needed for the proper administration and enforcement of the tax laws;

—Continually search for and implement new, more efficient and effective ways of accomplishing our Mission

Statement of Principles of Internal Revenue Tax Administration

The function of the Internal Revenue Service is to administer the Internal Revenue Code. Tax policy for raising revenue is determined by Congress.

With this in mind, it is the duty of the Service to carry out that policy by correctly applying the laws enacted by Congress; to determine the reasonable meaning of various Code provisions in light of the Congressional purpose in enacting them; and to perform this work in a fair and impartial manner, with neither a government nor a taxpayer point of view.

At the heart of administration is interpretation of the Code. It is the responsibility of each person in the Service, charged with the duty of interpreting the law, to try to find the true meaning of the statutory provision and not to adopt a strained construction in the belief that he or she is "protecting the revenue." The revenue is properly protected only when we ascertain and apply the true meaning of the statute.

The Service also has the responsibility of applying and administering the law in a reasonable, practical manner. Issues should only be raised by examining officers when they have merit, never arbitrarily or for trading purposes. At the same time, the examining officer should never hesitate to raise a meritorious issue. It is also important that care be exercised not to raise an issue or to ask a court to adopt a position inconsistent with an established Service position.

Administration should be both reasonable and vigorous. It should be conducted with as little delay as possible and with great courtesy and considerateness. It should never try to overreach, and should be reasonable within the bounds of law and sound administration. It should, however, be vigorous in requiring compliance with law and it should be relentless in its attack on unreal tax devices and fraud.

Introduction

The Internal Revenue Bulletin is the authoritative instrument of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for announcing official rulings and procedures of the Internal Revenue Service and for publishing Treasury Decisions, Executive Orders, Tax Conventions, legislation, court decisions, and other items of general interest. It is published weekly and may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. Bulletin contents of a permanent nature are consolidated semiannually into Cumulative Bulletins, which are sold on a single-copy basis.

It is the policy of the Service to publish in the Bulletin all substantive rulings necessary to promote a uniform application of the tax laws, including all rulings that supersede, revoke, modify, or amend any of those previously published in the Bulletin. All published rulings apply retroactively unless otherwise indicated. Procedures relating solely to matters of internal management are not published; however, statements of internal practices and procedures that affect the rights and duties of taxpayers are published.

Revenue rulings represent the conclusions of the Service on the application of the law to the pivotal facts stated in the revenue ruling. In those based on positions taken in rulings to taxpayers or technical advice to Service field offices, identifying details and information of a confidential nature are deleted to prevent unwarranted invasions of privacy and to comply with statutory requirements.

Rulings and procedures reported in the Bulletin do not have the force and effect of Treasury Department Regulations, but they may be used as precedents. Unpublished rulings will not be relied on, used, or cited as precedents by Service personnel in the disposition of other cases. In applying published rulings and procedures, the effect of subsequent legislation, regulations, court decisions, rulings, and procedures must be considered, and Service personnel and others concerned are cautioned against reaching the same conclusions in other cases unless the facts and circumstances are substantially the same.

The Bulletin is divided into four parts as follows:

Part I.—1954 Code.

This part includes rulings and decisions based on provisions of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

Part II.—Treaties and Tax Legislation.

This part is divided into two subparts as follows: Subpart A, Tax Conventions, and Subpart B, Legislation and Related Committee Reports.

Part III.—Administrative, Procedural, and Miscellaneous.

To the extent practicable, pertinent cross references to these subjects are contained in the other Parts and Subparts.

Part IV.—Items of General Interest.

With the exception of the disbarment and suspension list included in this part, none of these announcements is consolidated in the Cumulative Bulletins.

The first Bulletin for each month includes an index for the matters published during the preceding month. These monthly indexes are cumulated on a quarterly and semiannual basis, and are published in the first Bulletin of the succeeding quarterly and semi-annual period, respectively.

The Bulletin Index-Digest System, a research and reference service supplementing the Bulletin, may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. It consists of four Services: Service No. 1, Income Tax; Service No. 2, Estate and Gift Taxes; Service No. 3, Employment Taxes; Service No. 4, Excise Taxes. Each Service consists of a basic volume and a cumulative supplement that provide (1) finding lists of items published in the Bulletin, (2) digests of revenue rulings, revenue procedures, and other published items, and (3) indexes of Public Laws, Treasury Decisions, and Tax Conventions.

The contents of this publication are not copyrighted and may be reprinted freely. A citation of the Internal Revenue Bulletin as the source would be appropriate.

Part I. Rulings and Decisions Under the Internal Revenue Code of 1954

Section 47.—Certain Dispositions, Etc., Of Section 38 Property

26 CFR 1.47–2: "Disposition" and "cessation". (Also Section 1.47–3.)

Investment credit; recapture; transfer of leasehold interest to partnership. The transfer of a leasehold interest in section 38 property to a partnership does not result in recapture of the investment credit under section 47(a) of the Code when the transfer is a mere change in the form of conducting the taxpayer's trade or business.

Rev. Rul. 86–116

ISSUE

Does the transfer of a leasehold interest in section 38 property to a partnership, under the circumstances described below, result in recapture of the investment credit under section 47(a) of the Internal Revenue Code?

FACTS

In 1980 the taxpayer, a corporation, leased certain section 38 property from an unrelated party for use in a trade or business. The section 38 property constituted substantially all of the assets used in the taxpayer's trade or business. The lessor made a valid election under section 48(d) of the Code to treat the taxpayer as the purchaser of the property for purposes of the investment credit.

In 1981 the taxpayer assigned the lease and transferred possession of the section 38 property to a partnership in which the taxpayer received a 50 percent interest. Simultaneously, the lessor transferred its title to the leased section 38 property (along with all its rights and obligations under the lease) to the same partnership in exchange for a partnership interest. Upon these simultaneous transfers to the partnership, the lease was terminated and the partnership received substantially all the assets necessary to conduct the taxpayer's trade or business.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 47(a)(1) of the Code provides that if during any taxable year any property is disposed of or otherwise ceases to be section 38 property with respect to the taxpayer before the close of the useful life that was taken into account in computing the credit under section 38, the federal income tax for such taxable year shall be increased by an amount equal to the aggregate decrease in the credits allowed under section 38 for all prior years that would have resulted solely from substituting, in determining qualified investment, for such useful life the shorter actual useful life.

Section 47(b) of the Code provides that property shall not be treated as ceasing to be section 38 property with respect to the taxpayer by reason of a mere change in the form of conducting the trade or business so long as the property is retained in such trade or business as section 38 property and the taxpayer retains a substantial interest in such trade or business.

Section 1.47–2(b)(2) of the Income Tax Regulations provides that for purposes of paragraph (a) of section 1.47–1 (recomputation of credit allowed by section 38 of the Code), if, under section 1.48–4, the lessor of new section 38 property made a valid election to treat the lessee as having purchased such property for purposes of the credit allowed by section 38, that certain rules apply in determining whether such property is disposed of, or otherwise ceases to be section 38 property with respect to the lessee. The rules applicable to this transaction are set forth in section 1.47–2(b)(2) as follows:

(i) Generally, a mere disposition by the lessor of property subject to a lease shall not be considered to be a disposition by the lessee.

(iii) If a lease is terminated and the property is transferred by the lessee to the lessor or to any other person, such transfer shall be considered to be a dispostion by the lessee.

Section 1.47–3(f)(1) of the regulations provides that, notwithstanding the provisions of section 1.47–2, relating to "disposition" and "cessation," paragraph (a) of section 1.47–1 shall not apply to section 38 property that is disposed of, or otherwise ceases to be section 38 property with respect to the taxpayer by reason of a mere change in the form of conducting the trade or business in which such section 38 property is used, provided certain conditions are satisfied.

Under sections 1.47–3(f)(1)(ii) and (4) of the regulations, three conditions must be met for the "mere change in form" rule to apply to the assignment of a lease and transfer of possession of section 38 property with respect to which a valid section 48(d) election was made:

(a) the section 38 property is retained as section 38 property in the same trade or business;

(b) the transferor of section 38 property retains a substantial interest in such trade or business; and

(c) substantially all the assets (whether or not section 38 property) necessary to operate such trade or business are transferred to the transferee to whom such section 38 property is transferred.

As described earlier, the lease terminated when the taxpayer contributed its leasehold interest in the section 38 property to the partnership. Pursuant to section 1.47–2(b)(2)(iii) of the regulations, a disposition occurs if the lease is terminated and the property is transferred by the lessee to the lessor or to any other person. However, pursuant to section 1.47–3(f)(1), recapture is not required in a transaction that constitutes a mere change in the form of conducting the taxpayer's trade or business.

In this situation, the taxpayer's transfer to the partnership satisfies the conditions in sections 1.47–3(f)(1)(ii) and (4) of the regulations and is a mere change in the form of conducting the taxpayer's trade or business because: (1) the section 38 property was retained as section 38 property in the same trade or business; (2) the taxpayer retained a substantial interest in such trade or business; that is, the 50-percent partnership interest (see example 5 of section 1.47–3(f)(6) of the regulations); and (3) substantially all the assets necessary to operate the trade or business were transferred to the partnership.

HOLDING

The transfer of the leasehold interest in section 38 property to a partnership, under the circumstances described above, does not result in recapture of the investment credit under section 47(a) of the Code.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: BACKGROUND

On March 9, 1983, the FEDERAL REGISTER published proposed amendments to the Income Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 1) under section 704(b) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 [1983-1 C.B. 930]. Those amendments were proposed to conform the regulations to section 213(d) of the Tax Reform Act of 1976 (95 Stat. 1548). Numerous written comments were received during the comment period, and a public hearing was held on May 4, 1983. On December 31, 1985, the FEDERAL REGISTER (50 FR 53420) published final regulations (T.D. 8065) [1986-1 C.B. 254] under section 704(b). That Treasury decision adopted the proposed rules as revised by the Treasury decision, except that §1.704-1(b)(4)(iv), relating to allocations of loss and deduction attributable to nonrecourse debt, was reserved. The proposed regulations remained outstanding on that issue. Since December 31, 1985, the Treasury Department has continued to consider the public comment concerning this issue. After consideration of all the public comments concerning the issue of the allocation of loss and deduction attributable to nonrecourse debt, the proposed rules on this issue are finalized as revised by this Treasury decision.

In addition, certain clarifying changes are made to the final regulations that were published on December 31, 1985.

EXPLANATION OF PROVISIONS NONRECOURSE DEBT

The final regulations provide that allocations of loss and deduction attributable to nonrecourse debt shall be deemed to be made in accordance with the partners' interests in the partnership so long as four requirements are met. First, requirements (1) and (2) of §1.704-1(b)(2)(ii)(b), relating to the requirements to maintain capital accounts and have liquidation distributions made in accordance with capital account balances, must be satisfied. Second, the partnership agreement must provide that allocations of such loss and deduction are made in a manner that is reasonably consistent with allocations, which have substantial economic effect, of some other significant partnership item attributable to partnership property securing the nonrecourse liabilities (other than minimum gain recognized by the partnership). Third, either requirement (3) of §1.704-1(b)(2)(ii)(b), relating to the restoration of partners' deficit capital account balances, must be satisfied, or the partnership agreement must contain a "minimum gain chargeback." Fourth, all other material partnership allocations and capital account adjustments must be recognized under §1.704-1(b). Allocations not qualifying under this safe harbor must be made in accordance with the partners' overall economic interests in the partnership.

In addition, the final regulations clarify that the amount of a partner's share of minimum gain shall be treated as a limited deficit make-up obligation for purposes of the alternative economic effect test of existing §1.704-1(b)(2)(ii)(d). In addition, the regulations give guidance on the application of section 704(c) and section 704(c) principles in cases where nonrecourse debt is involved. Finally, the regulations clarify the treatment of deductions attributable to nonrecourse loans made to the partnership by a partner of the partnership but reserve §1.704-1(b)(4)(iv)(h) for rules to be proposed concerning the treatment of nonrecourse deductions attributable to nonrecourse loans made to the partnership by a person related to a partner of the partnership.

OTHER CLARIFYING CHANGES

The final regulations also contain several corrective and clarifying changes to the final regulations under section 704(b) that were published in the FEDERAL REGISTER on December 31, 1985.

PUBLIC COMMENTS AND CHANGES MADE IN RESPONSE TO PUBLIC COMMENTS

NONRECOURSE DEBT

Section 704(b), as amended by the Tax Reform Act of 1976, provides that a partner's distributive share of income, gain, loss, deduction, or credit (or item thereof) is determined in accordance with such partner's interest in the partnership (determined by taking into account all facts and circumstances) if either the partnership agreement does not provide for the distributive share, or the allocation to the partner under the partnership agreement does not have substantial economic effect.

Allocations of loss and deduction attributable to nonrecourse debt cannot have substantial economic effect since no partner of the partnership can bear the economic loss corresponding to the loss and deduction attributable to such nonrecourse debt. Such economic loss can only be borne by the nonrecourse lender. Because allocations of loss and deduction attributable to nonrecourse debt cannot have economic effect, section 704(b) mandates that such items must be allocated in accordance with the partners' interests in the partnership.

The proposed regulations published in March of 1983 provided that loss and deduction attributable to nonrecourse debt would be deemed to be in accordance with the partners' interests in the partnership if the partnership maintained capital accounts in accordance with the regulations, liquidating distributions were made in accordance with positive capital account balances, and either: (1) Partners were obligated to restore the deficit balances in their capital accounts upon liquidation of their interests in the partnership, or (2) the deficit capital account balances attributable to such loss and deduction did not exceed the amount of minimum gain and such minimum gain was allocated to the partners who were allocated such loss and deduction.

This rule was criticized by certain members of the public on conceptual grounds. These commentators contended that a partner's obligation to bear the burden of taxation on the minimum gain that resulted from loss and deduction attributable to nonrecourse debt was not necessarily a good indication of a partner's interest in the partnership. For example, under the proposed rule, so long as the partnership agreement contained a minimum gain chargeback provision, 100 percent of the loss and deduction attributable to nonrecourse debt could be allocated to a partner even though such partner's interest in every other partnership item was substantially less than 100 percent.

The Treasury Department has fully considered all of the public comment and agrees that a partnership should not be allowed to allocate loss and deduction attributable to nonrecourse debt in the manner described in the example in the preceding paragraph. Accordingly, the proposed rule has been modified to preclude this and similar types of tax-motiviated arrangements.

In addition, several other changes were made in response to the public comment. Several commentators asked for examples that explained the interaction between section 704(c) and the nonrecourse debt provision. Other commentators asked for more limited partnership examples and examples where partnership assets secure more than one partnership liability and where nonrecourse liabilities are secured by more than one partnership asset. Additional examples have been added in response to these comments.

Similarly, in response to commentators who asked for clarification of the rule in a case where partnership assets are subject to both recourse and nonrecourse liabilities, new rules and examples have been added to address so-called "stacking" problems.

Certain commentators asked for clarification of the rules where a partner made a purported nonrecourse loan to the partnership. The final regulations provide that allocations of loss and deduction attributable to such loans are not governed by the nonrecourse debt rules. Instead, such losses and deductions must be allocated to the lending partner under §1.704-1(b)(3). The Treasury Department is studying whether transactions involving loans to the partnership by persons related to partners should be governed by similar rules. If it determines that similar rules should be applicable to such cases, those rules will be proposed as part of another regulation project.

REGULATORY FLEXIBILITY ACT AND EXECUTIVE ORDER 12291

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has determined that this final rule is not a major rule as defined in Executive Order 12291 and that a Regulatory Impact Analysis is therefore not required. The Internal Revenue Service has concluded that the final regulations contained herein are interpretative and that the notice and public procedure requirements of 5 U.S.C. 553 do not apply. Accordingly, these final regulations do not constitute regulations subject to the Regulatory Flexibility Act (5 U.S.C. Chapter 6).

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal author of these regulations is John G. Schmalz of the Legislation and Regulations Division of the Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, personnel from other offices of the Internal Revenue Service and the Treasury Department participated in developing these regulations both on matters of substance and style.

Adoption of amendments to the regulations

Accordingly, 26 CFR Part 1 is amended as follows:

Paragraph 1. The authority for Part 1 continues to read in part:

Authority: 26 U.S.C. 7805. * * *

Par. 2. Section 1.704-1(b) is amended by revising paragraph (b)(4)(iv) and by adding examples (20) through (23) immediately after example (19) in paragraph (b)(5) to read as follows:

§1.704-1 Partner's distributive share.

* * * * *

(b) Determination of partner's distributive share. * * *

(4) Special rules. * * *

(iv) Nonrecourse deductions—(a) Allocation of nonrecourse deductions. An allocation of loss, deduction, or section 705(a)(2)(B) expenditure (or item thereof) attributable to nonrecourse liabilities of the partnership ("nonrecourse deductions") cannot have economic effect because, in the event there is an economic burden that corresponds to such an allocation, the creditor alone bears that burden. Thus, nonrecourse deductions must be allocated in accordance with the partners' interests in the partnership. Paragraph (b)(4)(iv)(d) of this section, however, provides a test under which certain allocations of nonrecourse deductions will be deemed to be in accordance with the partners' interests in the partnership. If that test is not satisified, the partners' distributive shares of nonrecourse deductions will be determined, under paragraph (b)(3) of this section, according to the partners' overall economic interests in the partnership.

(b) Determination of nonrecourse deductions. The amount of nonrecourse deductions for a partnership taxable year equals the net increase, if any, in the amount of partnership minimum gain during that taxable year. See Examples (20)(i), (21), and (22) of paragraph (b)(5) of this section. In determining such net increase for any partnership taxable year in which the capital accounts of the partners are increased pursuant to paragraph (b)(2)(iv)(f) of this section to reflect a revaluation of partnership property subject to one or more nonrecourse liabilities of the partnership, any decrease in partnership minimum gain attributable to each such revaluation shall be added back to the net decrease or increase otherwise determined. See Example (22) (iii) of paragraph (b)(5) of this section. The nonrecourse deductions for a partnership taxable year shall consist first of depreciation or cost recovery deductions with respect to items of partnership property subject to one or more nonrecourse liabilities of the partnership to the extent of the increase in minimum gain attributable to the nonrecourse liabilities to which each such item of property is subject, with the remainder of such nonrecourse deductions, if any, made up of a pro rata portion of the partnership's other items of deduction, loss, and section 705(a)(2)(B) expenditure for that year. If, however, such depreciation or cost recovery deductions exceed the net increase in partnership minimum gain, a proportional share of each such deduction shall constitute a nonrecourse deduction. See example (23) of paragraph (b)(5) of this section. In addition, if the net increase in partnership minimum gain during a partnership taxable year exceeds the total amount of items of partnership loss, deduction, and section 705(a)(2)(B) expenditure for such year, then an amount of partnership loss, deduction, and section 705(a)(2)(B) expenditure for the partnership's next succeeding taxable year (or years) equal to such excess shall constitute nonrecourse deductions, as if there had been a net increase in partnership minimum gain during such succeeding year (or years) in the amount of such excess.

(c) Partnership minimum gain. The amount of partnership minimum gain is determined by computing, with respect to each nonrecourse liability of the partnership, the amount of gain (of whatever character), if any, that would be realized by the partnership if it disposed of (in a taxable transaction) the partnership property subject to such liability in full satisfaction thereof, and by then aggregating the amounts so computed. See examples (20)(i) and (iv), (21), and (22) of paragraph (b)(5) of this section. For the purpose of determining the amount of such gain, (1) the adjusted basis of partnership property subject to two or more liabilities of equal priority shall be allocated among such liabilities in proportion to the respective outstanding balances of such liabilities, and (2) the adjusted basis of partnership property subject to two or more liabilities of unequal priority shall be allocated to the liabilities of an inferior priority (in accordance with (1) above) only to the extent of the excess, if any, of the adjusted tax basis of such property over the aggregate outstanding balance of the liabilities of superior priority. Only the portion of the property's adjusted basis allocated to nonrecourse liabilities of the partnership shall be used in computing minimum gain. See example (20)(v) and (vi) of paragraph (b)(5) of this section. If partnership property subject to one or more nonrecourse liabilities of the partnership is, under paragraph (b)(2)(iv)(d) or (b)(2)(iv)(f) of this section, properly reflected on the books of the partnership at a book value that differs from the adjusted tax basis of such property, the determinations under this paragraph (b)(4)(iv) shall be made with reference to such book value. See example (22) of paragraph (b)(5) of this section.

(d) Requirements to be satisfied. Allocations of nonrecourse deductions shall be deemed to be made in accordance with the partners' interests in the partnership if, and only if—

(1) Throughout the full term of the partnership, requirements (1) and (2) of paragraph (b)(2)(ii)(b) of this section are satisfied,

(2) Beginning in the first taxable year in which there are nonrecourse deductions and thereafter throughout the full term of the partnership, the partnership agreement provides for allocations of nonrecourse deductions among the partners in a manner that is reasonably consistent with allocations, which have substantial economic effect, of some other significant partnership item attributable to the property securing nonrecourse liabilities of the partnership (other than minimum gain recognized by the partnership),

(3) Beginning in the first taxable year of the partnership in which the partnership has nonrecourse deductions and thereafter throughout the full term of the partnership, (i) requirement (3) of paragraph (b)(2)(ii)(b) of this section is satisfied, or (ii) the partnership agreement contains a "minimum gain chargeback" (as defined in paragraph (b)(4)(iv)(e) of this section), and

(4) All other material allocations and capital account adjustments under the partnership agreement are recognized under this paragraph (b) (without regard to whether allocations of adjusted tax basis and amount realized under section 613A(c)(7)(D) are recognized under paragraph (b)(4)(v) of this section).

(e) Minimum gain chargeback. A partnership agreement contains a "minimum gain chargeback" if, and only if, it provides that, if there is a net decrease in partnership minimum gain during a partnership taxable year, all partners with a deficit capital account balance at the end of such year (excluding from each partner's deficit capital account balance any amount that such partner is obligated to restore under paragraph (b)(2)(ii)(c) of this section, as well as any addition thereto pursuant to the next to last sentence of paragraph (b)(4)(iv)(f) of this section computed with respect to the amount of partnership minimum gain after such net decrease) will be allocated, before any other allocation is made under section 704(b) of partnership items for such taxable year, items of income and gain for such year (and, if necessary, subsequent years) in the amount and in the proportions needed to eliminate such deficits as quickly as possible. For purposes of the preceding sentence, partners' capital accounts shall be reduced for the items described in paragraph (b)(2)(ii)(d)(4), (5), and (6) of this section. Allocations of items of income and gain made pursuant to a minimum gain chargeback shall be deemed to be made in accordance with the partners' interests in the partnership if requirements (1) and (2) of paragraph (b)(2)(ii)(b) of this section are satisfied. The minimum gain chargeback allocated in any taxable year shall consist first of gains recognized from the disposition of items of partnership property subject to one or more nonrecourse liabilities of the partnership to the extent of the decrease in minimum gain attributable to the disposition of such items of property, with the remainder of such minimum gain chargeback, if any, made up of a pro rata portion of the partnership's other items of income and gain for that year. If, however, such gains exceed the amount of the minimum gain chargeback, a proportional share of each such gain shall constitute a part of the minimum gain chargeback. For purposes of paragraph (b)(2)(ii)(d)(6) of this section, offsetting increases to a partner's capital account taken into account under that paragraph shall not include income and gain that is expected to be allocated to such partner pursuant to a minimum gain chargeback.

(f) Partner's share of partnership minimum gain. A partner's share of partnership minimum gain at the end of any partnership taxable year equals the aggregate nonrecourse deductions allocated to such partner (and such partner's predecessors in interest) up to that time, less such partner's (and such predecessors') aggregate share of the net decreases in partnership minimum gain up to that time. A partner's share of the net decrease in partnership minimum gain during a partnership taxable year equals an amount that bears the same relation to the net decrease in partnership minimum gain during such year as such partner's share of partnership minimum gain at the end of the prior taxable year of the partnership (or, if later, at the time immediately following the last time that the capital accounts of the partners are increased pursuant to paragraph (b)(2)(iv)(f) of this section to reflect a revaluation of partnership property subject to one or more nonrecourse liabilities of the partnership) bears to the amount of partnership minimum gain at the end of such prior taxable year (or such later date). See examples (20)(i) and (iv) and (21) of this paragraph (b)(5) of this section. In addition, if there is a decrease in partnership minimum gain in a taxable year of the partnership (whether or not there is a net decrease in partnership minimum gain during such year) attributable to the revaluation of partnership property subject to one or more nonrecourse liabilities of the partnership, each partner's share of partnership minimum gain as of the time of such revaluation shall be reduced by the amount of the increase in such partner's capital account attributable to such revaluation to the extent of the reduction in minimum gain caused by such revaluation. See example (22)(ii) of paragraph (b)(5) of this section. For purposes of paragraph (b)(2)(ii)(d) of this section, the amount of a partner's share of minimum gain shall be added to the limited dollar amount, if any, of the deficit balance in such partner's capital account that such partner is obligated to restore. See examples (20)(i) and (22)(i) of paragraph (b)(5) of this section.

(g) Nonrecourse liabilities of the partnership where a partner has economic risk of loss. The rationale for the special rule contained in this paragraph (b)(4)(iv) is that, in the event there is an economic burden that corresponds to the nonrecourse deductions, none of the partners will bear that burden. Accordingly, for purposes of this paragraph, a nonrecourse liability of the partnership is a liability of the partnership (or portion thereof) with respect to which none of the partners has any economic risk of loss (other than through their interests as partners in the partnership assets subject to the liability). Therefore, to the extent a partner may bear the burden of an economic loss corresponding to a loss, deduction, or section 705(a)(2)(B) expenditure attributable to a partnership liability that would be considered nonrecourse for purposes of §1.1001–2 (e.g., a purported nonrecourse loan made by such partner to the partnership or guaranteed by such partner), allocations of such loss, deduction, or section 705(a)(2)(B) expenditure are not governed by this paragraph (b)(4)(iv). Instead, allocations of such loss or deduction shall be made in accordance with the partners' interests in the partnership under paragraph (b)(3) of this section. This will require allocations of such loss or deduction to be made to the partner or partners who bear the burden of an economic loss corresponding to such loss or deduction. See example (20)(vii) and (viii) of paragraph (b)(5) of this section.

Example (20). (i) RM and HB form a limited partnership to acquire and operate a commercial office building. RM, the limited partner, contributes $180,000, and HB, the general partner, contributes $20,000 to the partnership, which obtains an $800,000 nonrecourse loan and purchases the building (on leased land) for $1,000,000. The nonrecourse loan is secured only by the building, and no principal payments are due for 5 years. The partnership agreement provides that the partners' capital accounts will be determined and maintained in accordance with paragraph (b)(2)(iv) of this section, distributions in liquidation of the partnership (or any partner's interest) will be made in accordance with the partners' positive capital account balances (as set forth in paragraph (b)(2)(ii)(b)(2) of this section), HB will be required to restore any deficit balance in his capital account following the liquidation of his interest (as set forth in paragraph (b)(2)(ii)(b)(3) of this section), and RM will not be required to restore any deficit balance in his capital account following the liquidation of his interest. The partnership agreement contains a qualified income offset (as defined in paragraph (b)(2)(ii)(d) of this section), and, as of the end of each partnership taxable year discussed herein, the items described in paragraphs (b)(2)(ii)(d)(4), (5), and (6) of this section are not reasonably expected to cause or increase a deficit balance in RM's capital account. In addition, the agreement contains a minimum gain chargeback (in accordance with paragraph (b)(4)(iv)(e) of this section). The partnership agreement provides that, except as otherwise required by its qualified income offset and minimum gain chargeback provisions, (a) all partnership items will be allocated 90 percent to RM and 10 percent to HB until the first time when the partnership has recognized items of income and gain that exceed the items of loss and deduction it has recognized over its life, and (b) all further partnership items will be allocated equally between RM and HB. Finally, the partnership agreement provides that all distributions, other than distributions in liquidation of the partnership or of a partner's interest in the partnership, will be made 90 percent to RM and 10 percent to HB until a total of $200,000 has been distributed, and thereafter all such distributions will be made equally to RM and HB. In each of the partnership's first 2 taxable years, it generates rental income of $95,000, operating expenses (including land lease payments) of $10,000, interest expense of $80,000, and a cost recovery deduction of $90,000, resulting in a net taxable loss of $85,000 in each of those years. The allocations of these losses 90 percent to RM and 10 percent to HB have substantial economic effect.

	RM	HB
Capital account upon formation	$180,000	$20,000
Less: net loss in years 1 and 2	(153,000)	(17,000)
Capital account at end of year 2	$27,000	$3,000

In the partnership's third taxable year, it again generates rental income of $95,000, operating expenses of $10,000, interest expense of $80,000, and a cost recovery deduction of $90,000, resulting in a net taxable loss of $85,000. If the partnership were to dispose of the building in full satisfaction of the nonrecourse liability at the end of that year, it would realize $70,000 of gain ($800,000 amount realized less $730,000 adjusted tax basis). Since the amount of partnership minimum gain at the end of that year (and the net increase in partnership minimum gain during that year) is $70,000, the amount of partnership nonrecourse deductions for that year is $70,000, consisting of cost recovery deductions allowable with respect to the building of $70,000. Pursuant to the partnership agreement all partnership items comprising the net taxable loss of $85,000, including the $70,000 nonrecourse deduction, are allocated 90 percent to RM and 10 percent to HB. The allocation of these items, other than the nonrecourse deductions, has substantial economic effect.

	RM	HB
Capital account at end of year 2	$27,000	$3,000
Less: net loss in year 3 (without nonrecourse deduction)	(13,500)	(1,500)
Less: nonrecourse deduction in year 3	(63,000)	(7,000)
Capital account at end of year 3	(49,500)	($5,500)

This allocation of the $70,000 nonrecourse deduction 90 percent to RM and 10 percent to HB satisfies requirement (2) of paragraph (b)(4)(iv)(d) of this section because the allocation is consistent with allocations, which have substantial economic effect, of other significant partnership items attributable to the building. Since the remaining requirements of paragraph (b)(4)(iv)(d) of this section are satisfied, the allocation of nonrecourse deductions is deemed to be made in accordance with the partners' interests in the partnership. At the end of the partnership's third taxable year, RM's and HB's shares of partnership minimum gain are $63,000 and $7,000, respectively. Therefore, pursuant to the next to last sentence in paragraph (b)(4)(iv)(f) of this section, RM is treated as obligated to restore a deficit balance in his capital account of $63,000, so that in the succeeding year RM could be allocated up to an additional $13,500 of partnership deductions, losses, and section 705(a)(2)(B) expenditures that are not nonrecourse deductions, and that allocation would be considered to have economic effect under the alternate economic effect test contained in paragraph (b)(2)(ii)(d) of this section even though such an allocation would increase a deficit capital account balance. If the partnership were to dispose of the building in full satisfaction of the nonrecourse liability at the beginning of the partnership's fourth taxable year (and had no other economic activity in that year), the partnership minimum gain would be decreased from $70,000 to zero. RM's and HB's shares of that net decrease would be $63,000 and $7,000, respectively. Upon such a disposition the minimum gain chargeback would require that RM be allocated an amount of that gain equal to $49,500 (the deficit balance in his capital account before any allocation is made to him under section 704(b) with respect to partnership items for the partnership's fourth taxable year).

(ii) Assume the same facts as originally stated in (i) except that the partnership agreement provides that all nonrecourse deductions of the partnership will be allocated equally between RM and HB. Furthermore, at the time the partnership agreement is entered into, there is a reasonable likelihood that over the partnership's life it will recognize amounts of income and gain significantly in excess of amounts of loss and deduction (other than nonrecourse deductions). The allocation of such excess equally between the partners pursuant to the partnership agreement will have substantial economic effect. The allocation of all items, other than the nonrecourse deductions, 90 percent to RM and 10 percent to HB has substantial economic effect.

Capital account upon formation	$180,000	$20,000
Less: net loss in years 1 and 2	(153,000)	(17,000)
Capital account at end of year 2	27,000	3,000
Less: net loss in year 3 (without nonrecourse deduction)	(13,500)	(1,500)
Less: nonrecourse deduction in year 3	(35,000)	(35,000)
Capital account at end of year 3	($21,500)	($33,500)

The allocation of the $70,000 nonrecourse deduction equally between RM and HB satisfies requirement (2) of paragraph (b)(4)(iv)(d) of this section because the allocation is consistent with allocations, which will have substantial economic effect, of other significant partnership items attributable to the building. Since the remaining requirements of paragraph (b)(4)(iv)(d) of this section are satisfied, the allocation of nonrecourse deductions is deemed to be made in accordance with the partners' interests in the partnership. The allocation of the nonrecourse deductions 75 percent to RM and 25 percent to HB (or in any other ratio between 90 percent to RM/10 percent to HB and 50 percent to RM/50 percent to HB) also would satisfy requirement (2) of paragraph (b)(4)(iv)(d) of this section.

(iii) Assume the same facts as originally stated in (i) except that the partnership agreement provides that RM will be allocated 99 percent, and HB 1 percent, of all nonrecourse deductions of the partnership. This allocation of the $70,000 nonrecourse deduction does not satisfy requirement (2) of paragraph (b)(4)(iv)(d) because it is not reasonably consistent with allocations which have substantial economic effect, of any other significant partnership item attributable to the building. Therefore, the allocation of nonrecourse deductions will be disregarded, and the nonrecourse deductions of the partnership will be reallocated according to the partners' overall economic interests in the partnership, determined with reference to the factors set forth in paragraph (b)(3)(ii) of this section.

(iv) Assume the same facts as originally stated in (i) except that, at the beginning of the partnership's fourth taxable year, RM contributes $144,000 and HB contributes $16,000 of additional capital to the partnership, which the partnership uses to reduce the amount of its nonrecourse liability from $800,000 to $640,000. In addition, in the partnership's fourth taxable year, it again generates rental income of $95,000, operating expenses of $10,000, and a cost recovery deduction of $90,000, resulting in a net taxable loss of $85,000. If the partnership were to dispose of the building in full satisfaction of the nonrecourse liability at the end of that year, it would realize no gain ($640,000 amount realized less $640,000 adjusted tax basis). Therefore, the amount of partnership minimum gain at the end of the year is zero, which represents a net decrease in partnership minimum gain of $70,000 during the year. RM's and HB's shares of this net decrease are $63,000 and $7,000, respectively, so that at the end of the partnership's fourth taxable year, RM's and HB's shares of partnership's fourth taxable year, RM's and HB's shares of partnership minimum gain are zero. Therefore, pursuant to the next to last sentence in paragraph (b)(4)(iv)(f) of this section, RM is no longer treated as being obligated to restore any deficit balance in his capital account. Assuming the sum of the reductions to RM's capital account described in paragraph (b)(2)(ii)(d)(4), (5), and (6) of this section do not exceed $94,500, the minimum gain chargeback does not require that either RM or HB be allocated items of income and gain in the partnership's fourth taxable year even though there is a net decrease in partnership minimum gain during that year. This is true because at the end of the year, before any allocation is made under section 704(b) to RM with respect to partnership items for the fourth taxable year, RM's capital account balance is $94,500 (his capital account balance at the end of the partnership's third taxable year increased by his $144,000 capital contribution), and HB has a full deficit makeup obligation.

	RM	HB
Capital account at end of year 3	($49,500)	($5,500)
Plus: contribution	144,000	16,000
Less: net loss in year 4	(76,500)	(8,500)
Capital account at end of year 4	$18,000	$2,000

(v) Assume the same facts as originally stated in (i) except that the partnership incurred only a $700,000 nonrecourse loan and, in addition, incurred a $100,000 recourse loan, subordinate in priority to the nonrecourse loan, to which the partnership's building is also subject. Under paragraph (b)(4)(iv)(c) of this section, $700,000 of the adjusted basis of the building at the end of the partnership's third taxable year is allocated to the nonrecourse liability (with the remaining $30,000 allocated to the recourse liability) so that if the partnership disposed of the building in full satisfaction of the nonrecourse liability at the end of that year, it would realize no gain ($700,000 amount realized less $700,000 adjusted tax basis). Therefore, there is no minimum gain at the end of the partnership's third taxable year (and no increase in partnership minimum gain in such year). If, however, the $700,000 nonrecourse loan were subordinate in priority to the $100,000 recourse loan, under paragraph (b)(4)(iv)(c) of this section, only $630,000 of the adjusted basis of the building would be allocated to the $700,000 nonrecourse loan (the excess of the $730,000 adjusted tax basis of the building at the end of the partnership's third taxable year over the balance of the superior $100,000 recourse liability). In that case the balance of the $700,000 nonrecourse liability would exceed the adjusted tax basis of the building so allocated by $70,000 so that there would be $70,000 of minimum gain (and a $70,000 increase in partnership minimum gain) in the partnership's third taxable year.

(vi) Assume the same facts as originally stated in (i) except that RM and HB personally guarantee the "first" $100,000 of the $800,000 nonrecourse loan (i.e., only if the building is worth less than $100,000 will they be called upon to make up any deficiency). Under paragraph (b)(4)(iv)(c) of this section, only $630,000 of the adjusted tax basis of the building is allocated to the 700,000 nonrecourse portion of the loan because the collateral will be applied first to satisfy the $100,000 guaranteed portion, in effect making it superior in priority to the remainder of the loan. On the other hand, if RM and HB were to guarantee the "last" $100,000 (i.e., if the building is worth less than $800,000, they will be called upon to make up the deficiency up to $100,000), $700,000 of the adjusted tax basis of the building would be allocated to the $700,000 nonrecourse portion of the loan because the guaranteed portion in effect would be inferior in priority to it.

(vii) Assume the same facts as originally stated in (i) except that the $800,000 loan is made by HB, the general partner. Under paragraph (b)(4)(iv)(g) of this section, the $800,000 obligation does not constitute a nonrecourse liability of the partnership for purposes of this paragraph (b)(4)(iv). To the extent that such obligation constitutes a nonrecourse liability under §1.1001–2, $70,000 of the $90,000 cost recovery deduction in the partnership's third taxable year must be allocated in accordance with the partners' interests in the partnership, under paragraph (b)(3) of this section. HB bears the burden of any economic loss corresponding to that $70,000 deduction. Therefore, HB must be allocated the entire amount of such deduction.

(viii) Assume the same facts as in (vii) except that the $800,000 loan from HB to the partnership is a purchase money loan that "wraps around" a $700,000 underlying nonrecourse note (also secured by the building) issued by HB to an unrelated person in connection with HB's acquisition of the building. Under these circumstances if the partnership were to convey the building to HB in satisfaction of the partnership's $800,000 liability, HB would bear the economic risk of loss with respect to only $100,000 of the liability. Therefore, for purposes of this paragraph (b)(4)(iv), the $800,000 liability will be treated as a $700,000 nonrecourse liability of the partnership and a $100,000 liability (inferior in priority to the $700,000 liability) of the partnership to HB. Under paragraph (b)(4)(iv)(g) of this section, the $100,000 liability does not constitute a nonrecourse liability of the partnership for purposes of this paragraph (b)(4)(iv). To the extent that such obligation constitutes a nonrecourse liability under §1.1001–2, $70,000 of the $90,000 cost recovery deduction realized in the partnership's third taxable year must be allocated to HB.

Example (21). (i) RD and PK form a general partnership to acquire and operate residential real properties. Each partner contributes $150,000 to the partnership. The partnership obtains a $1,500,000 nonrecourse loan and purchases 3 apartment buildings (on leased land) for $720,000 ("Property A"), $540,000 ("Property B"), and $540,000 ("Property C") respectively. The nonrecourse loan is secured only by the 3 buildings, and no principal payments are due for 5 years. In each of the partnership's first 3 taxable years, it generates rental income of $225,000, operating expenses (including land lease payments) of $50,000, interest expense of $175,000, and cost recovery deductions on the 3 properties of $150,000 ($60,000 on Property A, $45,000 on Property B, and $45,000 on Property C), resulting in a net taxable loss of $150,000 in each of those years. If the partnership were to dispose of the 3 apartment buildings in full satisfaction of its nonrecourse liability at the end of its third taxable year, it would realize $150,000 of gain ($1,500,000 amount realized less $1,350,000 adjusted tax basis). Since the amount of partnership minimum gain at the end of that year (and the net increase in partnership minimum gain during that year) is $150,000, the amount of partnership nonrecourse deductions for that year is $150,000, consisting of cost recovery deductions allowable with respect to the 3 apartment buildings of $150,000. The result would be the same if the partnership obtained 3 separate nonrecourse loans that were "cross-collateralized" (i.e., if each separate loan were secured by all 3 of the apartment buildings).

(ii) Assume the same facts as originally stated in (i) and that at the beginning of the partnership's fourth taxable year, the partnership (with the permission of the nonrecourse lender) disposes of Property A for $835,000 and uses a portion of the proceeds to repay $600,000 of the nonrecourse liability, reducing the balance to $900,000. As a result of the disposition, the partnership recognizes gain of $295,000 ($835,000 amount realized less $540,000 adjusted tax basis). Also during the partnership's fourth taxable year it generates rental income of $135,000 and operating expenses of $30,000, interest expense of $150,000, and cost recovery deductions of $90,000 ($45,000 on each remaining building). If the partnership were to dispose of the remaining 2 buildings in full satisfaction of its nonrecourse liability at the end of the partnership's fourth taxable year, it would realize gain of $180,000 ($900,000 amount realized less $720,000 aggregate adjusted tax basis), which represents the amount of partnership minimum gain at the end of such year. Since the amount of partnership minimum gain increased from $150,000 to $180,000 during the partnership's fourth taxable year, the amount of partnership nonrecourse deductions for such year is $30,000, consisting of cost recovery deductions allowable with respect to the 2 remaining apartment buildings.

Example (22). (i) OC and DR form a limited partnership to acquire and lease machinery that is 5-year recovery property. OC, the limited partner, and DR, the general partner, contribute $100,000 each to the partnership, which obtain an $800,000 nonrecourse loan and purchases the equipment for $1,000,000. The partnership elects under section 48(q)(4) to reduce the amount of investment tax credit in lieu of adjusting the tax basis of such machinery. The nonrecourse loan is secured only by the machinery. The principal amount of the loan is to be repaid $50,000 per year during each of the partnership's first 5 taxable years, with the remaining $550,900 of unpaid principal due on the first day of the partnership's sixth taxable year. the partnership agreement provides that the partners' captial accounts will be determined and maintaned in accordance with paragraph (b)(2)(iv) of this section, distributions in liquidation of the partnership (or any partner's interest) will be made in accordance with the partners' positive capital account balances (as set forth in paragraph (b)(2)(ii)(b)(2) of this section), DR will be required to restore any deficit balance in his capital account following the liquidation of his interest (as set forth in paragraph (b)(2)(ii)(b)(3) of this section), and OC will not be required to restore any deficit balance in his capital account following the liquidation of his interest. The partnership agreement contains a qualified income offset (as defined in paragraph (b)(2)(ii)(d) of this section), and, as of the end of each partnership taxable year discussed herein, the items described in paragraphs (b)(2)(ii)(d)(4), and (5), and (6) of this section are not reasonably expected to cause or increase a deficit balance in RM's capital account. In addition, the agreement contains a minimum gain chargeback (in accordance with paragraph (b)(4)(iv)(e) of this section). The partnership agreement provides that, except as otherwise required by its qualified income offset and minimum gain chargeback provisions, all partnership items will be allocated equally between OC and DR. Finally, the partnership agreement provides that all distributions, other than distributions in liquidation of the partnership or of a partner's interest in the partnership, will be made equally between OC and DR. In the partnership's first taxable year, it generates rental income of $130,000, interest expense of $80,000, and a cost recovery deduction of $150,000, resulting in a net taxable loss of $100,000. In addition, the partnership repays $50,000 of the nonrecourse liability, reducing that liability to $750,000. Allocations of these losses equally between OC and DR have substantial economic effect.

	OC	DR
Capital account upon formation	$100,000	$100,000
Less: net loss in year 1	(50,000)	(50,000)
Captial account at end of year 1	$50,000	$50,000

In the partnership's second taxable year it generates rental income of $130,000, interest expense of $75,000, and a cost recovery deduction of $220,000, resulting in a net taxable loss of $165,000. In addition, the partnership repays $50,000 of the nonrecourse liability, reducing that liability to $700,000, and distributes $2,500 of cash to each partner. If the partnership were to dispose of the machinery in full satisfaction of the nonrecourse liability at the end of that year, it would realize $70,000 of gain ($700,000 amount realized less $630,000 adjusted tax basis). Therefore, the amount of partnership minimum gain at the end of that year (and the net increase in partnership minimum gain during that year) is $70,000, and the amount of partnership nonrecourse deductions for that year is $70,000, consisting of cost recovery deductions allowable with respect to the machinery of $70,000. Pursuant to the partnership agreement all partnership items comprising the net taxable loss of $165,000, including the $70,000 nonrecourse deduction, are allocated equally between OC and DR. The allocation of these items, other than the nonrecourse deductions, has substantial economic effect.

	OC	DR
Capital account at end of year 1	$50,000	$50,000
Less: net loss in year 2 (without nonrecourse deduction)	(47,500)	(47,500)
Less: nonrecourse deduction in year 2	(35,000)	(35,000)
Less: distribution	(2,500)	(2,500)
Capital account at end of year 2	($35,000)	($35,000)

This allocation of the $70,000 nonrecourse deduction equally between OC and DR satisfies requirement (2) of paragraph (b)(4)(iv)(d) of this section because the allocation is consistent with allocations, which have substantial economic effect, of other significant partnership items attributable to the machinery. Since the remaining requirements of paragraph (b)(4)(iv)(d) of this section are satisfied, the allocation of nonrecourse deductions is deemed to be made in accordance with the partners' interests in the partnership. At the end of the partnership's second taxable year, OC's and DR's shares of partnership minimum gain are $35,000 each. Therefore, pursuant to the next to last sentence in paragraph (b)(4)(iv)(f) of this section, OC is treated as obligated to restore a deficit balance in his capital account of $35,000. If the partnership were to dispose of the machinery in full satisfaction of the nonrecourse liability at the beginning of the partnership's third taxable year (and had no other economic activity in that year), the partnership minimum gain would be decreased from $70,000 to zero. OC's and DR's shares of that net decrease would be $35,000 each. Upon such a disposition the minimum gain chargeback would require that OC be allocated an amount of that gain equal to $35,000 (the deficit balance in his capital account before any allocation is made to him under section 704(b) with respect to partnership items for the partnership's third taxable year). The minimum gain chargeback would not require that DR be allocated any amount of such gain, since he has a full deficit makeup obligation.

(ii) Assume the same facts as originally stated in (i) and that DT is admitted to the partnership at the beginning of the partnership's third taxable year. At the time of DT's admission, the fair market value of the machinery is $900,000. DT contributes $100,000 to the partnership (which amount the partnership invests in undeveloped land) in exchange for an interest in the partnership. Pursuant to paragraph (b)(2)(iv)(f) of this section, the capital accounts of OC and DR are adjusted upward to $100,000 each. This reflects the manner in which the partnership gain of $270,000 ($900,000 fair market value minus $630,000 adjusted basis) would be shared if the machinery were sold for its fair market value immediately prior to DT's admission to the partnership.

	OC	DR
Capital account before DT's admission	($35,000)	($35,000)
Deemed sale adjustment	135,000	135,000
Capital account adjusted for DT's admission	$100,000	$10,000

The partnership agreement is modified to provide that, except as otherwise required by its qualified income offset and minimum gain chargeback provisions, partnership income, gain, loss, and deduction, as computed for book purposes, will be allocated equally among the partners, and such allocations will be reflected in the partners' capital accounts. The partnership agreement also is modified to provide that depreciation and gain or loss, as computed for tax purposes, with respect to the machinery will be shared among the partners in a manner that takes account of the variation between such property's $630,000 adjusted tax basis and its $900,000 book value, in accordance with paragraph (b)(2)(iv)(f) of this section and the special rule contained in paragraph (b)(4)(i) of this section. Finally, the partnership agreement is modified to provide that DT will not be required to restore any deficit balance in his capital account following the liquidation of his interest. Since the requirements of paragraph (b)(2)(iv)(g) of this section are satisfied, the capital accounts of the partners (as adjusted) continue to be maintained in accordance with paragraph (b)(2)(iv) of this section. If the partnership were to dispose of the machinery in full satisfaction of the nonrecourse liability immediately following the revaluation of the machinery, it would realize no book gain ($700,000 amount realized less $900,000 book value). Thus, as a result of the revaluation of the machinery upward by $270,000, the partnership minimum gain is reduced from $70,000 immediately prior to such revaluation to zero. OC's and DR's shares of that decrease are $35,000 each.

(iii) Assume the same facts as in (ii) and that also during the partnership's third taxable year the partnership generates rental income of $130,000, interest expense of $70,000, a cost recovery deduction of $210,000, and a book depreciation deduction (attributable to the machinery) of $300,000. As a result the partnership has a net taxable loss of $150,000 and a net book loss of $240,000. In addition, the partnership repays $50,000 of the noncourse liability (after the date of DT's admission), reducing that liability to $650,000, and distributes $3,333 of cash to each partner. If the partnership were to dispose of the machinery in full satisfaction of the nonrecourse liability at the end of the year, $50,000 of book gain would result ($650,000 amount realized less $600,000 book value). Therefore, the amount of partnership minimum gain at the end of the year is $50,000, which represents a net decrease in partnership minimum gain of $20,000 during the year. (This is so even though there would be an increase in partnership minimum gain in the partnership's third taxable year if minimum gain were computed with reference to the adjusted tax basis of the machinery.) Nevertheless, pursuant to the second sentence of paragraph (b)(4)(iv)(d) of this section the amount of nonrecourse deductions of the partnership for its third taxable year is $50,000 (the net increase in partnership minimum gain during the year determined by adding back the $70,000 decrease in partnership minimum gain attributable to the revaluation of the machinery to the $20,000 net decrease in partnership minimum gain during the year). The $50,000 of partnership nonrecourse deductions for the year consist of book depreciation deductions allowable with respect to the machinery of $50,000. Pursuant to the partnership agreement all partnership items comprising the net book loss of $240,000, including the $50,000 nonrecourse deduction, are allocated equally among the partners. The allocation of these items, other than the nonrecourse deductions, has substantial economic effect. Consistent with the special partners' interests in the partnership rule contained in paragraph (b)(4)(i) of this section, the partnership agreement provides that the $210,000 cost recovery deduction for the partnership's third taxable year is, in accordance with section 704(c) principles, shared $55,000 to OC, $55,000 to Dr, and $100,000 to DT.

The allocation of the $50,000 nonrecourse deduction equally among OC, DR, and DT satisfies requirement (2) of paragraph (b)(4)(iv)(d) of this section because the allocation is consistent with allocations, which have substantial economic effect, of other significant partnership items attributable to the machinery. Since the remaining requirements of paragraph (b)(4)(iv)(d) of this section are satisfied, such allocation is deemed to be made in accordance with the partners' interest in the partnership. At the end of the partnership's third taxable year, OC's, DR's, and DT's shares of partnership minimum gain are $16,666 each.

(iv) Assume the same facts as in (iii) and that during the partnership's fourth taxable year the partnership generates rental income of $130,000, interest expense of $65,000, a cost recovery deduction of $210,000, and a book depreciation deduction (attributable to the machinery) of $300,000. As a result the partnership has a net taxable loss of $145,000 and a net book loss of $235,000. In addition, the partnership repays $50,000 of the nonrecourse liability, reducing that liability to $600,000, and distributes $5,000 of cash to each partner. If the partnership were to dispose of the machinery in full satisfaction of the nonrecourse liability at the end of the year, $300,000 of book gain would result ($600,000 amount realized less $300,000 book value). Therefore, the amount of partnership minimum gain as of the end of the year is $300,000, which represents a net increase in partnership minimum gain during the year of $250,000. Thus, the amount of partnership nonrecourse deductions for that year equals $250,000, consisting of book depreciation deductions of $250,000. Pursuant to the partnership agreement all partnership items comprising the net book loss of $235,000, including the $250,000 nonrecourse deduction, are allocated equally among the partners. That allocation of all items, other than the nonrecourse deductions, has substantial economic effect. Consistent with the special partners' interests in the partnership rule contained in paragraph (b)(4)(i) of this section, the partnership agreement provides that the $210,000 cost recovery deduction for the partnership's fourth taxable year is, in accordance with section 704(c) principles, shared $55,000 to OC, $55,000 to DR, and $100,000 to DT.

The allocation of the $250,000 nonrecourse deduction equally among OC, DR, and DT satisfies requirement (2) of paragraph (b)(4)(iv)(d) of this section. Since the remaining requirments of paragraph (b)(4)(iv)(d) of this section are satisfied, such allocation is deemed to be made in accordance with the partners' interest in the partnership. At the end of the partnership's third taxable year, OC's, DR's, and DT's shares partnership minimum gain are $100,000 each.

(v) Assume the same facts as (iv) and that at the beginning of the partnership's fifth taxable year it sells the machinery for $65,000 (using $600,000 of the proceeds to repay the nonrecourse liability), resulting in a taxable gain of $440,000 ($650,000 amount realized less $210,000 adjusted tax basis) and a book gain of $350,000 ($650,000 amount realized less $300,000 book basis). The partnership has no other items of income, gain, loss, or deduction for such year. As a result of the sale, partnership minimum gain is reduced from $300,000 to zero, reducing OC's, DR's, and DT's shares of partnership minimum gain to zero from $100,000 each. The minimum gain chargeback requires that OC and DT each be allocated an amount of that gain equal to $68,333 (the deficit balance in each of their capital accounts at the end of the partnership's fifth taxable year before any allocation is made to them under section 704(b) with respect to partnership items for that year). Thus, the allocation of the first $136,666 of book gain $68,333 to OC and $68,333 to DT is deemed to be made in accordance with the partners' interests in the partnership under paragraph (b)(4)(iv)(e) of this section. The allocation of the remaining $213,334 of book gain in a manner such that the total book gain is allocated equally among the partners has substantial economic effect. Consistent with the special partner's interests in the partnership rule contained in paragraph (b)(4)(i) of this section, the partnership agreement provides that the $440,000 taxable gain is, in accordance with section 704(c) principles, shared $161,667 to OC, $161,667 DR, and $116,666 to DT.

Example 23: (i) A partnership owns 4 properties, each of which is subject to a nonrecourse liability of the partnership. During a taxable year of the partnership, the following events take place. First, the partnership generates a cost recovery deduction (for both book and tax purposes) with respect to Property W of $10,000 and repays $5,000 of the nonrecourse liability secured only by that property, resulting in an increase in minimum gain with respect to that liability of $5,000. Second, the partnership generates a cost recovery deduction (for both book and tax purposes) with respect to Property X of $10,000 and repays none of the nonrecourse liability secured by that property, resulting in an increase in minimum gain with respect to that liability of $10,000. Third, the partnership generates a cost recovery deduction (for both book and tax purposes) of $2,000 on Property Y and repays $11,000 of the nonrecourse liability secured only by that property, resulting in a decrease in minimum gain with respect to that liability of $9,000 (although at the end of that year, there remains minimum gain with respect to that liability). Finally, the partnership borrows $5,000 on a nonrecourse basis giving as the only security for that liability Property Z, which is a parcel of undeveloped land with an adjusted tax basis (and book value) of $2,000, resulting in a net increase in minimum gain with respect to that liability of $3,000. The net increase in partnership minimum gain during that year is $9,000, so that the amount of nonrecourse deductions of the partnership for that taxable year is $9,000. Those nonrecourse deductions consist of $3,000 of cost recovery deductions with respect to Property W and $6,000 of cost recovery deductions with respect to Property X. The amount of nonrecourse deductions consisting of cost recovery deductions is determined as follows. With respect to the nonrecourse liability secured by Property Z, with respect to which there is no cost recovery deduction, the amount of cost recovery deductions that constitutes nonrecourse deductions is zero. Similarly, with respect to the noncourse liability secured by Property Y, for which there is no increase in minimum gain, the amount of cost recovery deductions that constitutes nonrecourse deductions is zero. With respect to each of the nonrecourse liabilities secured by Properties W and X, which are (i) secured by property with respect to which there are cost recovery deductions and (ii) for which there is an increase in minimum gain, the amount of cost recovery deductions that constitutes nonrecourse deductions equals the product obtained by multiplying the net increase in partnership minimum gain ($9,000) times a fraction, the numerator of which is the total cost recovery deductions with respect to the partnership property securing that particular liability to the extent of the increase in minimum gain with respect to that liability and the denominator of which is the sum of the numerators for each such liabilty. Thus, for the liability secured by Property W, the amount is $9,000 times $5,000/$15,000. For the liability secured by Property X, the amount is $9,000 times $10,000/$15,000. (If one depreciable property secured 2 partnership nonrecourse liabilities, the amount of cost recovery or book depreciation with respect to that property would be allocated among such liabilities in accordance with the method by which adjusted basis is allocated under paragraph (b)(2)(iv)(b) of this section.)

(ii) Assume the facts as in (i) except that the loan secured by Property Z is $15,000 (rather than $5,000), resulting in a net increase in minimum gain with respect to that liability of $13,000. Thus, the net increase in partnership minimum gain is $19,000, and the amount of nonrecourse deductions of the partnership for that taxable year is $19,000. Those nonrecourse deductions consist of $5,000 of cost recovery deductions with respect to Property W, $10,000 of cost recovery deductions with respect to Property X, and a pro rata portion of the partnership's other items of deduction, loss, and section 705(a)(2)(B) expenditure for that year. The method for computing the amounts of cost recovery deductions that constitute nonrecourse deductions is the same as in (i) for the liabilities secured by Properties Y and Z. With respect to each of the nonrecourse liabilities secured by Properties W and X, the amount of cost recovery deductions that constitutes nonrecourse deductions equals the total cost recovery deductions with respect to the partnership property securing that particular liability to the extent of the increase in minimum gain with respect to that liability.

Par. 3. Section 1.704–1(b) is further amended as follows:

1. Paragraph (b)(1)(i) is amended by inserting the word "three" immediately after the phrase "there are" in the second sentence thereof.

2. Paragraph (b)(1)(ii) is amended by inserting immediately after the phrase "May 1, 1986" the first time it appears in the second sentence thereof, the parenthetical phrase "(January 1, 1987, in the case of allocations of nonrecourse deductions as defined in paragraph (b)(4)(iv)(a) of this section)" and by deleting the phrase "as that term has" in the last sentence of that unit and adding in its place the phrase "or is in accordance with the partners' interests in the partnership as those terms have."

3. Paragraph (b)(1)(iii) is amended by adding a new sentence immediately before the last sentence to read as follows: "A deduction that appears to be a nonrecourse deduction deemed to be in accordance with the partners' interests in the partnership may not be such because purported nonrecourse liabilities of the partnership in fact constitute equity rather than debt."

4. Paragraph (b)(2)(ii)(b) is amended by inserting immediately before the last sentence thereof the following two new sentences: "Requirements (2) and (3) of this paragraph (b)(2)(ii)(b) are not violated if all or part of the partnership interest of one or more partners is purchased (other than in connection with the liquidation of the partnership) by the partnership or by one or more partners (or one or more persons related, within the meaning of section 267(b) (without modification by section 267(e)(1)) or section 707(b)(1), to a partner) pursuant to an agreement negotiated at arm's length by persons who at the time such agreement is entered into have materially adverse interests and if a principal purpose of such purchase and sale is not to avoid the principles of the second sentence of paragraph (b)(2)(ii)(a) of this section. In addition, requirement (2) of this paragraph (b)(2)(ii)(b) is not violated if, upon the liquidation of the partnership, the capital accounts of the partners are increased or decreased pursuant to paragraph (b)(2)(iv)(f) of this section as of the date of such liquidation and the partnership makes liquidating distributions within the time set out in that requirement (2) in the ratios of the partners' positive capital accounts, except that it does not distribute (A) reserves reasonably required to provide for liabilities (contingent or otherwise) of the partnership and (B) installment obligations owed to the partnership, so long as such withheld amounts are distributed as soon as practicable and in the ratios of the partners' positive capital account balances."

5. Paragraph (b)(2)(ii)(d) is amended by adding the parenthetical phrase "(other than increases pursuant to a minimum gain chargeback under paragraph (b)(4)(iv)(e) of this section)" to the end of the only sentence in (6) thereof, by adding the parenthetical phrase "(consisting of a pro rata portion of each item of partnership income, including gross income, and gain for such year)" in the penultimate sentence of that unit immediately after the phrase "income and gain," and by adding immediately before the last sentence of such unit a new sentence to read as follows: "Allocations of items of income and gain made pursuant to the immediately preceding sentence shall be deemed to be made in accordance with the partners' interests in the partnership if requirements (1) and (2) of paragraph (b)(2)(ii)(b) of this section are satisfied."

6. Paragraph (b)(2)(ii)(f) is amended by replacing the cross-reference to "(4), and (5), and (6) of paragraph (b)(2)(iv)(d) of this section" in the first sentence thereof with the cross-reference to "(4), (5), and (6) of paragraph (b)(2)(ii)(d) of this section."

7. Paragraph (b)(2)(ii)(h) is amended by adding the following new sentence immediately after the second sentence thereof: "(Thus, for example, if one partner who assumes a liability of the partnership is indemnified by another partner for a portion of such liability, the indemnifying partner (depending upon the particular facts) may be viewed as in effect having a partial deficit makeup obligation as a result of such indemnity agreement.)", and by adding at the end of the last sentence a new phrase to read as follows: "or partnership."

8. Paragraph (b)(2)(ii)(i) is amended by revising the first sentence thereof to read as follows: "Allocations made to a partner that do not otherwise have economic effect under this paragraph (b)(2)(ii) shall nevertheless be deemed to have economic effect, provided that as of the end of each partnership taxable year a liquidation of the partnership at the end of such year or at the end of any future year would produce the same economic results to the partners as would occur if requirements (1), (2), and (3) of paragraph (b)(2)(ii)(b) of this section had been satisfied, regardless of the economic performance of the partnership."

9. Paragraph (b)(2)(iii)(c) is amended by adding immediately after the parenthetical "(under this paragraph (b)(2)(iii)(c))" a new clause to read as follows:" and, for purposes of paragraph (b)(2)(iii)(a), it will be presumed that there is a reasonable possibility that the allocations will affect substantially the dollar amounts to be received by the partners from the partnership" and by deleting the phrase "(i) and (iv)" after "(7)."

10. Paragraph (b)(2)(iv)(b) is amended by deleting the word "securing" in the two places that it appears and by adding the phrase "secured by" in each such place.

11. Paragraph (b)(2)(iv)(c) is amended by revising the last sentence thereof to read as follows: "For purposes of this paragraph (b)(2)(iv)(c), liabilities are considered assumed only to the extent the assuming party is thereby subjected to personal liability with respect to such obligation, the obligee is aware of the assumption and can directly enforce the assuming party's obligation, and, as between the assuming party and the party from whom the liability is assumed, the assuming party is ultimately liable."

12. Paragraph (b)(2)(iv)(d)(3) is amended by revising the parenthetical phrase in the first sentence thereof to read "(see paragraph (b)(1)(vi) of this section)."

13. Paragraph (b)(2)(iv)(f) is amended by inserting the parenthetical phrase "(including intangible assets such as goodwill)" in the first sentence thereof immediately after the phrase "partnership property."

14. Paragraph (b)(2)(iv)(f)(5)(ii) is amended by inserting the phrase "the liquidation of the partnership or" immediately after the phrase "connection with."

15. Paragraph (b)(2)(iv)(g)(3) and (m)(4) is revised to read as set forth below:

Section 1.704–1 Partner's distributive share.

* * * * *

(b) Determination of a partner's distributive share. * * *

(2) Substantial economic effect. * * *

(iv) Maintenance of capital accounts. * * *

(g) Adjustments to reflect book value. * * *

(3) Determining amount of book items. The partners' capital accounts will not be considered adjusted in accordance with this paragraph (b)(2)(iv)(g) unless the amount of book depreciation, depletion, or amortization for a period with respect to an item of partnership property is the amount that bears the same relationship to the book value of such property as the depreciation (or cost recovery deduction), depletion, or amortization computed for tax purposes with respect to such property for such period bears to the adjusted tax basis of such property. If such property has a zero adjusted tax basis, the book depreciation, depletion, or amortization may be determined under any reasonable method selected by the partnership.

(m) Section 754 elections. * * *

(4) Section 734 adjustments. Except as provided in paragraph (b)(2)(iv)(m)(5) of this section, in the case of a distribution of property in liquidation of a partner's interest in the partnership by a partnership that has a section 754 election in effect for the partnership taxable year in which the distribution occurs, the partner who receives the distribution that gives rise to the adjustment to the adjusted tax basis of partnership property under section 734 shall have a corresponding adjustment made to his capital account. If such distribution is made other than in liquidation of a partner's interest in the partnership, however, except as provided in paragraph (b)(2)(iv)(m)(5) of this section, the capital accounts of the partners shall be adjusted by the amount of the adjustment to the adjusted tax basis of partnership property under section 734, and such capital account adjustment shall be shared among the partners in the manner in which the unrealized income and gain that is displaced by such adjustment would have been shared if the property whose basis is adjusted were sold immediately prior to such adjustment for its recomputed adjusted tax basis.

* * * * *

16. Paragraph (b)(2)(iv)(j) is amended by deleting the sentence "See example (2)(iii) of paragraph (b)(5) of this section."

17. Paragraph (b)(2)(iv)(r) is revised to read as follows:

(r) Restatement of capital accounts. With respect to partnerships that began operating in a taxable year beginning before May 1, 1986, the capital accounts of the partners of which have not been determined and maintained in accordance with the rules of this paragraph (b)(2)(iv) since inception, such capital accounts shall not be considered to be determined and maintained in accordance with the rules of this paragraph (b)(2)(iv) for taxable years beginning after April 30, 1986, unless either—

(1) such capital accounts are adjusted, effective for the first partnership taxable year beginning after April 30, 1986, to reflect the fair market value of partnership property as of the first day of such taxable year, and in connection with such adjustment, the rules contained in paragraph (b)(2)(iv)(f)(2), (3), and (4) of this section are satisfied, or

(2) the differences between the balance in each partner's capital account and the balance that would be in such partner's capital account if capital accounts had been determined and maintained in accordance with this paragraph (b)(2)(iv) throughout the full term of the partnership are not significant (for example, such differences are solely attributable to a failure to provide for treatment of section 709 expenses in accordance with the rules of paragraph (b)(2)(iv)(i)(2) of this section or to a failure to follow the rules in paragraph (b)(2)(iv)(m) of this section), and capital accounts are adjusted to bring them into conformity with the rules of this paragraph (b)(2)(iv) no later than the end of the first partnership taxable year beginning after April 30, 1986.

However, compliance with the previous sentence will have no bearing on the validity of allocations that relate to partnership taxable years beginning before May 1, 1986.

18. Paragraph (b)(3)(i) is amended by deleting the phrase "with respect" in the first sentence thereof and adding in its place the phrase "(if any) corresponding," and by adding the phrase "Except with respect to partnership items that cannot have economic effect (such as nonrecourse deductions of the partnership)," at the beginning of the second sentence thereof, and by adding immediately after the third sentence thereof a new sentence to read as follows: "(For example, in the case of an unexpected downward adjustment to the capital account of a partner who does not have a deficit make-up obligation that causes such partner to have a negative capital account, it may be necessary to allocate a disproportionate amount of gross income of the partnership to such partner for such year so as to bring that partner's capital account back up to zero.)"

19. Paragraph (b)(3)(iii) is amended by deleting the phrase "(i), (ii), and (iv)" after "(7)."

20. Paragraph (b)(4)(i) is amended by deleting the word "made" immediately before the phrase "in accordance with" in the third sentence thereof and by adding in its place the word "determined."

21. The second sentence of paragraph (b)(4)(v) is amended by deleting the word "are" the first time it appears and inserting in its place the word "is," by inserting the word "material" immediately after the phrase "and (b) all other," and by deleting the phrase "this paragraph" and by inserting in its place "this paragraph (b)."

22. Example (1) (ix) of paragraph (b)(5) is amended by adding the word "negotiable" immediately before the term "promissory note" in the first sentence thereof.

23. Example (7) (i) of paragraph (b)(5) is amended by adding a parenthesis after the phrase "deficit to the partnership" in the fourth sentence thereof.

24. Example (7) (iii) of paragraph (b)(5) is amended by deleting the phrase "general rules" and inserting in its place the phrase "second sentence" in the penultimate sentence thereof.

25. Example (13) (i) of paragraph (b)(5) is amended by adding immediately after the fourth sentence thereof a new sentence to read as follows: "The partnership uses the interim closing of the books method for purposes of section 706."

26. Example (14) (i) of paragraph (b)(5) is amended by adding immediately after the fourth sentence thereof a new sentence to read as follows: "The partnership uses the interim closing of the books method for purposes of section 706."

27. Example (18) (iii), is amended by in changing WN to WM in the penultimate sentence thereof.

28. Example (18) (vii) of paragraph (b)(5) is modified by deleting the phrase "under those principles MK must" in the last sentence thereof and adding in its place the phrase "under these facts those principles require MK to."

29. Example (18) (viii) of paragraph (b)(5) is amended by deleting the last two sentences thereof and by adding in their place two new sentences to read as follows: "Assume further that upon MK's admission WM and JL have adjusted capital account balances of $110,000 and $100,000, respectively. Consistent with the special partners' interests in the partnership rule contained in paragraph (b)(4)(i) of this section, the partnership agreement provides that the excess $10,000 cost recovery deduction ($110,000 less $100,000 included in MK's distributive share) is, in accordance with section 704 (c) principles, shared equally between WM and JL and is so included in their respective distributive shares for the partnership's third taxable year."

Par. 4. Section 1.704–1 (b)(0) is amended by adding, each on a separate line, the following lines to the table immediately after the line reference to 1.704–1(b)(4)(iv):

Allocation of nonrecourse deductions	1.704–1(b)(4)(iv)(a)
Determination of nonrecourse deductions	1.704–1(b)(4)(iv)(b)

Section 809.—Reduction in Certain Deductions of Mutual Life Insurance Companies

Mutual life insurance companies; differential earnings rate. The differential earnings rate for 1985 and the recomputed differential earnings rate for 1984 are set forth for use by mutual life insurance companies to compute their income tax liability for 1985.

Rev. Rul. 86–114

This revenue ruling contains the differential earnings rate for 1985 and the recomputed differential earnings rate for 1984. Under section 809 of the Internal Revenue Code, mutual life insurance companies use these rates in computing their income tax liability for 1985. This ruling also contains some of the figures on which the determinations of these rates are based. Announcement 86–36, 1986–12 I.R.B. 27, contained tentative determinations of these same rates.

Section 809(a) of the Code provides that, in the case of any mutual life insurance company, the amount of the deduction allowable under section 808 for policyholder dividends shall be reduced (but not below zero) by the "differential earnings amount." Any excess of the differential earnings amount over the amount of the deduction allowable under section 808 shall be taken into account as a reduction in the closing balance of reserves under subsections (a) and (b) of section 807. The "differential earnings amount "for any taxable year is an amount equal to the product of (a) the life insurance company's average equity base for the taxable year multiplied by (b) the "differential earnings rate" for such taxable year. The "differential earnings rate" for a taxable year is the excess of (a) the "imputed earnings rate" for the taxable year over (b) the "average mutual earnings rate" for the second calendar year preceding the calendar year in which the taxable year begins. The "imputed earnings rate" for any taxable year beginning after 1984 is an amount which bears the same ratio to 16.5 percent as the "current stock earnings rate" for the taxable year bears to the "base period stock earnings rate."

Section 809(f) of the Code provides that, in the case of any mutual life insurance company, if the "recomputed differential earnings amount" for any taxable year exceeds the differential earnings amount for such taxable year, such excess shall be included in life insurance gross income for the succeeding taxable year. If the differential earnings amount for any taxable year exceeds the recomputed differential earnings amount for such year, such excess shall be allowed as a life insurance deduction for the succeeding taxable year. The "recomputed differential earnings amount" for any taxable year is an amount calculated in the same manner as the differential earnings amount for such taxable year, but substituting the average mutual earnings rate for the calendar year in which the taxable year begins for the average mutual earnings rate for the second calendar year preceding the calendar year in which the taxable year begins. For example, the differential earnings rate for 1985 is based on the average mutual earnings rate for 1983, and the recomputed differential earnings rate for 1985 is based on the average mutual earnings rate for 1985.

For purposes of section 809 of the Code, the differential earnings rate for 1985, the rate used to calculate the recomputed differential earnings amount for 1984 (the "recomputed differential earnings rate" for 1984), and the figures on which these two rates are based are as follows:

Differential earnings rate for 1985	6.157 percent
Recomputed differential earnings rate for 1984	10.570 percent
Imputed earnings rate for 1985	16.323 percent
Base period stock earnings rate	18.221 percent
Current stock earnings rate for 1985	18.026 percent
Stock earnings rate for 1981	17.316 percent
Stock earnings rate for 1982	18.812 percent
Stock earnings rate for 1983	18.535 percent
Stock earnings rate for 1984	16.731 percent
Average mutual earnings rate for 1983	10.166 percent
Average mutual earnings rate for 1984	5.930 percent

Regulations under section 809 of the Code have not yet been issued, and when these regulations are issued, they may be effective for a period prior to the date of their issuance. Even if that is the case, however, in determining the rates that are to be used in computing 1985 tax liability, the Service will not change the procedures that governed its determination of the rates announced in this revenue ruling. For instance, for purposes of computing 1985 tax liability, the Service will not change the administrative procedures that controlled which companies' data were used in determining the two rates announced in this revenue ruling. (The rates are based on data from domestic companies only.) Regulations or other pronouncements, however, may result in a change in these and other procedures for determination of the rates to be used in computing the tax liability of subsequent years.

Section 817.—Treatment of Variable Contracts

26 CFR 1.817-5T: Diversification requirements for variable annuity, endowment, and life insurance contracts.

T.D. 8101

TITLE 26—INTERNAL REVENUE.—CHAPTER 1, SUBCHAPTER A, PART 1—INCOME TAX; TAXABLE YEARS BEGINNING AFTER DECEMBER 31, 1953

Diversification Requirements for Variable Annuity, Endowment, and Life Insurance Contracts

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Temporary regulations.

SUMMARY: This document contains temporary regulations relating to the diversification requirements for variable annuity, endowment, and life insurance contracts. In addition, the text of the temporary regulations set forth in this document serves as the text of the proposed regulations * * * [page 21, this Bulletin]. Changes to the applicable tax law were made by the Tax Reform Act of 1984. The regulations affect issuers and policyholders of variable contracts and provide them with guidance concerning the tax treatment of those contracts.

DATES: The regulations are effective generally, to variable annuity, endowment, and life insurance contracts for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1983. (See §1.817-5T(h)(10)(i).)

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: BACKGROUND

This document amends the Income Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 1) to provide rules under section 817(h) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, relating to diversification requirements for variable annuity, endowment, and life insurance contracts. Section 817(h) was added to the Code by section 211(a) of the Tax Reform Act of 1984 (Pub. L. 98-369, 98 Stat. 750).

EXPLANATION OF PROVISIONS

Section 817(h) authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury to prescribe diversification standards for the investments underlying a variable annuity, endowment, or life insurance contract and provides that a variable contract generally will not be treated as an annuity, endowment, or life insurance contract unless those standards are satisfied. A safe harbor is provided, however, for variable contracts based on a segregated asset account that satisfies the diversification requirements applicable to regulated investment companies and does not hold more than 55 percent of its assets in cash, cash items, Government securities, and securities of regulated investment companies. In addition, and exception from the diversification requirement permits variable life insurance contracts to be based on a segregated asset account that holds only Treasury securities.

The temporary regulations provide that the investments of a segregated asset account underlying a variable contract are adequately diversified if no more than 55 percent of the value of its assets is represented by any one investment, no more than 70 percent is represented by any two investments, no more than 80 percent is represented by any three investments, and no more than 90 percent is represented by any four investments. A special rule is provided for segregated asset accounts underlying variable life insurance contracts. Under this rule, a segregated asset account is adequately diversified if it satisfies the general diversification requirement or if its assets other than Treasury securities are adequately diversified. For purposes of determining whether assets other than Treasury securities are adequately diversified, the generally applicable percentage limitations are increased, with the amount of the increase depending on the value of the Treasury securities.

The temporary regulations also provide that segregated asset accounts will be considered adequately diversified during start-up and liquidation periods. An account is generally allowed one year for each purpose. In the case of a real property account, however, the start-up period is five years and the liquidation period is two years. The start-up period is reduced or is not available in certain circumstances to prevent the use of multiple start-up periods to avoid the diversification requirement. In general, this limitation applies if more than 30 percent of the amount allocated to an account as of any date was shifted from another segregated asset account and is attributable to premium income received more than one year before such date (or five years before such date in the case of a real property account). The limitation is not taken into account for purposes of determining whether a start-up period would be allowed under the principles of Rev. Rul. 81–225, 1981–2 C.B. 12. Thus, the transitional rule for cases in which an insurance company would be considered the owner of the assets of a segregated asset account under those principles is applied without regard to the limitation. Under the transitional rule that limitation will not apply until December 15, 1986.

The temporary regulations treat all Government securities as a single investment for purposes of the diversification requirements. In general, any security (including a cash item) that is issued, guaranteed, or insured by the United States or an instrumentality of the United States is treated as a Government security for this purpose. Under a transitional rule, however, debt instruments secured by a mortgage on real property or representing an interest in a pool of debt instruments secured by such mortgages will not be treated as Government securities before 1987, even if issued, guaranteed, or insured by the United States or an instrumentality of the United States.

The temporary regulations in this document do not address any issues other than the diversification standards applicable to variable annuity, endowment, and life insurance contracts. In particular, they do not provide guidance concerning the circumstances in which investor control of the investments of a segregated asset account may cause the investor, rather than the insurance company, to be treated as the owner of the assets in the account. For example, the temporary regulations provide that in appropriate cases a segregated asset account may include multiple sub-accounts, but do not specify the extent to which policyholders may direct their investments to particular sub-accounts without being treated as owners of the underlying assets. Guidance on this and other issues will be provided in regulations or revenue rulings under section 817(d), relating to the definition of variable contract.

SPECIAL ANALYSES

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has determined that this temporary rule is not a major rule as defined in Executive Order 12291. Accordingly, a Regulatory Impact Analysis is not required. No general notice of proposed rulemaking is required by 5 U.S.C. 553 for temporary regulations. Accordingly, a Regulatory Flexibility Analysis is not required (5 U.S.C. Chapter 6).

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal authors of these regulations are Bruce H. Jurist and Linda M. Kroening of the Legislation and Regulations Division of the Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, personnel from other offices of the Internal Revenue Service and Treasury Department participated in developing the regulations on matters of both substance and style.

Amendments to the regulations.

The amendments to 26 CFR Part 1 are as follows:

INCOME TAX REGULATIONS
(26 CFR Part 1)

Paragraph 1. The authority for Part 1 is amended by adding the following citation:

Authority: 26 U.S.C. 7805. * * * Section 1.817–5T also issued under 26 U.S.C. 817(h).

Par. 2. Section 1.817–5T is revised to read as follows:

§1.817–5T Diversification requirements for variable annuity, endowment, and life insurance contracts.

(a) In general. For purposes of subchapter L, section 72, and section 7702(a), a variable contract (as defined in section 817(d)), other than a pension plan contract (as defined in section 818(a)), which is based on one or more segregated asset accounts shall not be treated as an annuity, endowment, or life insurance contract for any period for which the investments of any such account are not adequately diversified. In addition, a variable contract that is not treated as an annuity, endowment, or life insurance contract for any period by reason of the preceding sentence shall not be treated as an annuity, endowment, or life insurance contract for any subsequent period even if the investments are adequately diversified for such subsequent period. See sections 7702(g) and (h) for the treatment of a variable contract which is not treated as an annuity, endowment, or life insurance contract for Federal income tax purposes but which is a life insurance or endowment contract under other applicable (e.g., State or foreign) law.

(b) Diversification of investments—(1) In general. (i) Except as otherwise provided in this paragraph and paragraph (c) of this section, the investments of a segregated asset account shall be considered adequately diversified for purposes of this section and section 817(h) only if—

(A) No more than 55% of the value of the total assets of the account is represented by any one investment;

(B) No more than 70% of the value of the total assets of the account is represented by any two investments;

(C) No more than 80% of the value of the total assets of the account is represented by any three investments; and

(D) No more than 90% of the value of the total assets of the account is represented by any four investments.

(ii) For purposes of this section—

(A) All securities of the same issuer, all interests in the same real property project, and all interests in the same commodity are each treated as a single investment;

(B) All government securities are treated as securities of a single issuer; and

(C) The members of an affiliated group (within the meaning of section 1504(a), determined without regard to the exceptions in section 1504(b)) ordinarily are treated as a single issuer.

(2) Safe harbor. A segregated asset account will be considered adequately diversified for purposes of this section and section 817(h) if—

(i) The account meets the requirements of section 851(b)(4) and the regulations thereunder; and

(ii) No more than 55% of the value of the total assets of the account is attributable to cash, cash items (including receivables), Government securities, and securities of other regulated investment companies.

(3) Alternative diversification requirements for variable life insurance contracts.

(i) A segregated asset account with respect to variable life insurance contracts will be considered adequately diversified for purposes of this section and section 817(h) if the requirements of paragraph (b)(1) or (b)(2) of this section are satisfied or if the assets of such account, other than Treasury securities, satisfy the percentage limitations prescribed in paragraph (b)(1) of this section increased by the product of (A) .5 and (B) the percentage of the value of the total assets of the account that is represented by Treasury securities. In determining whether the assets of an account, other than Treasury securities, satisfy the increased percentage limitations, such limitations are applied as if the Treasury securities were not included in the account (i.e., the increased percentage limitations are not applied to Treasury securities and the value of the total assets of the account is reduced by the value of the Treasury securities).

(ii) See paragraphs (f) and (g) of this section for circumstances in which a segregated asset account is treated as the owner of Treasury securities held indirectly through certain pass-through entities and corporations taxed under subchapter M, chapter 1 of the Code.

(iii) The provisions of this paragraph (b)(3) may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). On the last day of a quarter of a calendar year, a segregated asset account with respect to variable life insurance contracts holds assets having a total value of $100,000. The assets of the account are represented by Treasury securities having a total value of $90,000 and securities of Corporation A having a total value of $10,000. The 55% limit described in paragraph (b)(1)(i) of this section would be increased by 45% (0.5 × 90%) to 100%, and would then be applied to the assets of the account other than Treasury securities. Because no more than 100% of the value of the assets other than Treasury securities is represented by securities of Corporation A, the investments of the account will be considered adequately diversified.

Example (2). On the last day of a quarter of a calendar year, a segregated asset account with respect to variable life insurance contracts holds assets having a total value of $100,000. The assets of the account are represented by Treasury securities having a total value of $60,000, securities of Corporation A having a total value of $30,000, and securities of Corporation B having a total value of $10,000. The 55% and 70% limits described in paragraph (b)(1)(i) of this section would be increased by 30% (0.5 × 60%) to 85% and 100%, respectively, and would then be applied to the assets of the account other than Treasury securities. Securities of Corporation A represent 75%, and securities of Corporation B represent 25%, of the value of the assets of the account other than Treasury securities. Because no more than 85% of the value of the assets other than Treasury securities is represented by securities of Corporation A or B and no more than 100% of the value of the assets other than Treasury securities is represented by securities of Corporations A and B, the investments of the account will be considered adequately diversified.

(c) Periods for which an account is adequately diversified—(1) In general. A segregated asset account that satisfies the requirements of paragraph (b) of this section on the last day of a quarter of a calendar year (i.e., March 31, June 30, September 30, and December 31) or within 30 days after such last day shall be considered adequately diversified for such quarter.

(2) Start-up period. (i) Except as provided in paragraph (c)(2)(iv) of this section, a segregated asset account that is not a real property account on its first anniversary shall be considered adequately diversified until such first anniversary.

(ii) Except as provided in paragraph (c)(2)(iv) of this section, a segregated asset account that is a real property account on its first anniversary shall be considered adequately diversified until the earlier of its fifth anniversary or the anniversary on which the account ceases to be a real property account.

(iii) For purposes of paragraph (c)(2)(i) and (ii) of this section, the anniversary of a segregated asset account is the anniversary of the date on which any amount received under a life insurance or annuity contract is first allocated to the account.

(iv) If more than 30 percent of the amount allocated to a segregated asset account as of any date is attributable to premium and investment income that was received more than one year before such date, paragraph (c)(2)(i) of this section shall not apply to the segregated asset account for any period after such date. Similarly, if more than 30 percent of the amount allocated to a segregated asset account as of any date is attributable to premium and investment income that was received more than 5 years before such date, paragraph (c)(2)(ii) of this section shall not apply to the segregated asset account for any period after such date. For this purpose, premium income is treated as received on the date on which such income is first received with respect to the variable contract (or with respect to any predecessor variable contract exchanged for the variable contract in a transaction to which section 1035 applied) and investment income is treated as received on the date on which such income is first credited to a segregated asset account on which such variable contract (or predecessor contract) is based. Also for this purpose, an amount allocated to a segregated asset account shall be treated as attributable to the most recently received premium and investment income.

(3) Liquidation period. A segregated asset account that satisfies the requirements of paragraph (b) of this section on the date a plan of liquidation is adopted shall be considered adequately diversified for—

(i) The one-year period beginning on the date the plan of liquidation is adopted if the account is not a real property account on such date; or

(ii) The two-year period beginning on the date the plan of liquidation is adopted if the account is a real property account on such date.

(d) Aggregation of multiple accounts or funds. Two or more accounts or funds are treated as a single segregated asset account for purposes of section 817(h) and this section only if the investment return and market value of each such account or fund must be allocated to the same variable contracts and in the identical proportions as the investment return and market value of each other such account or fund. This rule may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. Variable contracts are based on an account that consists of five sub-accounts. The contract provides that policyholders of variable contracts based on the account may specify what portion of each premium is to be invested in a particular subaccount, subject to the restriction that no more than 55% of any premium may be invested in any one sub-account, no more than 70% may be invested in any two sub-accounts, no more than 80% may be invested in any three sub-accounts, and no more than 90% may be invested in any four sub-accounts. The return on a variable contract based on this account will be computed with regard to the allocation of premiums among the sub-accounts. Thus, the investment return and market value of a sub-account may be allocated to different variable contracts or in different proportions than the investment return and market value of the other sub-accounts. Accordingly, each sub-account is treated as a separate segregated asset account for purposes of section 817(h) and this section. If any of the five sub-accounts fails to be adequately diversified, any variable contract based in part on the sub-account will not be treated as a variable annuity or life insurance contract.

(e) Market fluctuations. A segregated asset account that satisfies the requirements of paragraph (b) of this section at the end of any calendar quarter (or within 30 days after the end of such calendar quarter) shall not be considered nondiversified in a subsequent quarter because of a discrepancy between the value of its assets and the diversification requirements unless such discrepancy exists immediately after the acquisition of any asset and such discrepancy is wholly or partly the result of such acquisition.

(f) Look-through rule for underlying investment company or trust—(1) In general. If this paragraph applies, a beneficial interest in a regulated investment company, a real estate investment trust, or a trust that is treated under sections 671 through 679 as owned by the grantor or another person ("investment company or trust") shall not be treated as a single investment of a segregated asset account. Instead, a pro rata portion of each asset of the investment company or trust shall be treated, for purposes of this section, as an asset of the segregated asset account. In the case of a regulated investment company having one or more segregated portfolios of assets in respect of which a series of stock is preferred over all other series, each segregated portfolio of assets will be treated solely for purposes of this paragraph as a separate regulated investment company.

(2) Applicability. This paragraph shall apply if—

(i) All the beneficial interests in the investment company or trust (other than those described in paragraph (f)(3) of this section) are held by one or more segregated asset accounts of one or more insurance companies; and

(ii) Public access to such investment company or trust is available exclusively (except as otherwise permitted in paragraph (f)(3) of this section) through the purchase of a variable contract.

(3) Interests not held by segregated asset accounts. The application of this paragraph shall not be prevented by reason of beneficial interests in the investment company or trust that are—

(i) Held by the general account of a life insurance company or a corporation related in a manner specified in section 267(b) to a life insurance company, but only if the return on such interests is computed in the same manner as for the related variable contracts, there is no intent to sell such interests to the public, and a segregated asset account of such life insurance company also holds or will hold a beneficial interest in the investment company or trust;

(ii) Held by the manager, or a corporation related in a manner specified in section 267(b) to the manager, of the investment company or trust, but only if the holding of the interests is in connection with the creation or management of the investment company or trust, the return on such interests is computed in the same manner as for the related variable contracts, and there is no intent to sell such interests to the public;

(iii) Held by the trustee of a qualified pension or retirement plan; or

(iv) Held by the public, or treated as owned by policyholders pursuant to Rev. Rul. 81–225, 1981–2 C.B. 12, but only if (A) the investment company or trust was closed to the public in accordance with Rev. Rul. 82–55, 1982–1 C.B. 12, (B) all the assets of the investment company or trust are attributable to premium payments made by policyholders prior to September 26, 1981, or (C) all the assets of the investment company or trust are attributable to premium payments made in connection with a qualified pension or retirement plan.

(g) Look-through rule for underlying partnership interest. If a segregated asset account holds a partnership interest, other than a partnership interest registered under a Federal or State law regulating the offering or sale of securities, the segregated asset account will be deemed to own its proportionate share of each of the assets of the partnership. For purposes of this section, the interest of a partner in a partnership's assets shall be determined in accordance with his capital interest in the partnership.

(h) Definitions. The terms defined below shall, for purposes of this section, have the meanings set forth in such definitions:

(1) Government security. The term "government security" shall mean any security issued or (to the extent of the guaranteed or insured amount) guaranteed or insured by the United States or an instrumentality of the United States; or any certificate of deposit for any of the foregoing. For purposes of this paragraph (h)(1), an instrumentality of the United States shall mean any person that is treated for purposes of 15 U.S.C. 80a–2 (16), as amended, as a person controlled or supervised by and acting as an instrumentality of the Government of the United States pursuant to authority granted by the Congress of the United States.

(2) Treasury security. The term "Treasury security" shall mean a security the direct obligor of which is the United States Treasury.

(3) Real property. The term "real property" shall mean any property that is treated as real property under §1.856–3(d) except that it shall not include interests in real property.

(4) Real property account. A segregated asset account is a real property account on an anniversary of the account (within the meaning of paragraph (c)(2)(iii) of this section) or on the date a plan or liquidation is adopted if not less than the applicable percentage of the total assets of the account is represented by real property or interests in real property on such anniversary or date. For this purpose, the applicable percentage is 40% for the period ending on the first anniversary of the date on which premium income is first received, 50% for the year ending on the second anniversary, 60% for the year ending on the third anniversary, 70% for the year ending on the fourth anniversary, and 80% thereafter.

(5) Commodity. The term "commodity" shall mean any type of personal property other than a security.

(6) Security. The term "security" shall include a cash item and any partnership interest registered under a Federal or State law regulating the offering or sale of securities. The term shall not include any other partnership interest, any interest in real property, or any interest in a commodity.

(7) Interest in real property. The term "interest in real property" shall include the ownership and co-ownership of land or improvements thereon and leaseholds of land or improvements thereon. Such term shall not, however, include mineral, oil, or gas royalty interests, such as a retained economic interest in coal or iron ore with respect to which the special provisions of section 631(c) apply. The term "interest in real property" also shall include options to acquire land or improvements thereon, and options to acquire leaseholds of land or improvements thereon.

(8) Interest in a commodity. The term "interest in a commodity" shall include the ownership and co-ownership of any type of personal property other than a security, and any leaseholds thereof. Such term shall include mineral, oil, and gas royalty interests, including any fractional undivided interest therein. Such term also shall include any put, call, straddle, option, or privilege on any type of personal property other than a security.

(9) Value. The term "value" shall mean, with respect to investments for which market quotations are readily available, the market value of such investments; and with respect to other investments, fair value as determined in good faith by the managers of the segregated asset account.

(10) Terms used in section 851. To the extent not inconsistent with this paragraph (h) all terms used in this section shall have the same meaning as when used in section 851.

(i) Effective date—(1) In general. This section is effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1983.

(2) Exceptions. (i) If, at all times after December 31, 1983, an insurance company would be considered the owner of the assets of a segregated asset account under the principles of Rev. Rul. 81–225, 1981–2 C.B. 12, this section will not apply to such account until December 15, 1986.

(ii) This section will not apply to any variable contract to which Rev. Rul. 77–85, 1977–1 C.B. 12, or Rev. Rul. 81–225, 1981–2 C.B. 12, did not apply by reason of the limited retroactive effect of such rulings.

(iii) In determining whether a segregated asset account is adequately diversified for any calendar quarter ending before July 1, 1987, debt instruments that are issued, guaranteed or insured by the United States or an instrumentality of the United States shall not be treated as Government securities if such debt instruments are secured by a mortgage on real property (other than real property owned by the United States or an instrumentality of the United States) or represent an interest in a pool of debt instruments secured by such mortgages.

There is need for immediate guidance with respect to the provisions contained in this Treasury decision. For this reason, it would be impractical to issue it first under the notice and comment procedure provided in 5 U.S.C. 553(b) or subject to the effective date limitation of 5 U.S.C. 553(d).

Section 2011.—Credit For State Death Taxes

26 CFR 20.2011–1: Credit for State death taxes.
(Also Sections 1001, 1014; 1.1001–1, 1.1014–2.)

Credits against tax; property transferred in payment of state inheritance tax liability. The payment of state inheritance taxes in property other than cash constitutes "taxes actually paid" to the state for purposes of the federal estate tax credit. The amount "actually paid" is the lesser of the state inheritance tax liability discharged by the transfer of the property or the fair market value of the property on the date of the transfer. The estate realizes gain or loss upon the transfer measured by the difference between the estate's basis in the property and the amount of the state tax liability that was discharged.

Rev. Rul. 86–117

ISSUES

1. Does the payment of state inheritance taxes with property, in lieu of cash, pursuant to state law, constitute "taxes actually paid" to a state for purposes of the federal estate tax credit under section 2011 of the Internal Revenue Code?

2. If so, does the estate realize gain or loss upon the disposition of property in payment of state inheritance tax liability?

FACTS

The decedent, D, a resident of state ST, died on April 16, 1984. Under the laws of ST, the inheritance tax liability of any beneficiary, heir, surviving joint tenant, or other transferee may be paid by the transfer of money, property other than money, or both, to the state or to a political subdivision of the state. In-kind payments of the tax liability by a transfer of property other than money are permitted only where the property will be used for public purposes and are subject to approval and acceptance by the governmental entity that receives the property.

Twelve months after D's death, D's executor filed a state inheritance tax return and, in part payment of the inheritance tax liability, transferred to the local political subdivision of ST a parcel of real estate that at the time had a fair market value of $77,000. The ST taxing authority certified that ST's acceptance of the property constituted payment of $77,000 in satisfaction of the estate's inheritance tax liability. The executor filed a timely federal estate tax return in which the value of the transferred property was included as a part of D's gross estate. On the federal estate tax return, the executor did not elect the alternate valuation date prescribed by section 2032 of the Code. The parcel was therefore included in the gross estate at its date of death fair market value, which was $70,000. After satisfying the state inheritance tax liability, D's executor filed for a federal estate tax refund. The claim for refund was based on the payment of state inheritance taxes, including the $77,000 payment made by transferring the real estate.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 2011 of the Code provides that, within the limitations of section 2011(b), the tax imposed by section 2001 shall be credited with the amount of any estate, inheritance, legacy or succession taxes actually paid to any state or the District of Columbia, in respect of any property included in the gross estate (not including any taxes paid with respect to the estate of a person other than the decedent).

Section 2011(c) provides that, in general, the credit allowed for state taxes described above shall include only such taxes as were actually paid and credit therefor claimed within 4 years after the filing of the estate tax return.

Section 2011 is specific that the amount for which a credit is claimed must be "actually paid." However, neither the Code nor the Estate Tax Regulations limit the medium of payment of state death taxes that qualify for the credit under section 2011 to cash payments.

Rev. Rul. 74–178, 1974–1 C.B. 196, holds that when an executor transfers appreciated property in settlement of a claim against the estate, the estate realizes gain measured by the excess of the amount of the claim over the estate's basis in the property.

Section 1001(a) of the Code provides, in part, that the gain from the disposition of property shall be the excess of the amount realized therefrom over the adjusted basis provided in section 1011 for determining gain.

Section 1011(a) of the Code provides, in part, that the adjusted basis for determining the gain from the disposition of property shall be the basis determined under the applicable provisions of the Code.

Section 1014(a) of the Code provides, generally, that the basis of property in the hands of a person acquiring the property from a decedent shall be the fair market value of the property at the date of the decedent's death or, where there is an appropriate election, at the alternate valuation date as provided in section 2032.

The amount actually paid to a state or subdivision for state death taxes is not always equivalent to the amount of the tax liability discharged by the payment. For example, if a state accepts $2,000 in settlement of a tax liability of $3,000 dollars, the amount actually paid for purposes of section 2011 is $2,000. See Commonwealth Trust Co. of Pittsburgh v. Driscoll, 50 F. Supp. 949 (W.D. Pa. 1943), aff'd per curiam, 137 F.2d 653 (3d Cir. 1943), cert. denied, 321 U.S. 764 (1944), and Smith v. Commissioner, 59 F.2d 533 (7th Cir. 1932), aff'g in pertinent part, 23 B.T.A. 278 (1931). Similarly, the fact that the state accepts property worth $2,000 to discharge a tax liability of $3,000, even when the liability is undisputed, does not mean that $3,000 is the amount actually paid. Rather, $2,000, the fair market value of the property used to discharge the tax liability, is the amount actually paid.

Conversely, if for some reason the executor transfers property worth $3,000 in settlement of a $2,000 inheritance tax liability, only $2,000 is actually paid for purposes of section 2011. Any amount paid in excess of the tax liability discharged is not a payment of state tax.

For federal estate tax purposes, the fair market value of property is defined by section 20.2021–1(b) of the regulations. In general, the fair market value of property includible in a decedent's gross estate is the price at which the property would change hands between a willing buyer and a willing seller, neither being under any compulsion to buy or sell, and both having reasonable knowledge of the relevant facts. The regulations also explain that the fair market value of an item is not determined by a forced sale price.

In any case in which the value of property affects the federal estate tax liability, the fair market value must be determined under section 2031 of the Code, and is within the jurisdiction of the Internal Revenue Service. This remains true even if the state, for its own purposes, assigns a different value.

In this case the estate realizes a $7,000 gain on the transaction, the difference between the liability satisfied and the basis in the property. If the property had had a fair market value less than the undisputed amount of the liability satisfied, the amount realized would have been only the fair market value. For example, if the property had had a fair market value of $75,000, the amount realized would have been $75,000, and the gain would have been only $5,000. The $2,000 excess of the undisputed liability that was satisfied over the fair market value of the property given in exchange is income from the discharge of indebtedness. Section 1.1001–2(c) of the Income Tax Regulations, Example (8).

HOLDINGS

1. The payment of state inheritance taxes in property, in lieu of cash, pursuant to state law, constitutes "taxes actually paid" to the state for purposes of the federal estate tax credit under section 2011 of the Code. The amount of state inheritance tax treated as paid under section 2011 of the Code is the lesser of: 1) the amount of state inheritance tax liability discharged by the transfer of the property, or 2) the fair market value of the property on the date of the transfer.

2. D's estate realized a $7,000 gain measured by the difference between the estate's basis determined under section 1014 of the Code ($70,000) and the amount of the state tax liability that was discharged ($77,000).

The temporary regulations (designated by a "T" following the section citation) * * * [page 15, this Bulletin], amend the Income Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 1) to provide rules under section 817(h) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, as added by section 211(a) of the Tax Reform Act of 1984 (Pub. L. 98–369, 98 Stat. 750). Those temporary regulations prescribe diversification requirements for variable annuity, endowment, and life insurance contracts.

This document proposes to adopt those temporary regulations as final regulations; accordingly, the text of the temporary regulations serves as the comment document for this notice of proposed rulemaking. In addition, the preamble to the temporary regulations provides a discussion of the proposed and temporary rules.

Before adopting these proposed regulations, consideration will be given to any written comments that are submitted (preferably eight copies) to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. All comments will be available for public inspection and copying. A public hearing will be held upon written request to the Commissioner by any person who has submitted written comments. If a public hearing is held, notice of the time and place will be published in the FEDERAL REGISTER.

If an organization listed above submits information that warrants the renewal of its classification as a public charity or as a private operating foundation, the Internal Revenue Service will issue a ruling or determination letter with the revised classification as to foundation status. Grantors and contributors may thereafter rely upon such ruling or determination letter as provided in section 1.509(a)–7 of the Income Tax Regulations. It is not the practice of the Service to announce such revised classification of foundation status in the Internal Revenue Bulletin.

The following organization, which has been treated as a private operating foundation described in section 4942(j)(3) of the Code, has now been classified as an organization that is not a private operating foundation. Grantors and contributors may no longer rely upon rulings or determinations that this organization is a private operating foundation. The organization is:

Downey Rotary Foundation, Downey, CA

Definition of Terms

Revenue rulings and revenue procedures (hereinafter referred to as "rulings") that have an effect on previous rulings use the following defined terms to describe the effect:

Amplified describes a situation where no change is being made in a prior published position, but the prior position is being extended to apply to a variation of the fact situation set forth therein. Thus, if an earlier ruling held that a principle applied to A, and the new ruling holds that the same principle also applies to B, the earlier ruling is amplified. (Compare with modified, below).

Clarified is used in those instances where the language in a prior ruling is being made clear because the language has caused, or may cause, some confusion. It is not used where a position in a prior ruling is being changed.

Distinguished describes a situation where a ruling mentions a previously published ruling and points out an essential difference between them.

Modified is used where the substance of a previously published position is being changed. Thus, if a prior ruling held that a principle applied to A but not to B, and the new ruling holds that it applies to both A and B, the prior ruling is modified because it corrects a published position. (Compare with amplified and clarified, above).

Obsoleted describes a previously published ruling that is not considered determinative with respect to future transactions. This term is most commonly used in a ruling that lists previously published rulings that are obsoleted because of changes in law or regulations. A ruling may also be obsoleted because the substance has been included in regulations subsequently adopted.

Revoked describes situations where the position in the previously published ruling is not correct and the correct position is being stated in the new ruling.

Superseded describes a situation where the new ruling does nothing more than restate the substance and situation of a previously published ruling (or rulings). Thus, the term is used to republish under the 1954 Code and regulations the same position published under the 1939 Code and regulations. The term is also used when it is desired to republish in a single ruling a series of situations, names, etc., that were previously published over a period of time in separate rulings. If the new ruling does more than restate the substance of a prior ruling, a combination of terms is used. For example, modified and superseded describes a situation where the substance of a previously published ruling is being changed in part and is continued without change in part and it is desired to restate the valid portion of the previously published ruling in a new ruling that is self contained. In this case the previously published ruling is first modified and then, as modified, is superseded.

Supplemented is used in situations in which a list, such as a list of the names of countries, is published in a ruling and that list is expanded by adding further names in subsequent rulings. After the original ruling has been supplemented several times, a new ruling may be published that includes the list in the original ruling and the additions, and supersedes all prior rulings in the series.

Suspended is used in rare situations to show that the previous published rulings will not be applied pending some future action such as the issuance of new or amended regulations, the outcome of cases in litigation, or the outcome of a Service study.

Subscribers to the weekly Bulletin are notified when copies of the Cumulative Bulletin are available. Certain issues of Cumulative Bulletins are out of print and are not available. Persons desiring available Cumulative Bulletins, which are listed on the reverse, may purchase them from the Superintendent of Documents.

BULLETIN INDEX-DIGEST SYSTEM

It is a comprehensive and up-to-date research tool that requires no filing or other clerical maintenance. The current revision consists of four Services, available on a subscription basis, each including a basic volume that covers the period 1953-1983/1984 and a cumulative supplement covering material published in subsequent Bulletins for the following two-year period. Cumulative supplements are issued quarterly for the Income Tax Service and semiannually for the Estate and Gift, Employment, and Excise Tax Service.

Department of the Treasury
Internal Revenue Service

T22.23:

Mission of the Service

The purpose of the Internal Revenue Service is to collect the proper amount of tax revenues at the least cost to the public, and in a manner that warrants the highest degree of public confidence in our integrity, efficiency and fairness. To achieve that purpose, we will:

—Encourage and achieve the highest possible degree of voluntary compliance in accordance with the tax law and regulations;

—Advise the public of their rights and responsibilities;

—Determine the extent of compliance and the causes of noncompliance;

—Do all things needed for the proper administration and enforcement of the tax laws;

—Continually search for and implement new, more efficient and effective ways of accomplishing our Mission.

Statement of Principles of Internal Revenue Tax Administration

The function of the Internal Revenue Service is to administer the Internal Revenue Code. Tax policy for raising revenue is determined by Congress.

With this in mind, it is the duty of the Service to carry out that policy by correctly applying the laws enacted by Congress; to determine the reasonable meaning of various Code provisions in light of the Congressional purpose in enacting them; and to perform this work in a fair and impartial manner, with neither a government nor a taxpayer point of view.

At the heart of administration is interpretation of the Code. It is the responsibility of each person in the Service, charged with the duty of interpreting the law, to try to find the true meaning of the statutory provision and not to adopt a strained construction in the belief that he or she is "protecting the revenue." The revenue is properly protected only when we ascertain and apply the true meaning of the statute.

The Service also has the responsibility of applying and administering the law in a reasonable, practical manner. Issues should only be raised by examining officers when they have merit, never arbitrarily or for trading purposes. At the same time, the examining officer should never hesitate to raise a meritorious issue. It is also important that care be exercised not to raise an issue or to ask a court to adopt a position inconsistent with an established Service position.

Administration should be both reasonable and vigorous. It should be conducted with as little delay as possible and with great courtesy and considerateness. It should never try to overreach, and should be reasonable within the bounds of law and sound administration. It should, however, be vigorous in requiring compliance with law and it should be relentless in its attack on unreal tax devices and fraud.

Introduction

The Internal Revenue Bulletin is the authoritative instrument of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for announcing official rulings and procedures of the Internal Revenue Service and for publishing Treasury Decisions, Executive Orders, Tax Conventions, legislation, court decisions, and other items of general interest. It is published weekly and may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. Bulletin contents of a permanent nature are consolidated semiannually into Cumulative Bulletins, which are sold on a single-copy basis.

It is the policy of the Service to publish in the Bulletin all substantive rulings necessary to promote a uniform application of the tax laws, including all rulings that supersede, revoke, modify, or amend any of those previously published in the Bulletin. All published rulings apply retroactively unless otherwise indicated. Procedures relating solely to matters of internal management are not published; however, statements of internal practices and procedures that affect the rights and duties of taxpayers are published.

Revenue rulings represent the conclusions of the Service on the application of the law to the pivotal facts stated in the revenue ruling. In those based on positions taken in rulings to taxpayers or technical advice to Service field offices, identifying details and information of a confidential nature are deleted to prevent unwarranted invasions of privacy and to comply with statutory requirements.

Rulings and procedures reported in the Bulletin do not have the force and effect of Treasury Department Regulations, but they may be used as precedents. Unpublished rulings will not be relied on, used, or cited as precedents by Service personnel in the disposition of other cases. In applying published rulings and procedures, the effect of subsequent legislation, regulations, court decisions, rulings, and procedures must be considered, and Service personnel and others concerned are cautioned against reaching the same conclusions in other cases unless the facts and circumstances are substantially the same.

The Bulletin is divided into four parts as follows:

Part I.—1954 Code.

This part includes rulings and decisions based on provisions of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

Part II.—Treaties and Tax Legislation.

This part is divided into two subparts as follows: Subpart A, Tax Conventions, and Subpart B, Legislation and Related Committee Reports.

Part III.—Administrative, Procedural, and Miscellaneous.

To the extent practicable, pertinent cross references to these subjects are contained in the other Parts and Subparts.

Part IV.—Items of General Interest.

With the exception of the disbarment and suspension list included in this part, none of these announcements is consolidated in the Cumulative Bulletins.

The first Bulletin for each month includes an index for the matters published during the preceding month. These monthly indexes are cumulated on a quarterly and semiannual basis, and are published in the first Bulletin of the succeeding quarterly and semi-annual period, respectively.

The Bulletin Index-Digest System, a research and reference service supplementing the Bulletin, may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. It consists of four Services: Service No. 1, Income Tax; Service No. 2, Estate and Gift Taxes; Service No. 3, Employment Taxes; Service No. 4, Excise Taxes. Each Service consists of a basic volume and a cumulative supplement that provide (1) finding lists of items published in the Bulletin, (2) digests of revenue rulings, revenue procedures, and other published items, and (3) indexes of Public Laws, Treasury Decisions, and Tax Conventions.

The contents of this publication are not copyrighted and may be reprinted freely. A citation of the Internal Revenue Bulletin as the source would be appropriate.

.02 Section 1.6045–1(l) of the Income Tax Regulations requires brokers and barter exchanges to use magnetic media to report ALL Form 1099–B data to IRS. THIS REQUIREMENT APPLIES TO BOTH ORIGINAL AND CORRECTED RETURNS. Section 6011(e) of the Internal Revenue Code as amended by the Interest and Dividend Tax Compliance Act of 1983, Pub. L. 98–67, 1983–2 C.B. 352, 359, requires that any person, including corporations, partnerships, individuals, estates, and trusts, required to file more than 50 information returns in the aggregate for payments of interest (Forms 1099–INT and 1099–OID), dividends (Form 1099–DIV), or patronage dividends (Form 1099–PATR), for any calendar year, must file such returns on magnetic media. THIS REQUIREMENT APPLIES TO BOTH ORIGINAL AND CORRECTED RETURNS. For example, if you must file 30 Forms 1099–DIV and 25 Forms 1099–INT, filing on magnetic media is required. In addition, for returns filed in 1987 (for tax year 1986), magnetic media reporting is required if you file 500 or more of each of the following forms: Forms W–2, W–2P, W–2G, 1098, 1099–A, 1099–G, 1099–MISC, 1099–R, 5498, 1042S, 6248, and 8027. THIS REQUIREMENT APPLIES TO BOTH ORIGINAL AND CORRECTED RETURNS. Form W–2c is not included in these filing requirements. The 500 or more requirement for these forms will drop to 250 or more for returns (original or corrected) filed in 1988 (for tax year 1987) and later years. Forms W–2 and W–2P are filed with the Social Security Administration (SSA), NOT Internal Revenue Service (IRS). At this time, corrected returns filed on Form W–2c with SSA are not required on magnetic media. These requirements shall not apply if you establish that it will cause you undue hardship. Refer to Part A, Sec. 5.

.03 This procedure also provides the requirements and specifications for mini-disk filing under the Combined Federal/State Filing Program. Refer to Part A, Sec. 14. Cassette filers may not participate in this program due to the requirement that records on this program must be 360 characters in length. Cassette records cannot exceed 256 characters.

.04 The following revenue procedures and publications provide more detailed filing procedures for certain information returns:

(a) 1986 "Instructions for Forms 1099, 1098, 5498, 1096, and W–2G" provide further information on filing returns with IRS. These instructions are available at IRS offices.

.06 Refer to Part A, Sec. 15 for definitions of terms used in this publication.

SEC. 2. BACKGROUND—PRIOR YEAR CHANGES (TAX YEAR 1985)

DUE TO NUMEROUS LEGISLATIVE AND FORMS CHANGES BETWEEN TAX YEARS 1984 AND 1985, CHANGES WERE NOT LISTED INDIVIDUALLY UNDER THIS SECTION. THE ENTIRE PUBLICATION WAS REVISED. FOR TAX YEAR 1985, SEE REV. PROC. 85–48, 1985–2 C.B. 607, FOR SPECIFIC CHANGES.

SEC. 3. NATURE OF CHANGES—CURRENT YEAR (TAX YEAR 1986)

.01 The following changes must be incorporated into your programs for tax year 1986.

.02 GENERAL CHANGES ARE AS FOLLOWS:

(a) The note on the cover and which follows the table of contents was revised to alert filers that their data should be reviewed for accuracy before submission to prevent erroneous notices to persons for whom reports are filed.

(b) Part A, Section 1.02 lists the forms described in this revenue procedure that must be filed on magnetic media. THESE REQUIREMENTS APPLY TO BOTH ORIGINAL AND CORRECTED RETURNS. Corrected returns filed on Form W–2c with SSA are not required at this time on magnetic media.

(c) A note was added to Part A, Sec. 4.01 to alert filers that applications to file Forms W–2 and W–2P on magnetic media are requested from SSA; however, requests for undue hardship waivers and extensions of time to file Forms W–2 and W–2P on magnetic media are requested from the IRS National Computer Center. Waiver requests for these forms should have been filed by July 31, 1986, for tax year 1986 for returns to be filed in 1987.

(d) Transmitter Control Codes may be alpha/numeric. This has been noted in several places within the publication.

(e) The dates for submission of "test" files have been revised in Part A, Sec. 5. "Test" files should be submitted between August 15 and December 15 each year. Also, "test" data for the "A" Record must be actual data, not fictitious information.

(f) Part A, Sec. 5.04 has been revised to alert filers that a transmittal Form 4804, 4802 or computer generated substitute must accompany "test" files. The transmittal Forms 4804 and 4802 have been updated for 1986. Agencies who produce a computer generated substitute must update their format for these forms. The Form 4804 now includes a checkbox 1 to indicate the type of file (e.g., original, correction, replacement, test).

(g) Part A, Sec. 5 includes new information concerning undue hardship waiver requests. Filers are now required to submit Form 8508, Request for Waiver From Filing Information Returns on Magnetic Media. THIS REQUIREMENT APPLIES TO BOTH ORIGINAL AND CORRECTED RETURNS WITH THE EXCEPTION OF FORM W–2c.

(h) Part A, Sec. 6 has been updated to include the retention requirements for information returns and the new affidavit requirements for transmittal documents.

(i) For documents filed on paper with the appropriate service center, it is no longer necessary to note on the transmittal Form 1096 that a portion of the returns are being filed on magnetic media. This has been deleted from Part A, Sec. 6.07.

(j) Part A, Sec. 6.08 has been reworded to clarify that reports from different branches for one payer, if submitted on the same file, must be consolidated under one "A" Record for each type of information return.

(k) A note has been added to Part A, Sec. 7 that Form 5498 is used to report amounts contributed during or after the calendar year.

(l) Part A, Sec. 8(h) has been added to inform filers who file extension requests for multiple payers, that the request must include a list of all payers and their TINs (SSN or EIN).

(m) Part A, Sec. 10 alerts filers that the filing requirements apply to both original and corrected returns with the exception of Form W–2c filed with SSA. Refer to Part A, Sec. 1 for the filing requirements. Corrected returns should be aggregated and submitted as soon as possible but not later than October 1 of each year. Also, corrections should be submitted only for the returns filed in error, not the entire file.

(n) In prior years, cassette position 5 and mini-disk position 6 of the "B" Record were used as the corrected return indicator. Part A, Sec. 10.01 indicates that this has now been changed to cassette position 6 and mini-disk position 7. The Guidelines in Sec. 10 have also been updated to reflect this change. You must adjust your programs. This change was necessary to facilitate the need for a second position in the "B" Record Document Specific Code field.

(o) Transmittal Form W–3G is now obsolete. This form was used to transmit paper Forms 1099–R and W–2G. These two forms are now to be transmitted to the service center with Form 1096. References to Form W–3G have been deleted from this publication.

(p) Two new charts were added to the publication last year to provide instructions for filing corrections on magnetic media and on paper forms. Chart 2, Guidelines for Filing Corrected Returns on Paper Forms, has been deleted. The instructions for filing corrections on paper forms are now available in the 1986 "Instructions for Forms 1099, 1098, 5498, 1096, and W–2G."

(q) Part A, Sec. 10, Guidelines have been revised. If a return was filed with NO Payee TIN (SSN or EIN), or the return was filed with an incorrect Payee TIN, only one transaction is necessary to make the correction.

(r) Part A, Sec. 12 has been completely revised. Refer to this section for specific changes.

(s) Service center addresses have been deleted from this publication. They are available in the 1986 "Instructions for Forms 1099, 1098, 5498, 1096, and W–2G."

(t) Part A, Sec. 14.02 has been revised to inform filers of the authorization to sign consent Form 6847. Filers who have received approval to file on this program in prior years may be required to resubmit a consent Form 6847 signed by each payer. Refer to Part A, Section 14.02 for specific information.

(u) The dollar criteria in Table 2 of Part A, Sec. 14 has changed. For the state of Minnesota, Form 5498 must now be reported. Also, two footnotes for Minnesota have been deleted: $10.01 for Savings and Loan Associations and Credit Unions; and $600.01 for Rents and Royalties.

(v) Acceptable foreign country codes have been added to Part A, Sec. 16 to assist you in developing the address field.

(w) Part B, Sec. 1.18 has been revised to indicate changes made to the external media labels. Form 5064 is the external media label and has been updated for tax year 1986. You must use the updated label for 1986. These will be included in your magnetic media reporting packages.

.03 THE FOLLOWING CHANGE HAVE BEEN MADE TO THE PAYER TRANSMITTER "A" RECORD.

(a) A note has been added to Part B Sec. 3.03 and Part C, Sec. 2.03 to indicat that all alpha characters should be up percase.

(c) The Document Specific Code field length has been increased from 1 to 2 positions. Cassette positions 4-5 and mini-disk position 5-6 now represent this coding. This change was necessary due to multiple coding required in certain cases for Form 1099–R.

(d) Additional coding has been added to the Document Specific Code for Form

1099–R. A Code "9" represents PS 58 Costs; Code "P" represents excess contributions refunded plus earnings on such excess contributions taxable in 1985; Code "A" represents distributions which qualify for 10-year averaging; Code "B" represents distributions which qualify for the death benefit exclusion; and Code "C" indicates that the distribution qualifies for both "A" and "B".

SEC. 4. WAGE AND PENSION INFORMATION FILED WITH SSA

.01 Section 8(b), Public Law 94–202, 1976–1 C.B. 503, enacted in January 1976, authorized the combined reporting of FICA detailed information in one consolidated annual W–2 (Copy A) to the Federal government. AS A RESULT, FORMS W–2 AND W–2P ARE TO BE FILED WITH SSA NOT WITH IRS. Applications to file Forms W–2 and W–2P on magnetic media are to be mailed to SSA; however, undue hardship waivers and extensions of time to file Forms W–2 and W–2P are to be requested from the IRS National Computer Center, not from SSA. Requests for undue hardship exemption for these two forms must be filed with the IRS National Computer Center by July 31, 1986, for tax year 1986 for returns to be filed in 1987. Refer to Part A, Sec. 13 for the address and Part A, Sec. 5.08 and Sec. 8 for the required information.

.02 SSA will accept magnetic media filing of Forms W–2 and W–2P and has issued the following concerning this: TIB–4a, "Magnetic Tape Reporting, Submitting FICA Wage and Tax Data to the Social Security Administration"; TIB–4b, "Magnetic Tape Reporting, Submitting Annuity, Pension, Retired Pay or IRA Payment to the Social Security Administration"; and TIB–4c, "Diskette Reporting, Submitting FICA Wage and Tax Data to the Social Security Administration." Applications for filing Forms W–2 and W–2P on magnetic media appear in TIBs–4a, 4b, and 4c.

.03 Copies of Social Security Administration publications TIB–4a, 4b, and 4c are available from any local Social Security Administration office or the SSA Regional Magnetic Media Coordinators.

SEC. 5. APPLICATION FOR MAGNETIC MEDIA REPORTING AND REQUESTS FOR UNDUE HARDSHIP WAIVERS

.01 For purposes of this revenue procedure, the PAYER includes the person making the payments, a recipient of mortgage interest payments, a broker, a barter exchange, a trustee or issuer of an IRA, SEP or DEC, or a lender who acquires an interest in secured property or who has reason to know that the property has been abandoned. The TRANSMITTER is the organization preparing the cassette or mini-disk file. The payer and transmitter may be the same organization. Do not submit returns on cassette if you transmit for someone else due to the 256 character record restriction. Payers or their transmitters are required to complete Form 4419, Application for Magnetic Media Reporting of Information Returns. Copies of this form, for your use, are included in this publication. Requests for additional information or forms related to magnetic media processing should be addressed to the National Computer Center. Beginning January 1, 1986, magnetic media processing for ALL service centers was centralized at the National Computer Center. The address is listed in Part A, Sec. 13.

.02 Applications should be filed with the National Computer Center before "test" files are submitted. ("Test" files are submitted between August 15 and December 15 each year.) IRS will act on an application and notify the applicant, in writing, of authorization to file. A five character alpha/numeric Transmitter Control Code will be assigned and included in an acknowledgement letter within 30 days of receipt of the application. Cassette or mini-disk returns may not be filed with IRS until the application has been approved. Do not enter blanks in the "A" Record Transmitter Control Code field; enter the five character alpha/numeric Transmitter Control Code which is assigned to you by IRS after you have filed an application and it has been approved. Applications for approval to file Forms W–2 and W–2P on magnetic media must be filed with SSA, NOT with IRS. Refer to Part A, Sec. 4.

.03 After you have received approval to file on magnetic media, you do not need to reapply each year; however, notify IRS in writing if:

(a) there are hardware or software changes that would affect the characteristics of the magnetic media submission (e.g., changing from cassette or mini-disk to tape filing or vice versa) a new Transmitter Control Code may be necessary or,

(b) you discontinue filing on magnetic media for a year (your five character alpha/numeric Transmitter Control Code may be reassigned).

If either of these conditions applies to you, you should contact IRS for clarification. In ALL correspondence, refer to your current five character alpha/numeric Transmitter Control Code to assist IRS in locating your files.

.04 IRS will assist new filers with their initial cassette or mini-disk submission by reviewing "test" files submitted in advance of the filing season. The "test" data should be actual data for the "A" Record, not fictitious information. This applies to all records submitted in the "test" file. Approved payers or transmitters should submit "test" files to the National Computer Center. You MUST submit a "test" file in order to participate in the Combined Federal/State Program; however, you are encouraged to submit "test" files if you are a new filer on magnetic media. As a guideline, IRS prefers that all "test" files be submitted between August 15 and December 15 each year. Refer to Part A, Sec. 13 for the address. Do not submit "test" cassettes or mini-disks after December 15. If you are unable to submit your "test" file by this date, you may only send a sample hardcopy printout or cassette or mini-disk dump to the National Computer Center which shows a sample of each type of record (A, B, C, K, and F) used. Clearly mark the hardcopy printout or dump as "TEST DATA" and include identifying information such as name, address, and telephone number of someone familiar with the "test" print or dump who may be contacted to discuss its acceptability. With all "test" data, include a transmittal Form 4804, 4802 or computer generated substitute marked as "TEST DATA" which identifies your five character alpha/numeric Transmitter Control Code and total record and money amounts. The transmittal Form 4804 and 4802 have been updated for tax year 1986. Agencies who produce a computer generated substitute must include the additional information required on these forms. The Form 4804 now includes a checkbox 1 to indicate the type of file (e.g., original, correction, replacement, test). The "test" data must be a sample of actual data coded according to this revenue procedure.

.05 If your magnetic media files have been prepared for you in the past by a service agency, and you now have computer equipment compatible with that of IRS and wish to prepare your own files, you must request your own five character alpha/numeric Transmitter Control Code by filing an application, Form 4419, as described above.

.06 If you as an individual or organization are an approved filer on magnetic media and you change your name or the name of your organization, please notify the National Computer Center, in writing, so that your file may be updated to reflect the proper name.

.07 In accordance with section 1.6041–7(b) of the Income Tax Regulations, payments to providers of medical and health care services from separate departments of a health care carrier may be reported as separate returns on magnetic media. In this case, the headquarters office will be considered to be the transmitter, and the individual departments of the company filing reports will be considered to be payers. A single application form covering all the departments which will be filing on cassette or mini-disk should be submitted. One five character alpha/numeric Transmitter Control Code may be used for all departments.

.08 Any person required to file original or corrected returns on magnetic media may request a waiver from the filing requirements by submitting Form 8508, Request for Waiver from Filing Information Returns on Magnetic Media, with the IRS National Computer Center if filing on magnetic media would be an undue hardship. Requests for waivers for Forms W–2 and W–2P are due by July 31, 1986, for tax year 1986 for returns to be filed in 1987. For all other returns required to be filed on magnetic media, waiver requests must be filed at least 90 days before the returns are due. This waiver, if approved, will only provide exemption from magnetic media filing for one tax year. Filers may not apply for a waiver for more than one tax year at a time. You must reapply each year that a waiver is necessary. Copies of Form 8508 may be obtained from the IRS National Computer Center. See Part A, Sec. 13 for the address.

.09 Section 1.6045–1(l) of the Income Tax Regulations requires brokers and barter exchanges to use magnetic media in reporting ALL Form 1099–B data to IRS. THIS REQUIREMENT APPLIES TO BOTH ORIGINAL AND CORRECTED RETURNS. Generally, NEW brokers and NEW barter exchanges may request an undue hardship exemption by filing a request for waiver with the IRS National Computer Center by the end of the second month following the month in which they became a broker or barter exchange.

.10 All requests for magnetic media related undue hardship exemptions should be submitted to the IRS National Computer Center at least 90 days before the due date of the return, except as stated in Sec. 5.09. All requests for undue hardship for Forms W-2 and W-2P are to be filed with the IRS National Computer Center, not SSA, and must be filed by July 31, 1986, for tax year 1986 for returns to be filed in 1987. Refer to Part A, Sec. 13 for the address.

.11 If you request a waiver from filing on magnetic media and it is approved, do not send a copy of the approved waiver to the service center where you file your paper returns. Keep the waiver for your records. Do not staple, paperclip or use rubberbands on any scannable forms. Paper information returns are read by an optical scanner (OCR) at the service centers.

.12 Waivers are granted on a case-by-case basis and may be approved at the discretion of the National Computer Center. Refer to Part A, Sec. 13 for the address.

.13 If you are required to file on magnetic media but fail to do so, and you do not have an approved waiver on record, you may be subject to a failure to file penalty. Refer to Sec. 6.01 below.

.14 An approved waiver from filing information returns on magnetic media does not provide exemption from ALL filing; you MUST submit your information returns on acceptable paper forms.

.15 A cassette or mini-disk reporting package, which includes all the necessary transmittals, labels, and instructions, will be mailed to the last known address of all approved filers each year.

SEC. 6. FILING OF MAGNETIC MEDIA REPORTS

.01 If you do not file your returns on time, you may be subject to a $50 per document failure to file penalty. If you file without following the instructions in this revenue procedure, you may be subject to a $50 per document failure to file penalty. The maximum penalty is $50,000. However, there is no maximum penalty for returns of 1099–INT, 1099–OID, 1099–DIV, 1099–PATR, 5498 or if the failure to file is due to intentional disregard of the filing requirements.

.02 Generally, you are now subject to a $50 penalty for each failure to include the payee's correct TIN on an information return unless the payer can demonstrate that the payer met the due diligence requirements. Refer to Part A, Sec. 11.

.03 Rev. Proc. 84–24, 1984–1 C.B. 465, gives detailed information on preparing transmittal documents for information returns and is available at IRS offices. Specific guidelines are given on how to report the payer's name, address, and TIN on transmittal documents and information eturns. Instructions for multiple transittals and the submission of transmittals y service bureaus or agents are also covred.

.04 THE CASSETTE OR MINI-DISK RECORDS ARE TO BE SUBMITTED 'O THE NATIONAL COMPUTER CENTER; HOWEVER, PAPER INFORMATION RETURNS ARE TO CONTINUE TO BE FILED WITH THE APPROPRIATE SERVICE CENTERS. 'orm 4804, Transmittal of Information Returns Reported on Magnetic Media, nust accompany cassette or mini-disk ubmissions. If you file for multiple payers nd have the authority to sign the affidavit n Form 4804, you should also submit 'orm 4802, Transmittal for Multiple Magetic Media Reporting. For IRS to ensure hat your actual data records were fornatted following THIS revenue procedure, include a hardcopy printout, fast print or cassette or mini-disk dump showing a ample of each type of record (A, B, C, K, and F) used on the cassette or minidisk. This will be reviewed prior to actual processing to ensure that the data is in the proper format. Be sure to include Form 4804, 4802 or computer generated listing with your cassette or mini-disk shipment. DO NOT MAIL THE CASSETTES OR MINI-DISKS AND THE TRANSMITTAL DOCUMENTS SEPARATELY. IRS encourages the use of a computer generated Form 4804 which includes all necessary information requested on the actual form.

Paper information returns must be transmitted to the appropriate service center using Form 1096, Annual Summary and Transmittal of U.S. Information Returns. Do not send information returns filed on paper forms to the National Computer Center.

.05 The affidavit for Form 4804 should be signed by the payer; however, the transmitter, service bureau, paying agent, or disbursing agency may sign the affidavit on behalf of the payer if all of the following conditions are met:

(a) It has the authority to sign the affidavit under an agency agreement (either oral, written, or implied) that is valid under the state law.

(b)(i) It has the responsibility (either oral, written, or implied) conferred on it by the payer to request the TINs of recipients (or others for whom information is being reported), or

(ii) If the return of more than one payer is included in a single cassette or mini-disk submission, covered by a single Form 4804, each payer has attested by affidavit to the transmitter, service bureau, paying agent or disbursing agent that the payer has complied with the law in attempting to secure correct TINs.

(c) It signs the affidavit and adds the caption "For: (name of payer)."

.06 Although a duly authorized agent signs the affidavit, the payer is held responsible for the accuracy of the Form 4804, and the payer will be liable for penalties for failure to comply with filing requirements.

.07 DO NOT REPORT THE SAME INFORMATION ON PAPER FORMS THAT YOU REPORT ON MAGNETIC MEDIA. IF YOU REPORT PART OF YOUR RETURNS ON PAPER AND PART ON MAGNETIC MEDIA, BE SURE THAT DUPLICATE RETURNS, WITH THE SAME INFORMATION, ARE NOT INCLUDED ON BOTH. This does not mean that corrected documents are not to be filed. If a return has been prepared and submitted improperly, you must file a corrected return as soon as possible. Refer to Part A, Sec. 10 for requirements and instructions on filing corrected returns.

.08 Reports from different branches or locations for one payer, if submitted on the same file, MUST be consolidated under one Payer/Transmitter "A" Record for each type of information return. For example, all Forms 1099–INT for the same payer on a single file must be sorted together under one Payer/Transmitter "A" Record followed by the appropriate "B" Records and one "C" Record.

.09 Payers are required to retain a copy of the information returns filed with IRS or the ability to reconstruct the data for at least three years.

.10 Before submitting magnetic media files, include the following:

(a) A signed Form 4804 or computer generated substitute.

(b) A Form 4802 (if you transmit for multiple payers).

(c) A hard copy printout or listing of the first five and last two blocks of your file. The listing should show a sample of each type of record (A, B, C, K, and F) used on the magnetic media being submitted.

(d) The magnetic media with an external identifying label as described in Part B, Sec. 18 for Cassette and Part C, Sec. 1.06 for Mini-Disk.

(e) On the outside of the shipping container, include a Form 4801 or a substitute for the form which reads "DELIVER UNOPENED TO TAPE LIBRARY—MAGNETIC MEDIA REPORTING—BOX __ of __." If there is only one container, mark the outside as Box 1 of 1. For multiple containers, include the sequence (e.g., Box 1 of 33, 2, of 33, etc.).

(f) If you were granted an extension and are filing late, include a copy of the approval letter with the magnetic media shipment.

.11 IRS will not pay or accept "Collect on Delivery" or "Charged to IRS" shipments of reportable tax information that an individual or organization is legally required to submit.

.12 Files returned to you due to coding or format errors are to be corrected and returned to IRS within 30 days of your receipt or the payer may be subject to a failure to file penalty.

SEC. 7. FILING DATES

.01 The dates prescribed for filing paper returns with IRS also apply to magnetic media filing. Magnetic media reporting to IRS for all types of Forms 1098, 1099, and W–2G must be on a calendar year basis. Form 5498 is used to report amounts contributed during or after the calendar year but not later than April 15.

.02 Information returns filed on magnetic media for Forms 1098, all types of Forms 1099, and W–2G must be submitted to IRS and postmarked by February 28. The due date for furnishing the required copy or statement to the recipient is January 31.

.03 Information returns filed on magnetic media for Form 5498 must be submitted to IRS and postmarked by May 31. Copies of this form or statements are due to the participant by May 31 for contributions made to IRAs and SEPs for the prior calendar year; however, participant copies or statements for DECs are due at the time the contribution is made or January 31, whichever is later. Form 5498 is filed for contributions to be applied to 1986 that are made between January 1, 1986, and April 15, 1987.

SEC. 8. EXTENSIONS OF TIME TO FILE

.01 If a payer or transmitter of returns on magnetic media filed with IRS or SSA is unable to submit their magnetic media file by the dates prescribed in Sec. 7.02 and 7.03 above, submit a letter requesting an extension of up to 30 days to file, as soon as you are aware that an extension will be necessary. In order to be considered, the request MUST be filed before the due date of the return; otherwise, you will be subject to the late filing penalty. The letter should be sent to the attention of the Magnetic Media Reporting Program at the IRS National Computer Center. See Part A, Sec. 13 for the address. The request should include:

(a) The filer's (or transmitter's, if filing for multiple payers) name and address.

(b) The filer's Taxpayer Identification Number (SSN or EIN).

(c) The tax year for which the extension of time is requested: tax year 1986.

(d) The name and telephone number of a person to contact who is familiar with the request.

(e) The type of returns and expected volume (e.g. 5000 Forms 1099-INT).

(f) The five character alpha/numeric Transmitter Control Code assigned to the organization or individual requesting the extension (if a number has been assigned).

(g) The reason for the delay and date that you will be able to file.

(h) If you file for multiple payers, the request must include a list of all payers and their TINs (SSN or EIN).

An approved extension for magnetic media filing does not provide additional time for supplying a copy to the payee.

.02 If an extension of time to file on magnetic media is granted by the National Computer Center, a copy of the letter granting the extension MUST be attached to the transmittal Form 4804 or computer generated substitute when the file is submitted.

SEC. 9. PROCESSING OF MAGNETIC MEDIA RETURNS

.01 All data received at the National Computer Center for processing will be given the same protection as individual returns (1040), and will be returned to the originator after processing. Files that are received timely by the National Computer Center will be returned to the filers by August 15 of the year in which submitted.

.02 Due to the volume of input received and the cost to return special containers, special shipping containers should not be used for transmitting data to the National Computer Center since IRS cannot guarantee return of such containers.

.03 Files will be returned to you for correction if they are unprocessable due to format or coding errors, or by the request of the filer. Unprocessable files must be corrected and returned to the National Computer Center within 30 days of your receipt or the payer may be subject to a failure to file penalty. The corrected files will be returned to the filer by the National Computer Center within 6 months of receipt. PLEASE BE SURE THAT YOUR FORMAT AND CODING COMPLY WITH THIS REVENUE PROCEDURE. THIS REVENUE PROCEDURE IS TO BE USED FOR THE PREPARATION OF TAX YEAR 1986 INFORMATION RETURNS ONLY. LEGISLATIVE AND FORMS CHANGES AFFECTING INFORMATION RETURNS MAY OCCUR EACH YEAR. THESE PROCEDURES ARE UPDATED TO REFLECT NECESSARY CHANGES. PLEASE READ THIS PUBLICATION CAREFULLY.

SEC. 10. HOW TO FILE CORRECTED RETURNS

.01 The filing requirements listed in Part A, Sec. 1 apply to both original and corrected returns. Corrections should be aggregated and filed as soon as possible but not later than October 1 of each year. ALL FIELDS OR BOXES MUST BE COMPLETED WITH THE CORRECT INFORMATION, NOT JUST THE DATA FIELDS NEEDING CORRECTION. Submit corrections only for the returns filed in error, not the entire file. If your complete file is in error, contact the National Computer Center immediately. If you file corrected returns on paper forms, submit Copy A to the appropriate service center. There are numerous types of errors. It may require more than one transaction to properly correct the initial error. In prior years, cassette position 5 and mini-disk position 6 of the "B" Record were used as the corrected return indicator. This has now changed to cassette position 6 and mini-disk position 7 of the "B" Record. You must adjust your programs. You are strongly encouraged to read this ENTIRE section before attempting to make ANY correction. If the initial return was filed as an aggregate, you must consider this in filing the corrected return.

.02 Corrected returns submitted to IRS on magnetic media, using a "G" coded Payee "B" Record, may be submitted on the same cassette or mini-disk as those corrections submitted without the "G" code; however, they must be submitted using a separate "A" Record. Corrected returns for different tax years may not be submitted on the same file. Corrected returns are to be identified as correction on the transmittal document and the EXTERNAL affixed label of the file.

.03 The instructions that follow wil provide information on how to file corrected returns on magnetic media. The 1986 "Instructions for 1099, 1098, 5498, 1096, and W-2G" provide more specific instructions for filing corrections on paper forms and are available from IRS.

.04 If you are not required to file your corrections on magnetic media and you file them on paper forms, do not submit the paper returns to the National Computer Center. All paper returns, whether original or corrected, must be filed with the appropriate service center. Corrected returns filed on magnetic media must be filed with the National Computer Center. Refer to Part A, Sec. 13 for the address.

.05 Statements to the recipient or participant should be identified as "CORRECTED" and should be provided to them as soon as possible.

.06 If you file corrected returns on paper forms, use IRS forms or acceptable OCR scannable paper substitutes. Pinhole feeds on the forms are not acceptable. Always submit Copy A to the appropriate service center. NOTE: Form W-2G is not required to be in OCR scannable format. Publication 1179, "Specifications for Paper Substitutes for Forms 1096, 1098, 1099, 5498, and W-2G" provides requirements and instructions.

.07 For instructions on filing information returns with IRS, refer to the 1986 "Instructions for Forms 1099, 1098, 5498, and W-2G." If these instructions are not included in your magnetic media reporting packages, request a copy from IRS.

.08 Type or machine print in black carbon based ink all information on returns filed on paper. Print money amounts without dollar signs ($), ampersands (&), asterisks (*), commas (,), or other special characters. Use decimal points (.) to indicate dollars and cents on paper forms only, not on magnetic media.

.09 Use the proper form. If you are in doubt, review the instructions noted in .07 above or contact your local IRS office.

.10 Use only the boxes provided on the paper forms. Do not add additional boxes.

.11 Do not change the title of any box on any forms and do not insert data in the untitled shaded areas.

.12 Use the same name and TIN (SSN or EIN) for the filer on the Form 1096 transmittal form and all related forms that follow.

.13 A separate transmittal Form 1096 is required for each type of paper information return filed in the 1098, 5498, W–2G, and 1099 series. DO NOT USE THE SAME TRANSMITTAL DOCUMENT TO FILE ORIGINAL AND CORRECTED RETURNS WHETHER ON PAPER FORMS OR MAGNETIC MEDIA. A transmittal Form 4804 or computer generated substitute is used to transmit magnetic media. A Form 4802 is a continuation form for a Form 4804. Please utilize a Form 4802 if you file on magnetic media for multiple payers and are an authorized agent for the payers.

.14 Do not cut, staple, fold, paperclip, tape, or use rubberbands on any paper information returns filed with IRS. This could impair the OCR scanning process. No photocopies of any forms are allowable.

.15 Use the correct tax year's forms to file information returns with IRS (i.e., do not submit tax year 1986 returns using 1985 forms). The same is true for magnetic media filing. You must submit your returns filed on magnetic media using the revenue procedure for the tax year of the returns. Forms and revenue procedures are normally updated each year to include necessary changes.

.16 Most information returns contain a "VOID" box and a "CORRECTED" box. The "VOID" box is used only if you make an error while typing or printing the paper forms. Mark this box ONLY when you wish to return to be disregarded or passed over. The OCR scanner at the service centers will not read a "VOID" return; it will pass over it and go to the next form if the "VOID" box is marked. Do not confuse the "VOID" box and the "CORRECTED" box.

.17 On magnetic media files, the Payee "B" Record provides space to enter a Payer's Account Number for the Payee. This same account number may be provided on paper forms. In order to properly file corrected returns, this number will help identify the appropriate incorrect return. DO NOT ENTER A TIN (SSN OR EIN). A PAYER'S ACCOUNT NUMBER FOR THE PAYEE MAY BE A CHECKING ACCOUNT NUMBER, SAVINGS ACCOUNT NUMBER, SERIAL NUMBER OR ANY OTHER NUMBER ASSIGNED TO THE PAYEE BY THE PAYER, WHICH WILL DISTINGUISH THE SPECIFIC ACCOUNT. THIS NUMBER MUST APPEAR ON THE INITIAL RETURN AND ON THE CORRECTED RETURN IN ORDER TO IDENTIFY AND PROCESS THE CORRECTION PROPERLY.

.18 REVIEW THE CHART THAT FOLLOWS. The types of errors made will normally fall under one of the three categories listed. Next to each type of error made, you will find a list of instructions to tell you how to properly file the corrected return for that type of error. READ ALL OF THE INSTRUCTIONS LISTED AND FOLLOW THEM FOR THE TYPE OF ERROR MADE ON THE INITIAL RETURN. IN SOME CASES TWO TRANSACTIONS ARE REQUIRED TO PROPERLY FILE CORRECTIONS. IF THE ORIGINAL RETURN WAS FILED AS AN AGGREGATE, YOU MUST CONSIDER THIS IN FILING THE CORRECTED RETURNS.

SEC. 11. TAXPAYER IDENTIFICATION NUMBER

.01 Under section 6109 of the Internal Revenue Code, recipients of all reportable payments on information returns are required to furnish taxpayer identification numbers (TINs) to the payer. The number must be furnished to the payer whether or not the payee is required to file a tax return or is covered by social security. Refer to Part A, Sec. 15 for a definition of Taxpayer Identification Number (TIN).

.02 The recipient's TIN is used to associate and verify amounts reported to IRS with corresponding amounts on tax returns. Therefore, it is particularly important that correct social security and employer identification numbers for payees be provided on magnetic media or paper forms submitted to IRS. DO NOT ENTER HYPHENS, ALPHA CHARACTERS, ALL 9s OR ALL ZEROES.

.03 Under section 6676 of the Internal Revenue Code, a $50 penalty applies for each failure to furnish a TIN to another person who is required to file an information return, and for each failure to include a TIN on an information return. The penalty for payments other than interest or dividends applies unless the failures were due to reasonable cause and not willful neglect.

.04 With respect to all payers of interest and dividends, section 6676 of the Internal Revenue Code provides that the payer must self-assess a $50 penalty for each failure to include a payee's TIN or each inclusion of an incorrect TIN on an information return, unless the payer can demonstrate that the payer met the due diligence requirements in attempting to acquire correct TINs for payees. Use Form 8210, Self-Assessed Penalties Return.

.05 For any reportable payment, if the payee fails to provide a TIN to the payer, then backup withholding must be instituted for that payee. If the payer receives another TIN in the manner required from the payee within 30 days of notice from IRS, no withholding is required. If the payee has applied for a TIN, the payee may certify to this on Form W–9 by noting "Applied For" in the TIN block and by signing the form. This form then becomes an "awaiting-TIN certificate." If the TIN is not received and certified, if required, within 60 days, begin withholding and continue until you receive a TIN in the manner required.

.06 The TIN to be furnished to IRS depends primarily upon the manner in which the account is maintained or set up on the payer's record. The TIN to be provided must be that of the owner of the account. If the account is recorded in more than one name, furnish the TIN and name of one of the owners of the account. The TIN provided must be associated with the name of the payee provided in the first name line of the Payee "B" Record. For individuals, including sole proprietors, t payee TIN is the payee's social securi number. For other entities, the payee TI is the payee's employer identificatio number.

.07 Sole proprietors who are paye should show their employer identificatio number in the Payer/Transmitter "A Record. However, sole proprietors wh are not otherwise required to have an em ployer identification number should u their social security number.

.08 Sole proprietors' social securi numbers must be used in the Payee "B Record.

.09 The charts below will help you d termine the number to be furnished t IRS for recipients of reportable paymen (payees).

SEC. 12. EFFECT ON PAPER RETURNS

.01 Cassette or mini-disk reporting of the information returns listed in Part A, Sec. 1 applies only to the original (Copy A).

.02 For payments of dividends or interest (reported on Forms 1099–DIV, 1099–PATR, 1099–INT, or 1099–OID), the payer is required to furnish an official Form 1099 to a payee either in a separate mailing by First-Class mail or in person. These forms may not be combined or mailed with other information furnished to the recipient except Forms W–8, W–9, or other Forms 1099. The payer may use substitute Forms 1099 if they utilize the proper language, are substantially similar to the official forms and if the payer complies with all revenue procedures relating to substitute Forms 1099 in effect at the time (see Publication 1179). Copy B (For Recipient) of the substitute forms must contain the statement "This is important tax information and is being furnished to IRS. If you are required to file a return, a negligence penalty or other sanction will be imposed on you if this income is taxable and IRS determines that it has not been reported." The substitute form must contain instructions substantially similar to those on the back of Copy B of the official form.

.03 Statements to recipients for Forms 1098, 1099–A, 1099–B, 1099–G, 1099–MISC (except for substitute payments in lieu of dividends and tax-exempt interest), 1099–R, 5498, or W–2G need not be a copy of the paper form filed with IRS. It is important that income items be properly classified for Federal tax purposes on the statement the payer gives to recipients. The message "This information is being furnished to IRS" must appear on the statements. In addition, Form 1098 statements must contain the message, "The amount shown is deductible by you for Federal income tax purposes only to the extent it was actually paid by you and not reimbursed by another person." The space provisions on official paper forms do not agree with those used in magnetic media. The amount of space on paper forms is less than that allowed on magnetic media. Filers may wish to seek a substitute form for Copy B (For Recipient) that accommodates the space provisions used in magnetic media. Payers are permitted considerable flexibility in designing Copy B of the information return to be furnished to the payee. The payer may combine the information return data with other reports or financial or commercial notices so long as all required information is present and worded properly and the payee's copy is conducive to proper reporting of income on tax returns. (This does not apply to Forms 1099–INT, 1099–OID, 1099–DIV, and 1099–PATR. See .02 above for the requirements for these four forms.) However, when information not requested on the official form is included on these substitute statements, they can no longer be mailed with recipient copies of 1099–DIV, INT, OID, or PATR without violating the separate mailing requirements.

.04 If a portion of the returns is reported on cassette or mini-disk and the remainder is reported on paper forms, those returns not submitted on cassette or mini-disk (including corrected returns) may require a waiver depending on the type of return and volume. Returns filed on paper must be filed on official forms or on acceptable paper substitutes meeting the specifications in Publication 1179.

Do not submit proposed substitutes of Copy A to the National Computer Center.

Your proposed substitutes must comply to the official form and the specifications outlined in Publication 1179. DO NOT submit any substitutes for approval. Only those forms that comply with the official form and the specifications in Publication 1179 are acceptable.

SEC. 13. TO CONTACT THE IRS NATIONAL COMPUTER CENTER

.01 Effective January 1, 1986, magnetic media processing for all service centers was centralized at the IRS National Computer Center. Please direct all requests for IRS magnetic media related publications, information, undue hardship waivers, extensions or forms to the following addresses (if Postal Service or land carrier):

Magnetic Media Reporting
Internal Revenue Service
National Computer Center
Post Office Box 1359
Martinsburg, WV 25401–1359
or
Magnetic Media Reporting
Internal Revenue Service
National Computer Center
Route 9 & Needy Road
Martinsburg, WV 25401

Hours of operation at this address will be 8:30 A.M. until 8:00 P.M. Eastern Time Zone.

Requests for paper returns, publications or forms not related to magnetic media processing should be requested from local IRS offices or by calling the toll-free number in your area.

.02 The National Computer Center will process returns filed on magnetic media only. All information returns, including corrections, filed on paper forms should be submitted to the appropriate service center, not the National Computer Center. Organizations who file their information returns on magnetic media but who submit their corrected returns on paper forms, refer to the 1986 "Instructions for Forms 1099, 1098, 5498, 1096, and W–2G" for the service center addresses.

SEC. 14. COMBINED FEDERAL/STATE FILING

.01 The Combined Federal/State Program was established to simplify information returns filing for the taxpayer. IRS will accept, upon prior approval, mini-disk files containing state reporting information only for those states listed in Table 1 in this section. FORMS 1098, 1099–A, 1099–B, AND W–2G CANNOT BE FILED UNDER THE COMBINED FEDERAL/STATE FILING PROGRAM. DUE TO THE 256 CHARACTER RECORD RESTRICTION FOR CASSETTE FILERS, CASSETTE TAPES ARE NOT ACCEPTABLE ON THIS PROGRAM. EACH RECORD IN THE COMBINED FEDERAL/STATE PROGRAM MUST BE 360 CHARACTERS IN LENGTH; THEREFORE ONLY MINI-DISK FILES ARE ACCEPTABLE.

.02 To request approval to participate in the Combined Federal/State Program, a "test" file, coded for this program, must be submitted by the transmitter to the IRS National Computer Center between August 15 and December 15 using the revenue procedure that will be used for the actual data files. Blanket approval will not be given to software packages. The "test" file is only required for the first year. Once you are approved, you do not need to resubmit "tests" each year, except when notified by IRS. Refer to Part A, Sec. 13 for the address. See Part A, Sec. 5.04 for general guidelines on submission of "test" files. Both the "test" file and the actual data file must conform exactly to the revenue procedure for the tax year of the actual data. Combined Federal/State records must be coded using each state's dollar criteria from Table 2 of this section for each type of return.

If the "test" file is determined to be acceptable, IRS will return it to the filer with Form 6847, Consent For Internal Revenue Service to Release Tax Information. The payer must complete Form 6847. The five character alpha/numeric Transmitter Control Code must be included on the form. The form should then be returned to IRS before IRS will release tax information to any of the participating states.

Form 6847 must be signed by one of the individuals listed at the bottom of the form. If the form is signed by an attorney-in-fact, the written consent from the taxpayer to the attorney-in-fact must be included with the Form 6847. This consent by language and/or scope must clearly indicate that the attorney-in-fact is empowered to authorize release of the information document returns to the state(s). A separate Form 6847 is required for each payer. A transmitter may not combine payers on one Form 6847 even though acting as attorney-in-fact for several payers. Form 6847 may be photocopied if you receive an insufficient number of the form. If you have filed on this program in the past and have not met these requirements, you must resubmit the Form 6847 with the proper signatures as specified. If you file for multiple payers, only code the records to go to the state(s) for those payers that participate and have properly submitted Form 6847. Do not submit actual data records coded for the Combined Federal/State Program without prior approval from IRS.

.03 States that participate in this program and the valid state code assigned to each are listed in Table 1 of this section. If the state that you wish information released to does not participate in the program, do not code your records for that state. If the state participates, if you have received prior approval, and if all other conditions are met, IRS will forward the tax information to the participating state at no charge to the filer. You do not need to reapply each year.

.04 IF CORRECTIONS MUST BE MADE, IRS WILL NOT TRANSMIT CORRECTED RETURNS TO THE STATES; THIS WILL BE THE RESPONSIBILITY OF THE FILER.

.05 IRS will make no attempt to process files with any deviations. Approval to participate in the Combined Federal/State Program will be revoked if any fil are submitted that do not totally conform

.06 IRS is acting as a forwarding ag ONLY. Some participating states requi separate notification that you are filing this manner. It is your responsibility contact the appropriate states for furth information.

.07 The appropriate state code shou be entered for those documents which me that state's filing requirements. It is th filer's responsibility to determine the sta code to be used and to obtain the filin requirements from the appropriate state(s

.08 If you meet all of the requiremen for this program, you must provide th state totals from the "K" Record on separate Form 4804, Transmittal of I formation Returns on Magnetic Media (Form 4802, Transmittal For Multip Magnetic Media Reporting) or comput generated substitute for each state, or y must include a listing which identifies ea state and the "K" Record totals for each

.09 If you have met ALL of the abo conditions:

(a) You must submit all records usi two 180 positions sectors which indica the appropriate coding related to this pr gram.

(b) The "C" Record must be followe by a "K" Record for each state. The "K Record indicates the number of paye being reported to each particular state.

(c) Payment amount totals and the val participating state code must be includ in the state totals "K" Record. Refer Part C, Sec. 15, for a description of t "K" Record.

(d) The "K" Record is followed by end of transmission "F" Record (if this the last record of the entire file).

.10 Only those states listed in Table below will receive information from IR It is the filer's responsibility to file info mation returns with states that do not pa ticipate in this program.

PART B. CASSETTE SPECIFICATIONS

SECTION 1. GENERAL

.01 The specifications contained in this part of the revenue procedure define the required format and contents of the records to be included in the cassette file. These specifications must be adhered to unless deviations have been specifically granted by IRS.

.02 In most instances, IRS will be able to process any compatible cassette files. IRS has a Burroughs B–94 model mini-computer with free standing NRZ and PE cassette devices, style B 9497–11 and B 9497–15, respectively. We understand that most Burroughs B–90 series mini-computers will produce compatible cassettes.

.03 A cassette contains a minimum of 282 feet (86m) of 2 track recording tape and a minimum of 6 inches (15.24 cm) of clear leader at both ends of the tape.

.04 Data is recorded on the cassette at a maximum density of 800 bits per inch (BPI) for NRZ cassettes and 1600 BPI for PE cassettes.

.05 The recording technique is either non-return to zero (NRZ) or Phase Encoded (PE).

.06 When the NRZ technique is used, both tracks of the cassette are recorded simultaneously; data is recorded on one track and a synchronizing clock impulse is recorded on the other.

.07 When the PE technique is used, there is no requirement for a separate clock pulse track; one track is recorded when the cassette is driven in one direction, and the other track is recorded when the tape drive is driven in the other direction. Therefore, two PE data tracks can be recorded over the full length of the tape.

.08 The data is recorded in blocks of characters, separated by interblock gaps (IBGs). Records may not span blocks.

.09 The recording mode is 9 channel ASCII (American Standard Coded Information Interchange) or EBCDIC (Extended Binary Coded Decimal Interchange Code).

.10 The industry standard for cassettes is odd parity.

.11 The maximum block size is 256 characters.

.12 Each block of characters is followed by two 8-bit Cyclic Redundanc Check (CRC) characters which serve as parity check on the data block durin reading operations.

.13 The data characters plus the CR characters are preceded and followed b a Preamble character and a Postambl character which serve to delimit the dat block.

.14 Tape marks which consist of a fixe number of null characters (all zero bit are used to delimit logical portions of th cassette and also to mark the end of th file of data.

.15 Cassettes may be either labeled unlabeled.

.16 Each block of data, including tap marks, are separated from the next bloc by the interblock gap (IBGs). The IB is 1.4 inches (3.5 cm) in length. A tap mark length is approximately 6 inches (1 cm) in length.

.17 The beginning of the tape is marke by a BOT mark. This is a hole in the tap used to define the start of the recordin tape. It is recommended that a tape mar reamble character, null character (one haracter in which all bits are zero), a ostamble character and ending label be laced on the cassette immediately after nd of tape (EOT) is reached.

.18 An external label, Form 5064, must ppear on each cassette submitted for rocessing. The following information is eeded:

(a) The transmitter's name.

(b) The five character alpha/numeric Transmitter Control Code.

(c) State of sender (e.g., NY).

(d) Tape density.

(e) Check box (magnetic tape filers nly).

(f) Track (magnetic tape filers only).

(g) Recording code (e.g., EBCDIC or SCII).

(h) The tax year of the data (e.g., 1986).

(i) Document types (e.g., 1099–INT).

(j) The total number of "B" Records fter each "A" Record (this figure is taken rom the "C" Records).

(k) A number assigned by the transmitter to the tape.

(l) The sequence of each cassette (e.g., 01 of 008).

The external media label, Form 5064, vas updated for tax year 1986. You must se the updated label. This information vill assist IRS in processing the file or in ocating a file, should the transmitter request that it be returned due to errors. RS advises that special shipping conainers not be used for transmitting data since it cannot be guaranteed that they will be returned.

SEC. 2. RECORD LENGTH

.01 The cassette records defined in this revenue procedure may be blocked or unblocked, subject to the following:

(a) A block must not exceed 256 cassette positions.

(b) A record must be a minimum of 200 positions and a maximum of 256 positions. Due to this restriction, cassette filers may not participate in the Combined Federal/State Program; cassette filers may only report a maximum of six payment amounts for any single record; also, Forms 1099–A, 1099–B and W–2G cannot be filed on cassette.

(c) If the use of blocked records would result in a short block, all remaining positions of the block must be filled with 9's. DO NOT PAD A BLOCK WITH BLANKS.

(d) All records except the Header and Trailer Labels, may be blocked.

(e) Records may not span blocks.

SEC. 3. PAYER/TRANSMITTER "A" RECORD

.01 Identifies the payer and transmitter of the cassette file and provides parameters for the succeeding Payee "B" Records. IRS computer programs rely on the absolute relationship between the parameters and data fields in the "A" Record and the data fields in the "B" Records to which they apply.

.02 The number of "A" Records appearing on a cassette will depend on the number of payers and the different types of returns being reported. After the header label on the cassette, the first record appearing in the file must be an "A" Record. For cassette filing, the actual record lengths for the "A" and "B" Records must agree with whatever is entered in cassette positions 28–30 and 31–33 of the "A" Record. A transmitter may include Payee "B" Records for more than one payer on a cassette; however, each GROUP of Payee "B" Records must be preceded by an "A" Record. A single cassette may also contain different types of returns, but the types of returns must not be intermingled. A separate "A" Record is required for each type of return being reported. An "A" Record may be blocked with "B" Records; however, the initial record on a file must be an "A" Record. IRS will accept an "A" Record after a "C" Record. For cassette files, do not begin any record at the end of a block and continue the same record into the next block.

.03 All alpha characters entered in the "A" Record should be uppercase.

Do not use this indicator for amounts of less than $5,000. The use of Amount Code "8" actually reflects an indicator of direct sales and not an actual payment amount or amount code. The corresponding payment amount field in the Payee "B" Record MUST be reflected as 0000000100. This does not mean that a payment of $1.00 was made or is being reported. The use of Amount Code "8" relates directly to cassette position "4," Document Specific Code and NOTE 2 of the Payment Amount Field in the Payee "B" Record. (If you use Amount Code "8" in the "A" Record, you will enter a "1" in cassette position "4" of the "B" Record. For any other 1099–MISC Amount Codes, you will enter a "0" (zero) in cassette position "4" of the "B" Record.)

Brokers who transfer securities of a customer for use in a short sale must use Amount Code 9 to report the aggregate payments received in lieu of dividends or tax-exempt interest on behalf of a customer while the short sale was open. Generally, for substitute payments in lieu of dividends, a broker is required to file a Form 1099–MISC for each affected customer who is not an individual. Refer to the 1986 "Instructions for Forms 1099, 1098, 5498, 1096, and W–2G" for detailed information. The instructions are available from IRS offices.

NOTE 3: If you are reporting Excess Golden Parachute Payments, use paper Forms 1099–MISC. Do not report these payments on magnetic media. See Part A, Sec. 15 for a definition of an Excess Golden Parachute Payment.

SEC. 4. PAYEE "B" RECORD—GENERAL FIELD DESCRIPTIONS

.01 The Payee "B" Record contains the payment information from the individual statements. When filing information documents on cassette(s), the format for the Payee "B" Records will vary in relation to the number of payment amount fields being reported. The number of payment amount fields will depend upon the number of Payment Amount Indicator Codes used in positions 18–23 of the Payer/Transmitter "A" Record. For example, if you are reporting 1099–INT, position 17 of the Payer/Transmitter "A" Record will be coded with a "6". If the Amount Indicators used to report this interest are Amount Codes "1", "2", and "3", then cassette positions 18–23 of the "A" Record will be coded "123bbb" (b represents a blank position). To correspond with Amount Indicators "1", "2", and "3" of the "A" Record, the "B" Record will contain three payment amount fields. Cassette positions 31–40 of the "B" Record will contain the payment amount to be reported for Amount Code "1" (Earnings from savings and loan associations, credit unions, bank deposits, bearer certificates of deposits, etc.); cassette positions 41–50 of the "B" Record will contain the payment amount to be reported for Amount Code "2" (Amount of forfeiture); and cassette positions 51–60 of the "B" Record will contain the payment amount to be reported for Amount Code "3" (Federal income tax withheld). The First Payee Name Line must begin immediately after the last payment amount that is indicated as being used. In this example, the First Payee Name Line would begin in cassette position 61.

.02 All records must be a fixed length. Records may not span blocks. A block may not exceed 256 positions. DO NOT PAD A BLOCK WITH BLANKS. If the use of blocked records would result in a short block, all remaining positions of the block must be filled with 9s.

.03 All payee records must contain correct payee name and address information entered in the fields prescribed in this section. Records containing an invalid TIN (SSN or EIN) and having no address data present may be returned for correction. In searching for a payee address, if your efforts fail and you know that the address is invalid, supply the invalid address rather than leave the field blank.

.04 IRS must be able to identify the surname associated with the TIN (SSN or EIN) furnished on a statement. The specifications below include a field in the payee records called "Name Control" in which the first four alphabetic characters of the payee's surname or last name are to be entered by the payer. The surname or last name should appear first in the First Payee Name Line of all Payee "B" Records; however, if your records have been developed using the first name first, IRS programs will accept this but a blank must appear between the first and last name.

.05 If payers are unable to provide the first four characters of the surname, the Name Control Field may be left blank; however, compliance with the following will facilitate IRS computer programs in generating the Name Control.

(a) The surname of the payee whose TIN (SSN or EIN) is shown in the Payee "B" Record should always appear firs If, however, you enter the first name firs you must leave a blank space between th first and last name.

(b) In the case of multiple payees, on the surname of the payee whose TIN (SS or EIN) is shown in the Payee "B" Re ord must be present in the First Paye Name Line. Surnames of any other pa ees in the record must be entered in th Second Payee Name Line.

.06 All alpha characters entered in th "B" Record should be uppercase.

.07 IRS STRONGLY ENCOURAGE FILERS TO REVIEW THEIR DAT FOR ACCURACY BEFORE SUBMI SION TO PREVENT ERRONEOU NOTICES BEING MAILED TO PE SONS FOR WHOM REPORTS AR FILED. FILERS SHOULD BE ESP CIALLY CAREFUL THAT THE TAXPAYER NAMES, SOCIAL S CURITY NUMBERS (SSNs), A COUNT NUMBERS, TYPES O INCOME, AND INCOME AMOUN ARE CORRECT. ALTHOUGH IR ENCOURAGES PAYERS TO FILL I THE PAYER'S ACCOUNT NUMBE FOR THE PAYEE FIELD, THE SHOULD NOT INCLUDE EXTRA NEOUS DIGITS AS THIS FIELD I LIMITED, IN MAGNETIC MEDI FILING, TO 10 POSITIONS.

.08 WHEN REPORTING FORM 109 "MORTGAGE INTEREST STAT MENT," THE "A" RECORD WIL REFLECT THE NAME OF THE R CIPIENT OF THE INTEREST. THE "B RECORD WILL REFLECT THE I DIVIDUAL PAYING THE INTERES AND THE AMOUNT PAID.

If fewer than ten characters are required, right-justify filling the remaining positions with blanks.
	Payment Amount Fields (Must be Numeric)		The number of payment amounts is dependent upon and must agree with the number of Amount Indicators present in positions 18–23 of the "A" Record. For cassette filers, a maximum of six payment amounts may be present. THE FIRST PAYEE NAME LINE MUST APPEAR IMMEDIATELY AFTER THE LAST PAYMENT AMOUNT INDICATED AS BEING USED. For example, if you are reporting 1099–INT and you used only Amount Indicator "3" in the Payer/Transmitter "A" Record, then you will only use one ten position payment amount in the Payee "B" Record, right-justified, and the First Payee Name Line will begin in position 41. Each payment field that you allow for, or use, must contain 10 numeric characters (see NOTE 1). Do not provide a payment amount field when the corresponding Amount Indicator in the Payer/Transmitter "A" Record is blank. Each payment amount must be entered in dollars and cents. Do not enter dollar signs, commas, decimal points, or NEGATIVE PAYMENTS. Example: If the Amount Indicators are reflected as "123bbb", the Payee "B" Records must have only 3 payment amount fields. SEC. 5. END OF PAYER "C" RECORD

.01 The Control Total fields have been expanded from 12 to 15 positions. Adjust your programs accordingly.

.02 The End of Payer "C" Record is a summary record for a type of return for a given payer. It MUST be the same length as the "B" Records in the payer's file.

.03 The "C" Record will contain the total number of payees and the totals of the payment amount fields filed by a given payer. The "C" Record must be written after the last Payee "B" Record for each type of return for a given payer. For each "A" Record and group of "B" Records on the file, there must be a corresponding "C" Record.

.04 In developing the "C" Record, for example, if you used Amount Codes 1, 3, and 6 in the "A" Record, the totals from the "B" Records will appear in Control Totals 1, 2, and 3 of the "C" Record. Positions 53–142 would be zero filled and positions 143–256 would be blank filled in this example.

.05 Payers/Transmitters must verify the accuracy of the totals in the "C" Record and must enter the totals on the transmittal Form 4804, 4802 or computer generated substitute, which will accompany the shipment. The lines used on Forms 4804 and 4802 to record payment amounts correspond with the Amount Codes used in the "A" Record. These forms have been updated for 1986.

PART C. BURROUGHS SUPER MINI-DISK SPECIFICATIONS

SECTION 1. GENERAL

.01 The specifications contained in this part of the revenue procedure prescribe the required format and contents of the records to be included in the Burroughs Super Mini-Disk (BSMD) file. These specifications must be adhered to unless deviations have been specifically granted by IRS in writing.

.02 IRS has a Burroughs B–94 mini-computer with 2 mini-disk drives: a Burroughs Super Mini-Disk, style B 9489–1 and a Burroughs Super Mini-Disk II, sty B 9489–21.

.03 It is our understanding that mo Burroughs B–90 series mini-computers w produce a mini-disk that will be compa ible with our system.

.04 To be compatible, a mini-disk must neet the following specifications in total:

(a) The Burroughs Super Mini-disk is flexible mylar disk with an iron oxide oating. The disk is 8 inches (20.3 cm) in liameter with a 1.5 inch (3.8 cm) center iole.

(b) There are 32 Sector Markers (holes) n the disk at a distance of 1.5 inches (3.8 m) from the center. These markers deine the 32 sectors in which data can be ecorded on each track of the disk.

(c) Recorded data is encoded using the Miller Frequency Mode (MFM) technique. Data transferred between the disk and the processor is encoded using the non return to zero (NRZ) technique.

(d) Bit serial data is written to the disk n the Burroughs standard 180 bytes per ector format.

(e) Number of usable sides is 2.

(f) Tracks per side is 88.

(g) Sectors per track is 32.

(h) Maximum recording density is 4774 bits per inch.

(i) When initializing the mini-disk, the name IRSTAX should be assigned to the mini-disk.

(j) The file name in the super mini-disk header label should be FED-MINI.

.05 Payers who can substantially conform to these specifications, but who require some minor deviations, MUST contact the National Computer Center. Under no circumstances may mini-disks deviating from the specifications in this revenue procedure be submitted without prior approval from IRS. If you file under the Combined Federal/State Program, your files must conform totally to this revenue procedure.

.06 An external label must appear on each mini-disk submitted for processing. The following information is needed:

(a) The transmitter's name.

(b) The five character alpha/numeric Transmitter Control Code.

(c) State of sender (e.g., NY).

(d) Checkbox (for tape filers only).

(e) Tape density (for tape filers only).

(f) Track (for tape filers only).

(g) Recording Code (ASCII for mini-disk filers).

(h) The tax year of the data (e.g., 1986).

(i) Document types (e.g., 1099–INT).

(j) The total number of "B" Records after each "A" Record (this figure is taken from the "C" Record).

(k) A number assigned by the transmitter to each mini-disk.

(l) The sequence of each mini-disk (e.g., 001 of 008).

The external media label, Form 5064, was updated for tax year 1986. You must use the updated label. This information will assist IRS in processing the file or in locating a file, should the transmitter request that it be returned due to errors. IRS advises that special shipping containers not be used for transmitting data since it cannot be guaranteed that they will be returned.

SEC. 2. PAYER/TRANSMITTER "A" RECORD

.01 Identifies the payer and transmitter of the mini-disk and provides parameters for the succeeding Payee "B" Records. IRS computer programs rely on the absolute relationship between the parameters and data fields in the "A" Record and the data fields in the "B" Records to which they apply.

.02 The number of "A" Records appearing on a mini-disk will depend on the number of payers and the different types of returns being reported. After the header label on the mini-disk, the first record appearing in the file must be an "A" Record. For mini-disk filing, the actual record lengths for the "A" and "B" Records must agree with whatever is entered in mini-disk positions 29–31 and 32–34 of the "A" Record. A transmitter may include Payee "B" Records for more than one payer on a mini-disk; however, each GROUP of Payee "B" Records must be preceded by an "A" Record. A single mini-disk may also contain different types of returns, but the types of returns must not be intermingled. A separate "A" Record is required for each type of return being reported. The initial record on a file must be an "A" Record.

.03 All alpha characters entered in the "A" Record should be uppercase.

.04 WHEN REPORTING FORM 1098, "MORTGAGE INTEREST STATEMENT," THE "A" RECORD WILL REFLECT THE NAME OF THE RECIPIENT OF THE INTEREST, THE "B" RECORD WILL REFLECT THE INDIVIDUAL PAYING THE INTEREST AND THE AMOUNT PAID.

SEC. 4. PAYEE "B" RECORDS—GENERAL INFORMATION FOR ALL FORMS

.01 This section contains the general information concerning the Payee "B" Record for all information returns. For detailed descriptions of the record refer to the following:

(a) Sec. 5. PAYEE "B" RECORDS—FIELD DESCRIPTIONS FOR FORMS 1098, 1099–DIV, 1099–G, 1099–INT, 1099–MISC, 1099–OID, 1099–PATR, 1099–R AND 5498.

(b) Sec. 7. PAYEE "B" RECORDS—FIELD DESCRIPTIONS FOR FORM 1099–A.

(c) Sec. 9. PAYEE "B" RECORDS—FIELD DESCRIPTIONS FOR FORM 1099–B.

(d) Sec. 11. PAYEE "B" RECORDS—FIELD DESCRIPTIONS FOR FORM W–2G.

.02 The Payee "B" Record contains the payment information from the individual statements. When filing information documents on mini-disk(s), the format for the Payee "B" Records will vary in relation to the number of payment amount fields being reported. The number of payment amount fields will depend upon the number of Payment Amount Indicator Codes used in positions 19–27 of the Payer/Transmitter "A" Record. For example, if you are reporting 1099–INT, position 18 of the Payer/Transmitter "A" Record will be coded with a "6." If the Amount Indicators used to report this interest are Amount Codes "1," "2," and "3," the mini-disk positions 19–27 of the "A" Re ord will be coded "123bbbbbb" (b rep resents a blank position). To correspon with Amount Indicators "1," "2," and "3 of the "A" Record, the "B" Record wi contain three payment amount fields. Min disk positions 32–41 of the "B" Recor will contain the payment amount to b reported for Amount Code "1" (Earnin from savings and loan associations, cred unions, bank deposits, bearer certificate of deposit, etc.); mini-disk positions 42 51 of the "B" Record will contain th payment amount to be reported fo Amount Code "2" (Amount of forfei ure); and mini-disk positions 52–61 of th "B" Record will contain the paymen mount to be reported for Amount Code 3" (Federal income tax withheld). The irst Payee Name Line must begin imediately after the last payment amount at is indicated as being used. In this exmple, the First Payee Name Line would egin in mini-disk position 62.

.03 All payee records must contain corect payee name and address information ntered in the fields prescribed in this secon. Records containing an invalid TIN SSN or EIN) and having no address data resent may be returned for correction. n searching for a payee address, if your fforts fail and you know that the address invalid, supply the invalid address rather han leave the field blank.

.04 IRS must be able to identify the urname associated with the TIN (SSN or EIN) furnished on a statement. The specifications below include a field in the payee ecords called "Name Control" in which he first four alphabetic characters of the ayee's surname or last name are to be ntered by the payer. The surname or last ame should appear first in the First Payee Name Line of all Payee "B" Records; owever, if your records have been developed using the first name first, IRS rograms will accept this but a blank must ppear between the first and last name.

.05 If payers are unable to provide the irst four characters of the surname, the Name Control Field may be left blank; however, compliance with the following will facilitate IRS computer programs in generating the Name Control.

(a) The surname of the payee whose TIN (SSN or EIN) is shown in the Payee "B" Record should always appear first. If, however, you enter the first name first, you must leave a blank space between the first and last name.

(b) In the case of multiple payees, only the surname of the payee whose TIN (SSN or EIN) is shown in the Payee "B" Record must be present in the First Payee Name Line. Surnames of any other payees in the record must be entered in the Second Payee Name Line.

.06 Provision is also made in these specifications for data entries required by state or local governments. This should minimize the Payer/Transmitter's programming burden should payers desire to report on mini-disk to state or local governments. See Part A, Sec. 14, for the Combined Federal/State filing requirements.

.07 Those filers participating in the Combined Federal/State Filing Program must have 180 position sectors. Positions 127 and 128 in the Payee "B" Records must contain the appropriate state code for the state to receive the information. The file should also meet the money criteria described in Part A, Sec. 14.11. Do not code for the states unless prior approval to participate has been granted by IRS. See Part A, Sec. 14.10 for a list of the valid participating state codes. FORMS 1098, 1099–A, 1099–B, AND W–2G CANNOT BE FILED UNDER THE COMBINED FEDERAL/STATE FILING PROGRAM. Your files must meet all of the requirements specified in Part A, Sec. 14, in order to participate in this program.

.08 All alpha characters entered in the "B" Record should be uppercase.

.09 IRS STRONGLY ENCOURAGES FILERS TO REVIEW THEIR DATA FOR ACCURACY BEFORE SUBMISSION TO PREVENT ERRONEOUS NOTICES BEING MAILED TO PERSONS FOR WHOM REPORTS ARE FILED. FILERS SHOULD BE ESPECIALLY CAREFUL THAT THEIR TAXPAYER NAMES, SOCIAL SECURITY NUMBERS (SSNs), ACCOUNT NUMBERS, TYPES OF INCOME, AND INCOME AMOUNTS ARE CORRECT. ALTHOUGH IRS ENCOURAGES PAYERS TO FILL IN THE PAYER'S ACCOUNT NUMBER FOR THE PAYEE FIELD, THEY SHOULD NOT INCLUDE EXTRANEOUS DIGITS AS THE FIELD IS LIMITED, IN MAGNETIC MEDIA FILING, TO 10 POSITIONS.

.10 WHEN REPORTING FORM 1098, "MORTGAGE INTEREST STATEMENT," THE "A" RECORD WILL REFLECT THE NAME OF THE RECIPIENT OF THE INTEREST. THE "B" RECORD WILL REFLECT THE INDIVIDUAL PAYING THE INTEREST AND THE AMOUNT PAID.

SEC. 5. PAYEE "B" RECORDS—FIELD DESCRIPTIONS FOR FORMS 1098, 1099–DIV, 1099–G, 1099–INT, 1099–MISC, 1099–OID, 1099–PATR, 1099–R, AND 5498.

.01 This section contains the general payment information from individual statements for Forms 1098, 1099–DIV, 1099–G, 1099–INT, 1099–MISC, 1099–OID, 1099–PATR, 1099–R, and 5498.

.02 In most instances each Payee "B" Record described in this section will be composed of two sectors on the mini-disk with positions 1–41 being a constant format and the variance occurring in positions 42–180 of the first sector and the entire second sector. In those instances where six or more payment amount fields are reported, each Payee "B" Record will be composed of three sectors on the minidisk with positions 1–41 of the first sector being a constant format and the variance occurring in positions 42–180 of the first sector and the entire second and third sectors.

3-21	Taxpayer Identification Number	9	REQUIRED. Enter the valid 9-digit Taxpayer Identification Number of the payee (SSN or EIN, as appropriate). Where an identification number has been applied for but not received or where there is any other legitimate cause for not having an identification number, enter blanks. 2-31	Payer's Account Number for Payee	10	REQUIRED. Payer must use this field to enter the payee's account number. The use of this item will facilitate easy reference to specific records in the payer's file should any questions arise. DO NOT ENTER A TAXPAYER IDENTIFICATION NUMBER IN THIS FIELD. An account number can be any account number assigned by the payer to the payee (i.e.., checking account, savings account, etc.). THIS NUMBER WILL HELP TO DISTINGUISH THE INDIVIDUAL PAYEE'S ACCOUNT WITH YOU AND SHOULD BE UNIQUE TO IDENTIFY THE SPECIFIC TRANSACTION MADE WITH THE ORGANIZATION, SHOULD MULTIPLE RETURNS BE FILED. This information will be particularly necessary if you need to file a corrected return. You are strongly encouraged to use this field. You may use any number that will help identify the particular transaction that you are reporting. If a number is not determinable, enter blanks. If fewer than ten characters are required, right-justify filling the remaining positions with blanks.
	Payment Amount Fields (Must be numeric)		The number of payment amounts is dependent upon and must agree with the number of Amount Indicators present in positions 19–27 of the "A" Record. The First Payee Name Line must appear after the last payment amount indicated as being used. For example, if you are reporting 1099–INT and you used only Amount Indicator "3" in the Payer/Transmitter "A" Record, then you will only use one ten position payment amount in the Payee "B" Record, right-justified, and the First Payee Name Line will begin in position 42. Each payment field that you allow for, or use, must contain 10 numeric characters (see NOTE). Do not provide a payment amount field when the corresponding Amount Indicator in the Payer/Transmitter "A" Record is blank. Each payment amount must be entered in dollars and cents. Do not enter dollar signs, commas, decimal points, or NEGATIVE PAYMENTS (except those items that reflect a loss on Form 1099–B and must be negative overpunched in the units position). Example: If the Amount Indicators are reflected as "123bbbbbb", the Payee "B" Records must have only 3 payment amount fields. If Amount Indicators are reflected as "12367bbbb", the "B" Records must have only 5 payment amount fields. Payment amounts MUST be right-justified and unused positions MUST be zero filled. Federal income tax withheld is not reported as a negative amount. NOTE: If any one payment amount exceeds "9999999999" (dollars and cents), as many SEPARATE Payee "B" Records as necessary to contain the total amount MUST be submitted for the Payee.
32–41	Payment Amount 1	10	This amount is identified by the amount indicator in position 19 of the Payer/Transmitter "A" Record. This amount must always be present.

	Payment Amount Fields (Must be numeric)		The number of payment amounts is dependent upon and must agree with the number of Amount Indicators present in positions 19–27 of the "A" Record. The First Payee Name Line must appear immediately after the last payment amount indicated as being used. For example, if you are reporting 1099–INT and you used only Amount Indicator "3" in the Payer/Transmitter "A" Record, then you will only use one ten position payment amount in the Payee "B" Record, right-justified, and the First Payee Name Line will begin in position 42. Each payment field that you allow for, or use, must contain 10 numeric characters (see NOTE). Do not provide a payment amount field when the corresponding Amount Indicator in the Payer/Transmitter "A" Record is blank. Each payment amount must be entered in dollars and cents. Do not enter dollar signs, commas, decimal points, or NEGATIVE PAYMENTS. Example: If the Amount Indicators are reflected as "123bbbbbb", the Payee "B" Records must have only 3 payment amount fields. If Amount Indicators are reflected as "12367bbbb", the "B" Records must have only 5 payment amount fields. Payment amounts MUST be right-justified and unused portions MUST be zero filled. Federal income tax withheld is not reported as a negative amount. NOTE: If any one payment amount exceeds "9999999999" (dollars and cents), as many SEPARATE Payee "B" Records as necessary to contain the total amount MUST be submitted for the Payee.
32–41	Payment Amount 1	10	This amount is identified by the indicator in position 19 of Sector 1 of the Payer/Transmitter "A" Record. This amount must always be present.

SEC. 13. END OF PAYER "C" RECORD

.01 The Control total fields have been expanded from 12 to 15 positions. Adjust your programs accordingly.

.02 The End of Payer "C" Record is a summary record for a type of return for a given payer.

.03 The "C" Record will contain the total number of payees and the totals of the payment amount fields filed by a given payer. The "C" Record must be written after the last Payee "B" Record for each type of return for a given payer. For each "A" Record and group of "B" Records on the file, there must be a corresponding "C" Record.

.04 In developing the "C" Record, for example, if you used Amount Codes 1, 3, and 6 in the "A" Record, the totals from the "B" Records will appear in Control Total 1, 2, and 3 of the "C" Record. Positions 53–142 would be zero filled and position 143–180 would be blank filled in this example.

.05 Payers/Transmitters must verify the accuracy of the totals in the "C" Record and must enter the totals on the transmittal, Form 4804 and 4802 or computer generated substitute, which will accompany the shipment. The lines used on Forms 4804 and 4802 to record payment amounts correspond with the Amount Codes used in the "A" Record. These forms have been updated for 1986.

Definition of Terms

Revenue rulings and revenue procedures (hereinafter referred to as "rulings") that have an effect on previous rulings use the following defined terms to describe the effect:

Amplified describes a situation where no change is being made in a prior published position, but the prior position is being extended to apply to a variation of the fact situation set forth therein. Thus, if an earlier ruling held that a principle applied to A, and the new ruling holds that the same principle also applies to B, the earlier ruling is amplified. (Compare with modified, below).

Clarified is used in those instances where the language in a prior ruling is being made clear because the language has caused, or may cause, some confusion. It is not used where a position in a prior ruling is being changed.

Distinguished describes a situation where a ruling mentions a previously published ruling and points out an essential difference between them.

Modified is used where the substance of a previously published position is being changed. Thus, if a prior ruling held that a principle applied to A but not to B, and the new ruling holds that it applies to both A and B, the prior ruling is modified because it corrects a published position. (Compare with amplified and clarified, above).

Obsoleted describes a previously published ruling that is not considered determinative with respect to future transactions. This term is most commonly used in a ruling that lists previously published rulings that are obsoleted because of changes in law or regulations. A ruling may also be obsoleted because the substance has been included in regulations subsequently adopted.

Revoked describes situations where the position in the previously published ruling is not correct and the correct position is being stated in the new ruling.

Superseded describes a situation where the new ruling does nothing more than restate the substance and situation of a previously published ruling (or rulings). Thus, the term is used to republish under the 1954 Code and regulations the same position published under the 1939 Code and regulations. The term is also used when it is desired to republish in a single ruling a series of situations, names, etc., that were previously published over a period of time in separate rulings. If the new ruling does more than restate the substance of a prior ruling, a combination of terms is used. For example, modified and superseded describes a situation where the substance of a previously published ruling is being changed in part and is continued without change in part and it is desired to restate the valid portion of the previously published ruling in a new ruling that is self contained. In this case the previously published ruling is first modified and then, as modified, is superseded.

Supplemented is used in situations in which a list, such as a list of the names of countries, is published in a ruling and that list is expanded by adding further names in subsequent rulings. After the original ruling has been supplemented several times, a new ruling may be published that includes the list in the original ruling and the additions, and supersedes all prior rulings in the series.

Suspended is used in rare situations to show that the previous published rulings will not be applied pending some future action such as the issuance of new or amended regulations, the outcome of cases in litigation, or the outcome of a Service study.

INTERNAL REVENUE BULLETIN

The Introduction on page 3 describes the purpose and content of this publication. The weekly Internal Revenue Bulletin is sold on a yearly subscription basis by the Superintendent of Documents. Current subscribers are notified by the Superintendent of Documents when their subscriptions must be renewed.

CUMULATIVE BULLETINS

The contents of the weekly Bulletin are consolidated semiannually into a permanent, indexed, Cumulative Bulletin. These are sold on a single copy basis and are not included as part of the subscription to the Internal Revenue Bulletin. Subscribers to the weekly Bulletin are notified when copies of the Cumulative Bulletin are available. Certain issues of Cumulative Bulletins are out of print and are not available. Persons desiring available Cumulative Bulletins, which are listed on the reverse, may purchase them from the Superintendent of Documents.

BULLETIN INDEX-DIGEST SYSTEM

The Bulletin Index-Digest System provides a fast and easy way to research Revenue Rulings, Revenue Procedures, Public Laws, Treasury Decisions, and other matters of a permanent nature published in the weekly Internal Revenue Bulletin, or Cumulative Bulletin from 1953 on. It is a comprehensive and up-to-date research tool that requires no filing or other clerical maintenance. The current revision consists of four Services, available on a subscription basis, each including a basic volume that covers the period 1953-1983/1984 and a cumulative supplement covering material published in subsequent Bulletins for the following two-year period. Cumulative supplements are issued quarterly for the Income Tax Service and semiannually for the Estate and Gift, Employment, and Excise Tax Service.

HIGHLIGHTS OF THIS ISSUE

These synopses are intended only as aids to the reader in identifying the subject matter covered. They may not be relied upon as authoritative interpretations.

INCOME TAX

Rev. Rul. 86-118, page 4.

Rev. Rul. 86-119, page 8.
Mineral production payments; advance for interest in unproven property. If an investor advances money to an oil and gas producer for the right to the lesser of twice the amount advanced or a certain percentage of net proceeds from the sale of hydrocarbons produced from a particular property, and the only indication that hydrocarbons will be produced from the property is favorable geological and geophysical studies, the advanced money will be treated as consideration for a royalty interest.

1986-41

Mission of the Service

The purpose of the Internal Revenue Service is to collect the proper amount of tax revenues at the least cost to the public, and in a manner that warrants the highest degree of public confidence in our integrity, efficiency and fairness. To achieve that purpose, we will:

—Encourage and achieve the highest possible degree of voluntary compliance in accordance with the tax law and regulations;

—Advise the public of their rights and responsibilities;

—Determine the extent of compliance and the causes of noncompliance;

—Do all things needed for the proper administration and enforcement of the tax laws;

—Continually search for and implement new, more efficient and effective ways of accomplishing our Mission.

Statement of Principles of Internal Revenue Tax Administration

The function of the Internal Revenue Service is to administer the Internal Revenue Code. Tax policy for raising revenue is determined by Congress.

With this in mind, it is the duty of the Service to carry out that policy by correctly applying the laws enacted by Congress; to determine the reasonable meaning of various Code provisions in light of the Congressional purpose in enacting them; and to perform this work in a fair and impartial manner, with neither a government nor a taxpayer point of view.

At the heart of administration is interpretation of the Code. It is the responsibility of each person in the Service, charged with the duty of interpreting the law, to try to find the true meaning of the statutory provision and not to adopt a strained construction in the belief that he or she is "protecting the revenue." The revenue is properly protected only when we ascertain and apply the true meaning of the statute.

The Service also has the responsibility of applying and administering the law in a reasonable, practical manner. Issues should only be raised by examining officers when they have merit, never arbitrarily or for trading purposes. At the same time, the examining officer should never hesitate to raise a meritorious issue. It is also important that care be exercised not to raise an issue or to ask a court to adopt a position inconsistent with an established Service position.

Administration should be both reasonable and vigorous. It should be conducted with as little delay as possible and with great courtesy and considerateness. It should never try to overreach, and should be reasonable within the bounds of law and sound administration. It should, however, be vigorous in requiring compliance with law and it should be relentless in its attack on unreal tax devices and fraud.

T22.23:

Introduction

The Internal Revenue Bulletin is the authoritative instrument of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for announcing official rulings and procedures of the Internal Revenue Service and for publishing Treasury Decisions, Executive Orders, Tax Conventions, legislation, court decisions, and other items of general interest. It is published weekly and may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. Bulletin contents of a permanent nature are consolidated semiannually into Cumulative Bulletins, which are sold on a single-copy basis.

It is the policy of the Service to publish in the Bulletin all substantive rulings necessary to promote a uniform application of the tax laws, including all rulings that supersede, revoke, modify, or amend any of those previously published in the Bulletin. All published rulings apply retroactively unless otherwise indicated. Procedures relating solely to matters of internal management are not published; however, statements of internal practices and procedures that affect the rights and duties of taxpayers are published.

Revenue rulings represent the conclusions of the Service on the application of the law to the pivotal facts stated in the revenue ruling. In those based on positions taken in rulings to taxpayers or technical advice to Service field offices, identifying details and information of a confidential nature are deleted to prevent unwarranted invasions of privacy and to comply with statutory requirements.

Rulings and procedures reported in the Bulletin do not have the force and effect of Treasury Department Regulations, but they may be used as precedents. Unpublished rulings will not be relied on, used, or cited as precedents by Service personnel in the disposition of other cases. In applying published rulings and procedures, the effect of subsequent legislation, regulations, court decisions, rulings, and procedures must be considered, and Service personnel and others concerned are cautioned against reaching the same conclusions in other cases unless the facts and circumstances are substantially the same.

The Bulletin is divided into four parts as follows:

Part I.—1954 Code.

This part includes rulings and decisions based on provisions of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

Part II.—Treaties and Tax Legislation.

This part is divided into two subparts as follows: Subpart A, Tax Conventions, and Subpart B, Legislation and Related Committee Reports.

Part III.—Administrative, Procedural, and Miscellaneous.

To the extent practicable, pertinent cross references to these subjects are contained in the other Parts and Subparts.

Part IV.—Items of General Interest.

With the exception of the disbarment and suspension list included in this part, none of these announcements is consolidated in the Cumulative Bulletins.

The first Bulletin for each month includes an index for the matters published during the preceding month. These monthly indexes are cumulated on a quarterly and semiannual basis, and are published in the first Bulletin of the succeeding quarterly and semi-annual period, respectively.

The Bulletin Index-Digest System, a research and reference service supplementing the Bulletin, may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. It consists of four Services: Service No. 1, Income Tax; Service No. 2, Estate and Gift Taxes; Service No. 3, Employment Taxes; Service No. 4, Excise Taxes. Each Service consists of a basic volume and a cumulative supplement that provide (1) finding lists of items published in the Bulletin, (2) digests of revenue rulings, revenue procedures, and other published items, and (3) indexes of Public Laws, Treasury Decisions, and Tax Conventions.

The contents of this publication are not copyrighted and may be reprinted freely. A citation of the Internal Revenue Bulletin as the source would be appropriate.

Part I. Rulings and Decisions Under the Internal Revenue Code of 1954

Section 46.—Amount of Credit

26 CFR 1.46–6: Limitations in case of certain regulated companies.
(Also Section 48; 1.48–1.)

Public utility property; expensed for regulatory purposes, capitalized for tax purposes. The taxpayer does not violate the ratable flow-through requirements of section 46(f)(2) of the Code when for regulatory purposes it expenses the cost of inside wiring and, in the year of the expense, reduces cost of service by the full amount of the investment tax credit allowable with respect to the inside wiring.

Rev. Rul. 86–118

ISSUE

If a telephone public utility taxpayer elected to account for investment credit under section 46(f)(2) of the Internal Revenue Code, are the ratable flow-through requirements of that section violated in a situation where, for regulatory purposes, the taxpayer expenses the cost of inside wiring and reduces the cost of service in that accounting period by the amount of investment tax credit allowable with respect to the inside wiring?

FACTS

The taxpayer is a public utility telephone company subject to the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) and the State A Public Service Commission (PSC). Taxpayer made a valid election to account for the investment tax credit (ITC) under a special rule for ratable flow-through as provided by section 46(f)(2) of the Internal Revenue Code (prior to 1975, this section was designated 46(e)(2)). This election has been consistently followed in maintaining taxpayer's regulated books of account and in determining utility rates.

On March 31, 1981, the FCC issued a rate order (effective October 1, 1981) that amended the Uniform System of Accounts. The order changed the accounting treatment of certain station connection costs previously capitalized in Account 232, Station Connections. As a result of this change, certain future station connection costs associated with inside wiring were no longer to be capitalized but were to be charged to Account 605, Installation and Repairs of Station Equipment, and expensed in the year incurred. State A PSC, pursuant to FCC procedure, issued a rate order requiring the taxpayer and other public utility telephone companies to change their accounting treatment of the cost of inside wiring for ratemaking purposes from capitalization to expensing.

Rev. Rul. 84–24, 1984–1 C.B. 89, considered a factual situation similar to that described above and found the inside wiring to be an identifiable asset with a useful life beyond the current year. That ruling therefore holds that the cost of the inside wiring must be capitalized under section 263 of the Code and recovered under the provisions of section 168.

In compliance with Rev. Rul. 84–24, the taxpayer capitalized the cost of inside wiring for federal tax purposes. As required, however, by the State A PSC, the taxpayer expensed these costs. The cost of service in the year of the expense was reduced by the ITC allowable with respect to those costs.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 46(f)(1) of the Code provides a general rule that no credit will be allowed by section 38 for public utility property: (A) if the taxpayer's cost of service for ratemaking purposes is reduced by reason of any portion of the credit allowed by section 38; or (B) if the taxpayer's rate base is reduced for ratemaking purposes by reason of any portion of the credit allowable by section 38 and such reduction in rate base is not restored or is restored less rapidly than ratably.

Section 46(f)(2) of the Code provides a special rule that, if the taxpayer makes an election under section 46(f)(2), the general rule of section 46(f)(1) does not apply, but no credit will be allowed by section 38 with respect to any public utility property: (A) if the taxpayer's cost of service for ratemaking purposes or in its regulated books of account is reduced by more than a ratable portion of the credit allowable by section 38, or (B) if the taxpayer's rate base is reduced by reason of any portion of the credit allowable by section 38.

Section 46(f)(6) of the Code provides that for purposes of determining ratable portions, the period of time used in computing depreciation expense for purposes of reflecting operating results in the taxpayer's regulated books of account shall be used.

Section 1.46–6(g)(2) of the Income Tax Regulations provides that what is "ratable" is determined by considering the period of time actually used in computing the taxpayer's regulated depreciation expense for the property for which a credit is allowed. "Regulated depreciation expense" is the depreciation expense for the property used by a regulatory body for purposes of establishing the taxpayer's cost of service for ratemaking purposes.

Section 1.46–6(b)(2) of the regulations defines "cost of service" as the amount required by a taxpayer to provide regulated goods or services. Cost of service includes operating expenses (including salaries, cost of materials, etc.) maintenance expenses, depreciation expenses, tax expenses, and interest expenses.

Section 1.46–6(b)(3) of the regulations defines "rate base" as the monetary amount that is multiplied by a rate of return to determine the permitted return on investment.

As is stated above, Rev. Rul. 84–24 holds that the cost charged to the inside wiring account of a public telephone company is a capital expenditure under section 263 of the Code and must be recovered under section 168.

In accounting for the ITC under section 46(f)(2) of the Code, the utility's cost of service for ratemaking purposes may be reduced by no more than a ratable portion of the credit allowed by section 38. Section 1.46–6(g)(2) of the regulations provides that the "ratable" portion is determined by considering the period of time actually used in computing the depreciation expense for the property for the purpose of establishing the taxpayer's cost of service for ratemaking purposes. In the present situation, the requirement to expense the cost of inside wiring in the year incurred for ratemaking purposes is not a method of depreciation. Thus, for purposes of section 1.46–6(g)(2) it is not immediately obvious what period of time should be treated as being used in computing the taxpayer's regulated depreciation expense. However, the essence of ratable flow-through under the sections of Code and regulations cited above is to match the periods in which the ITC reduces cost of service with the periods in which cost of service is increased by the cost of the item that gives rise to the credit. This principle can be applied not only when the item is depreciated for regulatory purposes but also when it is expensed. Therefore, the ratable flow-through limitation is satisfied if the investment tax credit is used to reduce cost of service in the same period that cost of service is increased by expensing the item that gives rise to the credit. If the cost of service is increased for ratemaking purposes by the total cost of the item in the year the item is placed in service, the full amount of the ITC may be used to reduce the cost of service in that year. However, if less than the total cost of the item is expensed in a single year for ratemaking purposes, no more than a proportionate part of the full ITC for that item may be used to reduce the cost of service in that year.

HOLDING

The taxpayer does not violate the ratable flow-through requirements of section 46(f)(2) of the Code when for regulatory purposes it expenses the cost of inside wiring and, in the year of the expense, reduces cost of service by the full amount of ITC allowable with respect to the inside wiring.

Whether, if a telephone public utility taxpayer elected to account for investment credit under section 46(f)(2) of the Code, the ratable flow-through requirements of that section are violated where, for regulatory purposes, the taxpayer expenses the cost of inside wiring and reduces the cost of service in that accounting period by the amount of investment tax credit allowable with respect to the inside wiring. TITLE 26—INTERNAL REVENUE,—
CHAPTER I, SUBCHAPTER A,—
INCOME TAX PART I—INCOME TAX; TAXABLE YEARS BEGINNING AFTER DECEMBER 31, 1953; PART 602—
OMB CONTROL NUMBERS UNDER THE PAPERWORK REDUCTION ACT

Cooperative Hospital Service Organizations

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Final regulations.

SUMMARY: This document contains final regulations relating to the treatment of certain cooperative hospital service organizations. Changes to the applicable tax law were made by the Revenue and Expenditure Control Act of 1968 and by the Tax Reform Act of 1976. The final regulations provide the public with the guidance needed to comply with those Acts and affect organizations seeking to qualify for tax exempt status as organizations described in section 501(e).

DATES: The regulations are effective generally for taxable years ending after June 28, 1968. In the case of an organization performing clinical services, the regulations are effective for taxable years ending after December 31, 1976. However, pursuant to the grant of section 7805(b) relief, an organization that has received a ruling or determination letter recognizing it as exempt under section 501(e) has 120 days from the date of publication of these regulations in the FEDERAL REGISTER to conform its operations to the requirements of the regulations.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT: Sylvia F. Hunt or Harry Beker of the Employee Plans and Exempt Organizations Division, Office of the Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service, 1111 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20224 (Attention CC:EE) (202–566–6212).

SUPPLEMENTAL INFORMATION: BACKGROUND

On January 11, 1984, the Internal Revenue Service published proposed regulations in the FEDERAL REGISTER to amend the Income Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 1) under sections 170 and 501 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (49 FR 1384) [1984–1 C.B. 559]. By notice published in the FEDERAL REGISTER on March 26, 1984 (49 FR 11186), the public was invited to comment orally upon the issues addressed in the proposals. A public hearing was held on May 31, 1984.

This document contains final regulations under sections 170(b)(1)(A) and 501(e). These regulations are issued to conform the regulations to section 109(a) of the Revenue and Expenditure Control Act of 1968 (82 Stat. 269) and section 1312(a) of the Tax Reform Act of 1976 (90 Stat. 1730) and are issued under the authority contained in section 7805 of the Code (68A Stat. 917; 26 USC 7805).

COMMENTS AND REVISIONS

After consideration of all comments received regarding the proposed regulations, those proposed regulations are adopted, as revised, by this Treasury decision.

Several comments indicated uncertainty as to the meaning of certain of the provisions in the proposed regulations and requested clarification of the positions announced. These recommendations have generally been adopted and are reflected in the final regulations. Thus, for example, an allocation will be deemed sufficient if it consists of bookkeeping entries and written notice to the patron-hospitals; retention of net earnings may be based on the reasonably anticipated needs of the organization; permissible sources of investment income (particularly with respect to rents) have been clarified; radiology services are specifically included within the term "clinical"; and the term "voting rights" of patron-hospitals has been defined.

Other comments recommended more extensive changes concerning accounting and operation practices. These changes, it was noted, would allow greater flexibility for cooperative hospital service organizations. Where these recommendations are neither contrary to the statutory language nor inconsistent with Congressional intent, they have been incorporated in the final regulations. Thus, for example, capital contributions have been excluded from the definition of "net earnings" and need not satisfy the allocation and payment rules; the status of membership dues and related membership assessments, gifts and grants has been clarified; certain income derived from sources that are incidental to the conduct of exempt purposes or functions has been deemed permissible; a section 501(e) organization may own stock in and receive dividends from certain public corporations where such ownership is a condition for obtaining credit; de minimis services to other than patron-hospitals where mandated by a governmental unit as a condition for operating in a particular jurisdiction, or for other reasons, has been deemed permissible; and the effective date provision has been modified for a period sufficient to permit organizations that have already been recognized as exempt under section 501(e) to modify their operations to bring them into conformance with the requirements of the final regulations.

Certain comments, however, recommended changes that would permit cooperative hospital service organizations to engage in practices that are either beyond the scope of or directly contrary to the statutory language of section 501(e). Those recommendations were also inconsistent with the holding of HCSC—Laundry v. United States, 450 US 1 (1981). Accordingly, the final regulations do not incorporate recommendations that would, for example, permit a section 501(e) organization to engage in unrelated trade or business so long as those activities do not become the organization's primary purpose; establish wholly owned for-profit subsidiaries; generally sell services to other than patron-hospitals; engage in any services which are identified by the organization as cost-effective if performed centrally; or pay dividends on the organization's capital stock.

Conforming changes are also made under §1.170A–9(c)(1) and §1.501(k)–1 of the Income Tax Regulations.

NONAPPLICABILITY OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 12291

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has determined that this Regulation is not a major rule as defined in Executive Order 12291. Accordingly, a Regulatory Impact Analysis is not required.

REGULATORY FLEXIBILITY ACT

The Internal Revenue Service has concluded that the regulations herein are interpretative and that the notice and public procedure requirements of 5 USC 553 do not apply. Accordingly, these regulations do not constitute regulations subject to the Regulatory Flexibility Act (5 USC chapter 6).

PAPERWORK REDUCTION ACT

The collection of information requirements contained in this regulation has been submitted to the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) in accordance with the requirements of the Paperwork Reduction Act of 1980. These requirements have been approved by OMB under control number 1545–0814.

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal author of these regulations is Harry Beker of the Employee Plans and Exempt Organizations Division of the Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, personnel from other offices of the Internal Revenue Service and Treasury Department participated in developing the regulations, both on matters of substance and style.

Adoption of amendments to the regulations

Accordingly, the amendments to 26 CFR Parts 1 and 602 published as a notice of proposed rulemaking in the FEDERAL REGISTER on January 11, 1984 (49 FR 1384) are hereby adopted, as amended, to read as follows:

Paragraph 1. The authority citation for part 1 continues to read as follows:

Authority: 26 U.S.C. 7805

Par. 2. Paragraph (c)(1) of §1.170A–9 is revised to read as follows:

§1.170A–9 Definition of section 170(b)(1)(A) organization.

* * * * *

(c) Hospitals and medical research organizations—(1) Hospitals. An organization (other than one described in subparagraph (2) of this paragraph) is described in section 170(b)(1)(A)(iii) if:

(i) It is a hospital, and

(ii) Its principal purpose or function is the providing of medical or hospital care or medical education or medical research.

The term "hospital" includes (A) Federal hospitals and (B) State, county, and municipal hospitals which are instrumentalities of governmental units referred to in section 170(c)(1) and otherwise come within the definition. A rehabilitation institution, outpatient clinic, or community mental health or drug treatment center may qualify as a "hospital" within the meaning of subdivision (i) of this subparagraph if its principal purpose or function is the providing of hospital or medical care. For purposes of this subdivision, the term "medical care" shall include the treatment of any physical or mental disability or condition, whether on an inpatient or outpatient basis, provided the cost of such treatment is deductible under section 213 by the person treated. An organization, all the accommodations of which qualify as being part of a "skilled nursing facility" within the meaning of 42 USC 1395x(j), may qualify as a "hospital" within the meaning of subdivision (i) of this subparagraph if its principal purpose or function is the providing of hospital or medical care. For taxable years ending after June 28, 1968, the term "hospital" also includes cooperative hospital service organizations which meet the requirements of section 501(e) and §1.501(e)–1. The term "hospital" does not, however, include convalescent homes or homes for children or the aged, nor does the term include institutions whose principal purpose or function is to train handicapped individuals to pursue some vocation. An organization whose principal purpose or function is the providing of medical education or medical research will not be considered a "hospital" within the meaning of subdivision (i) of this subparagraph, unless it is also actively engaged in providing medical or hospital care to patients on its premises or in its facilities, on an inpatient or outpatient basis, as an integral part of its medical education or medical research functions. See, however, subparagraph (2) of this paragraph with respect to certain medical research organizations.

Par. 3. Section 1.501(e)–1 is redesignated as §1.501(k)–1.

Par. 4. The following new section is added immediately after §1.501(d)–1:

§1.501(e)–1 Cooperative hospital service organizations.

(a) General rule. Section 501(e) is the exclusive and controlling section under which a cooperative hospital service organization can qualify as a charitable organization. A cooperative hospital service organization which meets the requirements of section 501(e) and this section shall be treated as an organization described in section 501(c)(3), exempt from taxation under section 501(a), and referred to in section 170(b)(1)(A)(iii) (relating to percentage limitations on charitable contributions). In order to qualify for tax exempt status, a cooperative hospital service organization must—

(1) Be organized and operated on a cooperative basis,

(2) Perform, on a centralized basis, only one or more specifically enumerated services which, if performed directly by a tax exempt hospital, would constitute activities in the exercise or performance of the purpose or function constituting the basis for its exemption, and

(3) Perform such service or services solely for two or more patron-hospitals as described in paragraph (d) of this section.

(b) Organized and operated on a cooperative basis— (1) In general. In order to meet the requirements of section 501(e), the organization must be organized and operated on a cooperative basis (whether or not under a specific statute on cooperatives) and must allocate or pay all of its net earnings within 8½ months after the close of the taxable year to its patron-hospitals on the basis of the percentage of its services performed for each patron. To "allocate" its net earnings to its patron-hospitals, the organization must make appropriate bookkeeping entries and provide timely written notice to each patron-hospital disclosing to the patron-hospital the amount allocated to it on the books of the organization. For the record-keeping requirements of a section 501(e) organization, see §1.521–1(a)(1).

(2) Percentage of services defined. The percentage of services performed for each patron-hospital may be determined on the basis of either the value or the quantity of the services provided by the organization to the patron-hospital, provided such basis is realistic in terms of the actual cost of the services to the organization.

(3) Retention of net earnings. Exemption will not be denied a cooperative hospital service organization solely because the organization, instead of paying all net earnings to its patron-hospitals, retains an amount for such purposes as retiring indebtedness, expanding the services of the organization, or for any other necessary purpose and allocates such amounts to its patrons. However, such funds may not be accumulated beyond the reasonably anticipated needs of the organization. See, §1.537–1(b). Whether there is an improper accumulation of funds depends upon the particular circumstances of each case. Moreover, where an organization retains net earnings for necessary purposes, the organization's records must show each patron's rights and interests in the funds retained. For purposes of this paragraph, the term "net earnings" does not include capital contributions to the organization and such contributions need not satisfy the allocation or payment requirements.

(4) Nonpatronage and other income. An organization described in section 501(e) may, in addition to net earnings, receive membership dues and related membership assessment fees, gifts, grants and income from nonpatronage sources such as investment of retained earnings. However, such an organization cannot be exempt if it engages in any business other than that of providing the specified services, described in paragraph (c), for the specified patron-hospitals, described in paragraph (d). Thus, an organization described in section 501(e) generally cannot have unrelated business taxable income as defined in section 512, although it may earn certain interest, annuities, royalties, and rents which are excluded from unrelated business taxable income because of the modifications contained in sections 512(b)(1), (2) or (3). An organization described in section 501(e) may, however, have debt-financed income which is treated as unrelated business taxable income solely because of the applicability of section 514. In addition, exempt status under section 501(e) will not be affected where rent from personal property leased with real property is treated as unrelated business taxable income under section 512(b)(3)(A)(ii) solely because the rent attributable to the personal property is more than incidental or under section 512(b)(3)(B)(i) solely because the rent attributable to the personal property exceeds 50 percent of the total rent received or accrued under the lease. Exemption will not be affected solely because the determination of the amount of rent depends in whole or in part on the income or profits derived from the property leased. See, section 512(b)(3)(B))(ii). An organization described in section 501(e) may also derive nonpatronage income from sources that are incidental to the conduct of its exempt purposes or functions. For example, income derived from the operation of a cafeteria or vending machines primarily for the convenience of its employees or the disposition of by-products in substantially the same state they were in on completion of the exempt function (e.g., the sale of silver waste produced in the processing of x-ray film) will not be considered unrelated business taxable income. See, section 513(a)(2) and §1.513–1(d)(4)(ii). The nonpatronage and other income permitted under this subparagraph (4) must be allocated or paid as provided in subparagraph (1) or retained as provided in subparagraph (3).

(5) Stock ownership—(i) Capital stock of organization. An organization does not meet the requirements of section 501(e) unless all of the organization's outstanding capital stock, if there is such stock, is held solely by its patron-hospitals. However, no amount may be paid as dividends on the capital stock of the organization. For purposes of the preceding sentence, the term "capital stock" includes common stock (whether voting or nonvoting), preferred stock, or any other form evidencing a proprietary interest in the organization.

(ii) Stock ownership as a condition for obtaining credit. If by statutory requirement a cooperative hospital service organization must be a shareholder in a United States or state chartered corporation as a condition for obtaining credit from that corporate-lender, the ownership of shares and the payment of dividends thereon will not for such reason be a basis for the denial of exemption to the organization. See, e.g., National Consumer Cooperative bank, 12 USC §3001 et seq.

(c) Scope of services—(1) Permissible services. An organization meets the requirements of section 501(e) only if the organization performs, on a centralized basis, one or more of the following services and only such services: data processing, purchasing (including the purchasing and dispensing of drugs and pharmaceuticals to patron-hospitals), warehousing, billing and collection, food, clinical (including radiology), industrial engineering (including the installation, maintenance and repair of biomedical and similar equipment), laboratory, printing, communications, record center, and personnel (including recruitment, selection, testing, training, education and placement of personnel) services. An organization is not described in section 501(e) if, in addition to or instead of one or more of these specified services, the organization performs any other service (other than services referred to under paragraph (b)(4) that are incidental to the conduct of exempt purposes or functions).

(2) Illustration. The provisions of this subparagraph may be illustrated by the following example.

Example. An organization performs industrial engineering services on a cooperative basis solely for patron-hospitals each of which is an organization described in section 501(c)(3) and exempt from taxation under section 501(a). However, in addition to this service, the organization operates laundry services for its patron-hospitals. This cooperative organization does not meet the requirements of this paragraph because it performs laundry services not specified in this paragraph.

(d) Patron-hospitals—(1) Defined. Section 501(e) only applies if the organization performs its services solely for two or more patron-hospitals each of which is—

(i) An organization described in section 501(c)(3) which is exempt from taxation under section 501(a),

(ii) A constituent part of an organization described in section 501(c)(3) which is exempt from taxation under section 501(a) and which, if organized and operated as a separate entity, would constitute an organization described in section 501(c)(3), or

(iii) Owned and operated by the United States, a State, the District of Columbia, or a possession of the United States, or a political subdivision or an agency or instrumentality of any of the foregoing.

(2) Business with nonvoting patron-hospitals. Exemption will not be denied a cooperative hospital service organization solely because the organization (whether organized on a stock or membership basis) transacts business with patron-hospitals which do not have voting rights in the organization and therefore do not participate in the decisions affecting the operation of the organization. Where the organization has both patron-hospitals with voting rights and patron-hospitals without such rights, the organization must provide at least 50 percent of its services to patron-hospitals with voting rights in the organization. Thus, the percentage of services provided to nonvoting patrons may not exceed the percentage of such services provided to voting patrons. A patron-hospital will be deemed to have voting rights in the cooperative hospital service organization if the patron-hospital may vote directly on matters affecting the operation of the organization or if the patron-hospital may vote in the election of cooperative board members. Notwithstanding that an organization may have both voting and nonvoting patron-hospitals, patronage refunds must nevertheless be allocated or paid to all patron-hospitals solely on the basis specified in paragraph (b) of this section.

(3) Services to other organizations. An organization does not meet the requirements of section 501(e) if, in addition to performing services for patron-hospitals (entities described in subdivisions (i), (ii) or (iii) of subparagraph (1)), the organization performs any service for any other organization. For example, a cooperative hospital service organization is not exempt if it performs services for convalescent homes for children or the aged, vocational training facilities for the handicapped, educational institutions which do not provide hospital care in their facilities, and proprietary hospitals. However, the provision of the specified services between or among cooperative hospital service organizations meeting the requirements of section 501(e) and this section is permissible. Also permissible is the provision of the specified services to entities which are not patron-hospitals, but only if such services are de minimis and are mandated by a governmental unit as, for example, a condition for licensing.

(e) Effective dates. An organization, other than an organization performing clinical services, may meet the requirements of section 501(e) and be a tax exempt organization for taxable years ending after June 28, 1968. An organization performing clinical services may meet the requirements of section 501(e) and be a tax exempt organization for taxable years ending after December 31, 1976. However, pursuant to the authority contained in section 7805(b) of the Internal Revenue Code, these regulations shall not become effective with respect to an organization which has received a ruling or determination letter from the Internal Revenue Service recognizing its exemption under section 501(e) January 2, 1987.

Section 636.—Income Tax Treatment of Mineral Production Payments

26 CFR 1.636–3: Definitions.

Mineral production payments; advance for interest in unproven property. If an investor advances money to an oil and gas producer for the right to the lesser of twice the amount advanced or a certain percentage of net proceeds from the sale of hydrocarbons produced from a particular property, and the only indication that hydrocarbons will be produced from the property is favorable geological and geophysical studies, the advanced money will be treated as consideration for a royalty interest.

Rev. Rul. 86–119

ISSUE

If an investor advances money to an oil and gas producer for the right to the lesser of (a) twice the amount advanced or (b) y percent of the net proceeds from the sale of any hydrocarbons that are produced from a leased area that is not yet producing hydrocarbons, is the money treated, for federal income tax purposes, as consideration for a production payment or as consideration for a royalty interest? The answer to this question is determined by whether favorable geological and geophysical studies (G&G), in the absence of other facts that indicate the presence of oil or gas, such as adjacent hydrocarbon production, can be sufficient to underlie a reasonable expectation that no less than a specified sum will be paid out before the expiration of the lease.

FACTS

Z, an oil and gas producer, owns an undivided operating interest in a non-producing oil and gas lease on the continental shelf. Z believes, on the basis of geological and geophysical studies, that there is a high probability of finding hydrocarbons under the leased area. Aside from these studies, there are no factors indicating the presence of oil or gas. No exploratory wells have been drilled on the subject lease, nor have any successful exploratory wells been drilled on adjacent tracts.

Z entered into an agreement with Investor A, who advanced 10*x* dollars to Z, none of which was pledged for development of the property. Z will reimburse A by paying A y percent of the net monthly proceeds accruinng to Z from the sale of any hydrocarbons that are produced from the leased area until 20*x* dollars is received by A. No other reimbursement will be made to A.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 636(a) of the Internal Revenue Code provides, generally, that a production payment carved out of mineral property will be treated, for income tax purposes, as if it were a mortgage loan on the property and will not qualify as an economic interest in the mineral property.

Section 1.636–3(a)(1) of the Income Tax Regulations provides that the term "production payment" means, in general, a right to a specified share of the production from mineral in place (if, as, and when produced), or the proceeds from such production. Such right must have an expected economic life (at the time of its creation) of shorter duration than the economic life of one or more of the mineral properties burdened thereby. A right to mineral in place has an economic life of shorter duration than the economic life of a mineral property burdened thereby only if such right may not reasonably be expected to extend in substantial amounts over the entire productive life of such mineral property. A production payment may be limited by a dollar amount, a quantum of mineral, or a period of time.

United States v. Morgan, 321 F.2d 781 (5th Cir. 1963), considered a retained right to a sum of money that was payable solely out of a specified percentage of mineral produced from a mineral property. The court held that such a right constitutes a production payment only if (1) an ordinarily prudent person dealing in mineral lands and leases could reasonably expect, at the time of creation of the right, that the specified sum will be paid out before the expiration of the lease, and (2) at the time of the creation of the right, the person retaining the right had such an expectation. Otherwise, the retained right is a royalty.

United States v. Foster, 324 F.2d 702 (5th Cir. 1963), held that, in appropriate circumstances, such expectation can reasonably be formed even though the burdened property is not yet producing any minerals. Although the burdened property at issue in that case was nonproducing, there was production on adjoining property, and 11.11 acres of adjoining property were included in a producing unit established by the Louisiana Commission of Conservation. The court found that it could have been, and must have been, predicted with reasonable accuracy at the time the retained right in that case was created that the right would be paid out before exhaustion of the burdened property. The court, therefore, concluded that the retained right was an oil payment and not a royalty.

In the instant case, no oil or gas had been found on the leased area or the adjacent tracts. When A's right to proceeds from the production and sale of hydrocarbons was created, there were no factors (other than favorable geological and geophysical studies) that indicated the presence of oil or gas. Therefore, it could not have been reasonably expected that the specified sum of 20*x* dollars would be paid out before expiration of the lease. In light of the degree of uncertainty that still attaches to predictions based solely on geological and geophysical studies, Z cannot demonstrate that the right to proceeds conveyed to A was, at the time of its creation, reasonably expected to have an economic life of shorter duration than the economic life of the burdened mineral property. See Morgan. Thus, the economic life requirement of section 1.636–3(a) of the regulations is not met. The present case is distinguishable from Foster because in Foster there was production on property adjoining the burdened property. Accordingly, A's right to proceeds cannot be treated as a production payment.

HOLDING

The money advanced to Z for the right to y percent of the net proceeds from the sale of any hydrocarbons that are produced from the leased area described above is, for federal income tax purposes, consideration for sale of a royalty interest.

Section 6051I—Returns Relating to Cash Received in a Trade or Business

26 CFR 1.6051I–1: Returns relating to cash in excess of $10,000 received in a trade or business.

T.D. 8098

TITLE 26.—INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE—CHAPTER I, SUBCHAPTER A, PART 1—INCOME TAX; TAXABLE YEARS BEGINNING AFTER DECEMBER 31, 1953
PART 602—OMB CONTROL NUMBERS UNDER THE PAPERWORK REDUCTION ACT

Returns Relating To Cash Payments In Excess of $10,000 Received In A Trade or Business

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Final regulations.

SUMMARY: This document contains final regulations relating to the requirement of reporting cash in excess of $10,000 received in a trade or business. Changes to the applicable law were made by the Tax Reform Act of 1984. The regulations affect any person who, in the course of a trade or business in which such person is engaged, receives cash in excess of $10,000 in 1 transaction (or 2 or more related transactions). The regulations provide these persons with the guidance necessary to comply with the law.

DATES: The regulations apply to cash payments received after December 31, 1984.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTRACT: Arthur E. Davis of the Legislation and Regulations Division, Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service, 1111 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20224 (Attention: CC:LR:T), 202-566-3238, not a toll-free call.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: BACKGROUND

On May 23, 1985, the FEDERAL REGISTER published temporary regulations (T.D. 8025; 50 FR 21239) [1985–1 C.B. 348] and proposed amendments (50 FR 21308) to the Income Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 1) under section 6050I of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954. These amendments were proposed to conform the regulations to section 146 of the Tax Reform Act of 1984 (P.L. 98–369, 98 Stat. 685). Twenty-eight written comments responding to this notice were received.

On September 19, 1985, a public hearing concerning these proposed regulations was held. Nine commentators spoke at this hearing. After consideration of all written comments and oral comments received at the public hearing regarding the proposed amendments those amendments are adopted as revised by this Treasury decision.

PUBLIC COMMENTS

Section 6050I provides that an information return must be made by any person engaged in a trade or business who receives, in the course of that trade or business, cash in excess of $10,000 in 1 transaction (or 2 or more related transactions). Several comments were received suggesting that an exception to the reporting requirements be established for attorney's fees. Because section 6050I and the legislative history to section 6050I make no provision for an exception of this type, the final regulations do not adopt the suggestion.

Several commentators requested that the regulations provide that each betting window at a pari-mutuel racetrack be considered a separate recipient for purposes of the reporting requirement. The proposed regulations included a rule which generally reached that result. The final regulations clarify this rule by adding an example illustrating that betting windows at a pari-mutuel racetrack are separate recipients if in the ordinary course of business the operator of each betting window does not have reason to know the identity of persons making wagers at other betting windows.

Question and answer 12 of the proposed regulations provided rules for reporting multiple cash payments relating to the same transaction. The final regulations adopt those rules without change. However, because of compliance concerns, the Internal Revenue Service is considering amending those rules to require, under the authority of section 6050I(b)(2)(D), reporting of the total amount of cash paid in multiple payments relating to the same transaction. If the Service issues a rule requiring the reporting of the total amount of cash in a transaction, the rule will apply prospectively only and there will be an opportunity for public comment on the rule.

SPECIAL ANALYSIS

Although a notice of proposed rulemaking soliciting public comments was issued, the Internal Revenue Service concluded when the notice was issued that the regulations are interpretative and that the notice and public procedure requirements of 5 U.S.C. 553 do not apply. Accordingly, these regulations are not subject to the Regulatory Flexibility Act (5 U.S.C. Chapter 6). The Treasury Department has determined that these final regulations are not major rules under Executive Order 12291 or the Treasury and OMB implementation of the Order dated April 29, 1983. Accordingly, a Regulatory Impact Analysis is not required.

PAPERWORK REDUCTION ACT

The collection of information requirements contained in these regulations have been submitted to the Office of Management and Budget ("OMB") in accordance with the requirements of the Paperwork Reduction Act of 1980. These requirements have been approved by OMB.

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal author of these regulations is Bruce H. Jurist of the Legislation and Regulations Division of the Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, other personnel in the Internal Revenue Service and Treasury Department participated in developing the regulations on matters of both substance and style.

Adoption of amendments to the regulations

Accordingly, 26 CFR Part 1 and Part 602 are amended as follows:

INCOME TAX REGULATIONS
(26 CFR Part 1)

Paragraph 1. The authority for Part 1 is amended by adding the following citation:

Authority: 26 U.S.C. 7805 * * * Section 1.6050I–1 also issued under 26 U.S.C. 6050I.

Par. 2. The following new §1.6050I–1 shall be added at the appropriate place.

§1.6050I–1 Returns relating to cash in excess of $10,000 received in a trade or business.

(a) Reporing requirement—(1) In genera.. Any person (as defined in section 7701(a)(1)) who, in the course of a trade or business in which such person is engaged, receives cash in excess of $10,000 in 1 transaction (or 2 or more related transactions) shall, except as otherwise provided, make a return of information with respect to the receipt of cash.

(2) Cash received for the account of another. Cash in excess of $10,000 received by a person for the account of another must be reported under this section. Thus, for example, a person who collects delinquent accounts receivable for an automobile dealer must report with respect to the receipt of cash in excess of $10,000 from the collection of a particular account even though the proceeds of the collection are credited to the account of the automobile dealer (i.e., where the rights to the proceeds from the account are retained by the automobile dealer and the collection is made on a fee-for-service basis).

(3) Cash received by agents—(i) General rule. Except as provided in paragraph (a)(3)(ii) of this section, a person who in the course of a trade or business acts as an agent (or in some other similar capacity) and receives cash in excess of $10,000 from a principal, must report the receipt of cash under this section.

(ii) Exception. An agent who receives cash from a principal and uses all of the cash within 15 days in a cash transaction (the "second cash transaction") which is reportable under section 6050I or section 5312 of Title 31 of the United States Code and the regulations thereunder (31 CFR Part 103), and who discloses the name, address, and taxpayer identification number of the principal to the recipient in the second cash transaction need not report the initial receipt of cash under this section. An agent will be deemed to have met the disclosure requirements of this paragraph (a)(3)(ii) if the agent discloses only the name of the principal and the agent knows that the recipient has the principal's address and taxpayer identification number.

(iii) Example. The following example illustrates the application of the rules in paragraphs (a)(3)(i) and (ii) of this section:

Example. B, the principal, gives D, an attorney, $75,000 in cash to purchase real property on behalf of B. Within 15 days D purchases real property for cash from E, a real estate developer, and discloses to E, B's name, address, and taxpayer identification number. Because the transaction qualifies for the exception provided in paragraph (a)(3)(ii) of this section, D need not report with respect to the initial receipt of cash under this section. The exception does not apply, however, if D pays E by means other than cash, or effects the purchase more than 15 days following receipt of the cash from B, or fails to disclose B's name, address, and taxpayer identification number (assuming D does not know that E already has B's address and taxpayer identification number), or purchases the property from a person whose sale of the property is not in the course of that person's trade or business. In any such case, D is required to report the receipt of cash from B under this section.

(b) Multiple payments. The receipt of cash deposits or cash installment payments (or other similar payments or prepayments) relating to a single transaction (or two or more related transactions) are reported under this section in different manners depending on the dollar amounts of the initial and subsequent payments. Reporting of multiple payments is effected as follows:

(1) Initial and subsequent payments in excess of $10,000. If the initial payment exceeds $10,000 and any subsequent payment exceeds $10,000, the recipient must report each payment that exceeds $10,000. These payments must be reported separately (or if the payments are made less than 15 days apart, the recipient may (if it so elects) make a single report with respect to such payments).

(2) Initial payment only in excess of $10,000. If the initial payment exceeds $10,000 but no subsequent payment exceeds $10,000, the recipient must report
